RCAF Bomber, Nine-Man Crew Missing in North

HALIFAX (CP) — A fleet of 15 planes awaited clearing weather at dawn today to search for an RCAF Lancaster bomber and its nine-man crew, missing over the rocky wastes of Labrador while hunting for another plane.

The weather office here said westerly gales would sweep snowflurries across the area 120 miles southeast of Goose Bay where the crippled Lancaster disappeared Sunday in an attempt to return to the airport.

It was not known immediately whether United States Air Force planes would join the search, directed from Goose by Sqdn. Ldr. R. F. Epps of Winnipeg.

The air force said names of the crew members will be announced today after next of kin have been notified.

On Patrol at Time

The big four-engine bomber was patrolling the sea and land area between Goose Bay and Torbay airport, near St. John's, Nfld., when her skipper radioed that two motors had failed and he was trying to make it back to Goose.

The weather office said one of the season's sharpest fronts, or sudden weather changes, was moving across the district at the time.

The Lancaster was returning on a routine training flight from Keflavik, Iceland to her base at Greenwood, N. S., when she was diverted to Goose Bay to engage in a widespread hunt for a U. S. civilian plane and its two occupants which disappeared Friday on a flight from Goose Bay to Greenland.

A week-end criss-cross of the North Atlantic by seven aircraft failed to disclose a trace of the twin-engine Beechcraft plane.

Feb. 28 Deadline For Car Licences

TORONTO (CP)—The deadline for buying 1953 Ontario vehicle and driver's licences is Feb. 28, J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor vehicles, said today.

So far ony 50 per cent have renewed their drivers' licences and only 35 per cent have bought new licence plates.

Last year 1,289,829 vehicle licences and 1,533,702 drivers' licences were issued.

Royal Couple To Make World Tour

LONDON — (Reuters) — The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will take off on a round-the-world Commonwealth tour next November, Buckingham Palace announced tonight.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: The cold air over Ontario is being replaced this morning by southeasterly winds bringing warmed-up cold air from the United States. Skies will remain cloudy over most of Southern Ontario with some light snow expected in most southern regions today and tonight. This snow will be carried eastward by a weak slow-moving weather disturbance now located in Iowa.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower announced today he is ordering the United States 7th fleet to stop shielding Communist China and, in a surprise move, he invited Congress to disavow any Roosevelt-Truman "secret understandings" which permit enslavement of people anywhere.

At home, the new Republican president cautioned against tax cuts until a balanced budget is in sight and gave his blessing to the end of all price and wage controls when present authority for them expires on April 30.

Order Protected Enemy

Eisenhower said the present effect of the Truman order neutralizing the Chinese Nationalist island of Formosa is to protect the very Chinese Reds who are killing American soldiers in Korea.

"We certainly have no obligation," he said, "to protect a nation fighting us in Korea."

Eisenhower's mention of secret understandings referred to wartime conferences at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam attended by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman. Republicans long have attacked the two Democratic presidents for making secret agreements with the Russians at those conferences.

Only a portion of the agreements reached at the conferences were disclosed at the time. In 1947, the state department made public what it described as full texts of the agreements made with Premier Stalin.

Eisenhower spoke out in a "state of the union" message which brought him before a joint session of Congress for the first time since he took office.

Five Main Points

It was a far-ranging 8,500-word address in which the chief executive took "individual liberty" for his theme and—

1. Said near-balance of the budget, and with it the prospect of tax cuts, won't come in the immediate future. He pointed to the "inherited burden of indebtedness and obligations and deficits" which he said threaten to crash through the present public-debt ceiling of $275,000,000,000.

2. Predicted that with the end of controls some prices will go up and others will come down.

3. Said the United States has "incontrovertible evidence that Soviet Russia possesses atomic weapons." Former President Truman had stirred up a controversy by expressing doubt in a recent interview that the Russians had a workable A-bomb.

Unsuspected Poisons That Kill Little Children Given Battle by Scientist

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

Associated Press Science Reporter

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—A battle against unsuspected poisons that kill little children is being waged here by Dr. Morton J. Rodman of Rutgers University college of pharmacy.

The unsuspected poisons are seemingly harmless things which a child may swallow out of curiosity. Often, there's no label telling what chemicals they contain—no clue to an antidote.

So Rodman, a pharmacology professor, is compiling a checklist of products that have poisoned youngsters—and the antidotes—in an effort to cut down the annual toll of 600 youngsters dying from poisoning.

It covers things like cosmetics, perfectly safe when used externally but potentially fatal to a child exploring his mother's boudoir, things like metal polish, paint removers, insect repellents.

There's no foretelling what a child may take a fancy to drink, Rodman explains. If the contents aren't fully known, doctors lose precious time trying to learn what poison the child has taken and how to counteract it.

The idea for a list of contents of various commercial products, with antidotes if wrongly used, grew from calls from physicians to the pharmacy college asking for quick chemical analyses of products. Sometimes the college was able to give the answer in time.

Many poisoning fatalities could be avoided if all chemical products listed their ingredients, whether or not they were meant for internal use, Rodman says. That at least would supply a start toward treatment to counteract the poison.

Another phase of his campaign is telling women's groups of the hazards in some commonplace and seemingly safe products.

MILLION DOLLAR COLLINGWOOD FIRE BLOCK IS BURNED

Eight Brigades Fight Blaze for Four Hours

COLLINGOOD. (CP) — Damage estimates reached $1,000,000 in a fire which left four persons homeless and destroyed one of the town's largest buildings Sunday

The building ran for about 300 feet along the main thoroughfare. It contained stores and living quarters. Fire Chief Jack McCallister said the block and contents were worth "nearly a million." Earlier estimates placed damage at $500,000.

The fire raged for four hours before it was brought under control. Midway during the battle there was a lull and it was thought thecrisis had been passed. thought the crisis had been passed. later.

Mayor Denies Report

Mayor Grayson Kohl of Collingwood denied firemen left the scene during the lull and went for coffee. Previous reports said the blaze flared up while the men were away.

At one point the fire threatened to spread to adjoining buildings and dynamite was held in readiness. A platoon of firemen were almost caught in an avalanche of falling debris.

A defective oil heater in a storage room is believed to have started the fire.

Firemen from Owen Sound, Midland, Wasaga Beach, Elmvale, Stayner, Barrie, Camp Borden and Creemore battled for four hours before bringing the blaze under control for a second time.

They worked in zero temperatures and a heavy snow driven by a stiff wind. All but one of the hydrants near the fire were frozen and firemen had to use pumper trucks to relay water from the harbor of this Georgian Bay port.

Four stores, storage rooms and two second-storey apartments were destroyed. Flames threatened the post office for a time, but all mail and much equipment was carried away. Firemen kept nearby buildings wetted down.

Some local telephone lines were knocked out by falling debris and store windows across the street were cracked by heat.

One man suffered minor injuries when hit by a falling brick. Two couples, one newlywed, escaped from apartments above the stores.

After the alarm had been turned in, firemen were able to get water from one hydrant and within 30 minutes seemed to have the blaze in check.

ACTOR CURTIS DIES

NEW YORK (AP)—Movie actor Alan Curtis, 43, died Sunday a week after a kidney operation.

He had appeared in many films, among them "Between Two Women," "Bad Guy," "Mannequin," "Yellow Jack" and "Shopworn Angel."

Plane Reported Down In Atlantic With 39 Aboard

Crash Scene 359 Miles Off Gander Airport, Nfld.

HALIFAX (CP) — Strong gales and torrential rains probably will cancel search operations today for a British troop-ferrying aircraft with 39 persons aboard reported down in the icy north Atlantic.

A search and rescue official said an RCAF Lancaster bomber, lead aircraft of an 11-plane search fleet, was forced to return to Gander because of "turbulent gales and very heavy rains."

He said the other planes also were expected to turn back.

Two United States Coast Guard cutters were believed continuing through heavy seas to reach the crash scene, 359 miles east-southeast of Gander, where the missing four-engined York was bound from the Azores.

The Royal Canadian Air Force said the missing plane was last reported about 1:35 a.m. AST (12:35 a.m. EST) when the trans Atlantic communications centre at Gander picked up an SOS.

At that time the York, operated by Skyways of London, had completed about three-quarters of its over-water flight from the Azores.

Due at 5.30 A. M.

An official at the Gander weather office said the aircraft was due there about 5:30 a.m. Newfoundland time (4 a.m. EST). He said the flight probably originated at an airport near London, England, and was bound for Jamaica via Gander and Bermuda.

This weather office source said York aircraft normally carry a crew of "about half a dozen," indicating probably 33 passengers were aboard.

He said he had no information as to the trouble which caused the overdue plane to send its SOS.

Ordered Into Hunt

Planes from the United States coast guard base at Argentia, Nfld., and the RCAF's 404 and 405 squadrons at Greenwood, N.S., were ordered into the hunt. Two U.S. coast guard cutters raced to the area.

The cutter Yakutat, heading northwest from her usual weather station, reported to the coast guard at New York early today that she was in calm seas but expected to hit high choppy waves and winds up to 65 knots — almost 75 miles an hour—in the search area.

The cutter McCulloch was diverted to the search from a southbound voyage to Boston.

Gander said the weather where the plane was last reported was "very bad"—rough sea, icing conditions and poor visibility to handicap the search.

In General Vicinity

The cutter Yakutat's weather station—called "Delta" — is in the general vicinity of the York's last known position, almost dead on the great circle route which aircraft fly between Lagens airport in the Azores and Gander, the big war-built base in southeastern Newfoundland.

At 6 a. m. AST, one Lancaster search plane was reported to have left Torbay, Nfld., and five were preparing to leave from Greenwood. Another was to leave momentarily, carrying Sqdn. Ldr. L. H. Croft of West Summerland, B.C. appointed search master with headquarters at Gander.

Australians Will be Able To Insure Health of Family For 42 cts. Weekly in New Bill

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Australians will be able to insure their family's health for 42 cents a week under legislation to be introduced by the federal government this month.

Health Minister Sir Earle Page hopes his "better health" project will be in operation by May 1.

The government and approved hospital insurance organizations will meet most of the costs. But Australians will have to pay something towards it to prevent abuse by malingerers.

Page said the idea behind the new legislation was to encourage voluntary medical insurance and "help those who help themselves."

In many cases, he said, a family's hospital bill could be met by a contribution of 42 cents a week to an insurance organization. In return, the family would be insured for about 750 forms of medical treatment.

The new project is not expected to meet opposition from Australia's 6,000 general practitioners, who have already successfully prevented attempts to introduce a cradle-to-grave socialized national health service on British lines.

Pensioners and their dependents already receive free medical facilities from the federal government, which has sponsored many welfare projects for Australia's 7,000,000 population since the first old age pension was paid in 1909.

Invalid pensions came in 1910 and two years later maternity allowances were introduced. Nearly 200,000 expectant mothers now receive an average £12 yearly for each child born.

There is also a child endowment plan under which parents get the equivalent of a $1.12 weekly grant for every child under 16 apart from the first.

The federal social services budget, now running at about £180,000,000 a year—or £25 a head—also provides unemployment and sickness benefits and pensions for widows and wives whose husbands have either deserted them or are in jail.

Girl Student Shot to Death On Busy Street

STRATFORD (CP) —A young woman was shot to death today on a busy downtown street. Police said shortly afterwards they were questioning a paratrooper in connection with the shooting but they did not release his name.

The girl victim is reported to be Marilyn Satchell, about 17, an 11th. grade student at Stratford Collegiate. Her home is in the Gadshill district, about five miles from here.

The shooting occurred almost opposite the police station on Wellington Street, one of the city's business thoroughfares.

Witnesses said a man fired four pistol shots at the girl as she stood in front of a delicatessan store.

Four Reported Missing During Week-End, Home

TORONTO (CP)—Two men and two women, reported missing during the week-end, returned home Sunday night. Apparently they had gone out of town on a visit.

The four are Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Donovan and their daughter and son-in-law, Kay and Norman Bett.

The quartet went on a trip to Plainfield, 16 miles north of Belleville, without telling anyone. When told they had been the object of a search, they said they thought it was a joke.

DULLES MEETS FRENCH LEADERS TO SPUR UNITY

France Expresses Fear Over Formosan Policy

PARIS (AP) — John Foster Dulles, the United States secretary of state, met French leaders today with a spate of questions about France's reluctance to push for European unity.

The French, worried over President Eisenhower's reported decision to withdraw the U. S. 7th fleet's neutralization of Formosa, also were expected to ask some questions about this.

French foreign - office sources have said Foreign Minister Georges Bidault certainly will bring up the matter during his talks with Dulles and the U. S. foreign-aid chief, Harold Stassen.

Dulles and Stassen, making a flying 10-day tour of seven European capitals, were well prepared for the all-day session with the French, including President Vincent Auriol, premier Rene Mayer and Bidault.

Held Briefing Sessions

When they flew in from Rome Sunday, they hurried into briefing sessions with American officials and military leaders stationed in Europe.

Hopes Dimmed For Reprieve Of Convicted Man

HAMILTON. (CP) —Hopes of a last-minute reprieve for convicted murderer Harry Lee dimmed today. No reply to his counsel's appeal to Justice Minister Garson has been received.

Lee is scheduled to be hanged at midnight tonight for the June shooting of Mrs. Mary Rosenblat.

Affidavits from Dr. A. M. Doyle of Toronto and Dr. A. Newton-Brady of Hamilton, in which they stated they thought Lee was suffering from a mental disorder have been forwarded to Ottawa.

If Lee hangs it will be the first time the Barton Street jail execution chamber has been used since 1930.

PEACEFUL CITY

OSLO, Norway (CP) — Police Commissioner K. R. Welhaven says Oslo is the most peaceful city in Europe. He reports that not a single murder was committed in the Norwegian capital in 1952.

Studio Converts to Sound so Realistic, Fellow in 8th Row Can Kiss Marilyn

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Twentieth Century-Fox is converting at once to a big new photographic and sound system so realistic, a spokesman says, that "a guy in the eighth row can kiss Marilyn Monroe."

The device, cinemascope, creates a third-dimension illusion, the studio announced Sunday, and presages an era "as far-reaching as the transfer from silent pictures to sound in 1927."

Fox's method permits filming in color and projection on a screen 2½ times ordinary size "so as to give almost life-like animation to the players. This creates the same feeling of audience participation as attendance at a performance by living players on the speaking stage."

Screens specially developed for extra brilliance may be any length desired to fit any theatre. The screen used in tests at the studio is 64 feet wide and 25 feet high and curves inward to a depth of five feet at the centre

"Cinemascope is a simple, inexpensive color film device which simulates third dimension to the extent that objects and actors seem to be part of the audience. Its sound imparts additional life-like quality as it moves across the screen with the action," the studio said.

Cinemascope will be made available to all studios, producers and theatres in the United States and to producers and theatres throughout the world as soon as additional equipment can be manufactured."

Fox announced the first cinemascope film in color "The Robe," based on Lloyd C. Douglas' novel, goes into production Feb. 16, with premieres planned for Oct. 1.

Meanwhile, three dimension production is spreading through other studios.

Producers Bill Pine and Bill Thomas are shooting "Sangaree" in a two-camera three-dimension system developed by their releasing studio, Paramount. It requires viewers to wear polarized spectacles to get a three dimensional effect. So does the Natural Vision system, first used with the film "Bwana Devil."

Warner Brothers is shooting "House of Wax" in natural vision. Columbia starts "For Ticonderoga" in the same system in a week. M-G-M, with a similar system of its own, starts its first three-dimensional film, a western in three weeks. Universal-International is working on a system of its own,

England, Holland, Belgium Hard Hit By Driving Seas

Terrifying Hurricanes Cause Millions of Dollars Damage

LONDON (CP) — Mountainous new tides rolled in upon Europe's battered coasts today, bringing fresh peril to lands which have already counted more than 850 dead in a week-end of hurricane and flood. More than 1,000,000 were homeless in Britain, The Netherlands and Belgium.

Hundreds more were unaccounted for and it was feared the over-all toll might reach 1,500 when all bodies are recovered.

Towering waves pounded through ancient dikes at 70 places and covered a sixth of Holland with salt water, bringing the country its worst disaster since the 15th century. The Netherlands death toll, according to the best available count, mounted to 464.

Britain counted 397 dead, 250 in east-coast floods, 132 in the sinking of the ferry Princess Victoria, and 15 in the disappearance of a British trawler. Rescue workers feared the toll in England alone would mount to 1,000.

Belgium had 17 drownings and 10 others were lost at sea in the sinking of a Belgian trawler.

Muster Every Effort

All three countries mustered every effort—navy, army, relief workers of all kinds—to save thousands threatened by death or cold or disease and to aid millions more whose homes were destroyed. Property damage was in the millions of dollars.

The Thames river burst its banks at four new places today under the pile-driving force of the afternoon high tides, spreading more desolation. Hospitals at King's Lynn and Tilbury were flooded in part and isolated.

Scores of bodies floated among vast seas of debris on Britain's beaten coasts. There were corpses on rooftops of abandoned homes. One man paddled to safety on a table.

Snow Falling

Canvey Island, 25 miles down the Thames estuary from London reported at least 100 drowned and 500 missing. Snow began to fall there, adding to the misery of the flood victims.

A fleet of small boats made trip after trip into flooded Canvey, called 'The Island of Death.' Families huddled on rooftops awaiting rescue. They were taken to nearby Benfleet, a town of 17,000 that began to resemble a war refugee centre. Many families were wiped out or broken. Sobbing mothers searched for their children. Homeless tots clutching toys scanned faces for sight of parents or other kin.

The holes in the dikes in Holland were so big ferry boats could be driven through them—and one was. Up to 1,500 square miles of land were flooded.

Winds Reduced

At Stellendam, in south Holland, 70 persons were reported dead, out of a population of 1,919.

Sunday's 90-mile winds were reduced to 22 miles an hour today, but temperatures around zero added to the sum of human misery. Many crops of winter wheat were damaged, along with thousands of acres of rich soil.

In the Belgian port of Antwerp about 150 yards of docks crumbled into the Schelde estuary. Another 130 yards collapsed in the city proper. But the Belgians, not as badly hit as their Dutch neighbors, sent small boats to evacuate stranded Dutchmen.

Reds Refuse Go-to-Russia Alternative

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirteen convicted U.S. Communist leaders today were offered a choice, either go to Russia or to jail, but defence counsel promptly rejected the go-to-Russia alternative.

Federal Judge Edward J. Dimock put forward his unusual "probation plan" as the Red leaders were called into court for sentencing.

It would permit any of the defendants to go to Russia, instead of to an American prison, as a penalty for their conspiracy.

IDLE SHIPPING

OSLO, Norway (CP)—Because of a drop in ocean freight rates which have made operations unprofitable in many cases, Norwegian shipping companies have laid up 25 vessels with a total tonnage of 60,000 tons deadweight.

JANUARY CUSTOMS RETURNS HIGHER

An increase in customs returns of $76,796.29 over the same month last year was reported today for the month of January at the Belleville customs office. Returns for the month just past totalled $497,387.06, as compared with $420,590.77 for January last year.

OLD MAN WEATHER TAKES ON SUDDEN, CHILLING CHANGE

After giving every indication for several days that spring was surely on its way, Old Man Weather took on a sudden and chilling change late Saturday and by early Sunday morning the temperature had dropped nearly 40 degrees to near zero.

Early Saturday there was rain and the thermometer went up to 41 degrees during the day. Sunday morning it was just 2.6 above zero and snow-covered streets had turned into sheets of ice giving the city sanding department work to do.

The cold continued throughout the day on Sunday and this morning the mercury read just one degree above zero.

Former Hastings Teacher Principal Of New School

Former school teacher in rural Hastings, Samuel McMullen, B. A., who for the past 30 years has been principal of Central Public School in St. Catharines has been named principal of a new senior school in that city.

Born in Rawdon Township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George M. McMullen, he commenced teaching at Orser School in the 9th concession of Rawdon and then taught at Wellman's Corners before going to western Ontario where he took a school at Glencoe.

Mr. McMullen obtained his degree extra murally from Queen's University and earned his high school assistant's diploma at the Ontario College of Education. He is now doing post graduate work studying for his master of education degree.

The St. Catharines school principal is a brother of T. A. McMullen, Belleville. Another brother, George, lives at Springbrook and a third brother John at St. Catharines.

Child Knocked Down by Car, Not Badly Hurt

TRENTON (Special) — Patsy Derocher, two-and-a-half-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Derocher, 148 Bay Street, wandered away from her home yesterday and was knocked down by a car in front of Grace United Church several blocks away. Fortunately she suffered only a small cut inside her mouth caused by her teeth, probably the results of falling on the pavement.

Police are of the opinion that the little girl was knocked over by a driver unaware that the tot was there. A witness was not able to give a description of the car.

WEATHER WARMS UP

News from the weatherman is a little more encouraging after minimum temperatures taken at the Trenton Air Station last night hovered on the zero mark.

The duty forecaster predicts cloudy with light snow flurries for this afternoon ending tonight. It is estimated that the mercury will fall not lower than 15 degrees above.

The message for Tuesday is that skies will remain cloudy, there will be a few snowflurries with the temperature rising to 25 above.

DEPT. HAS PROOF

Ernie Cunnell of the Health Department has proof that this winter is milder than the one a year ago. His records show that on January 9, 1952, there was 10 inches of ice to test for purity before the Ellis brothers started their annual harvest. "If the cold weather continues I expect the ice cutters will be giving me a call to take this year's sample," Mr. Cunnell remarked.

Wheel-Chair Presented To Dutch Paraplegics

In answer to an appeal by the Dutch Consul for needy Dutch paraplegics, members of the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans in Canada, Branch 201, Belleville, recently presented a wheel chair to their Netherlands comrades at a special ceremony held in Ottawa.

Secretary Ken Edgecombe and executive member Jack Lundberg made the presentation to the Dutch consul.

The appeal was made during the recent ANAF convention held in Quebec where all branches agreed to present a chair to the needy veterans.

3 Cars Involved In Collision

Icy street conditions caused by Saturday night's light fall of snow were responsible for a series of minor motor accidents in the city during the week-end. At least ten motor mishaps were reported to police, only one of which resulted in any serious damage.

Close to $500 damage was caused to three vehicles in a chain reaction rear-end collision on Dundas St. East. Marion Mintz, 17, R.R. 4, Belleville, who was a passenger in one of the cars, received a small cut on the forehead and possible abdominal injury.

Edgar Cook, Winnipeg, C.N.R. Engineer, Retires

Edgar Cook, a C.N.R. engineer with a Belleville background, has retired in Winnipeg after more than 50 years of railroading.

Born here the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Purdy Cook, who lived on Charlotte Street, Mr. Cook has two sisters, Mrs. Irene Finn, 494 Park Street North, in Peterborough, and Mrs. Lena McIvor, Woodrow, Saskatchewan. His father was a constable on the Belleville force.

The retired engineer started his career with the Grand Trunk railway in 1902. His seniority record rates among those in the top handful of locomotive engineers in North America.

After serving four years in the Grand Trunk's express department, Mr. Cook went west as a fireman with the Canadian Northern Railway and held the same position until 1907. In 1908 he returned to the Grand Trunk Pacific and was promoted to locomotive engineer in 1910.

Since 1915, he has been with the C.N.R., operating out of Transcona, Manitoba, as locomotive engineer. Since 1939, his run has been between Redditt, Manitoba, and Winnipeg on the crack Continental Limited.

He was engineer of the pilot train during the 1939 royal tour of Canada. And in 1951 he was engineer of the royal train carrying Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh from Redditt to Winnipeg.

As he completed his final run he was greeted at the station by top company and union officials. Mr. and Mrs. Cook reside at 571 Wardlaw Avenue, Winnipeg.

Stove Explosion Severely Injures Tweed Resident

Tweed (Special) — Mr. O. Woodcock, of Isaac Street, was severely burned about the face and hands early Sunday evening following a stove explosion in the kitchen of his home.

Mr. Woodcock had just returned from a visit out of town and had lighted a fire in the stove when the waterfront exploded.

The explosion sprayed burning coals over the kitchen but prompt action of the family in tossing water over them prevented any serious fire damage to the dwelling, although considerable damage was caused by the blast.

The explosion is believed to have been caused by a frozen coil.

Mr. Woodcock had his injuries treated at home.

Jan. Weather 6 Degrees Above General Average

Whatever else might be said about the month of January, at least it cannot be said that it was cold.

Weather statistics for the month released today by officials at water purification plant on Trent Road indicated the mean temperature was 25.7 degrees, almost six degrees higher than the average over the years.

High temperature last month was 48 degrees and the mercury failed by two degrees to get down to the zero mark. This compared with a high of 49 a year ago. But the low in January 1952 was 15 below zero. The mean temperature was 21 degrees. The average mean temperature is 19 degrees.

There was a total of 2.38 inches of precipitation last month, made up of 1.55 inches of rain and 8.3 inches of snow. A year ago there was .89 inch of rain plus 20.1 inches of snow for a total precipitation of 2.90 inches.

SINGAPORE (Reuters) —Gen. Sir Gerald Templer Britain's high commissioner in Malaya said Sunday hec ould see no end to the five-year-long fight against Communist jungle bandits "until we have settled with world Communism." Comparing the situation today with what it was like when he arrived a year ago, Templer said it now is "comparatively satisfactory — with emphasis on the comparitively."

Clifford Wilson and the "big one" that didn't get away

Foxboro Friends Find Fishing Fun, Food Fine in Frost-Free Florida

A winter-time holidays in the sunny south is not beyond the means of most Canadians, according to Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wilson, Foxboro, who recently returned from Florida after a month's stay.

Mr. Wilson reports that living expenses in Florida are little, if any, higher than right in the Belleville area — if you go at it the right way and stay clear of the posh Miami hotels with their $30 per day price tags.

With Mr. and Mrs. John Menzies, of Proverst, Alberta, the Foxboro couple left Belleville the day after Christmas. They travelled by car and had in tow a cabin trailer that was to be their home for the next month. Four days after leaving Belleville they were in Tampa and stopped off at a trailer camp operated by the municipality.

Trailers the Answer

According to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson the trailer camps solve the accommodation problem for persons desiring a Florida vacation and who have not unlimited funds at their disposal. Ten dollars per month per couple was the fee paid at the trailer camp, which provide washroom and shower facilities.

Each trailer has its own cooking facilities usually a small gas stove operated by propane gas.

Food costs when purchased for personal preparation are about the same as here. Bread is 22c, milk 26c, meat about the same, or a bit cheaper. The big saving is in fruits. Oranges can be had for $1 per bushel, while bananas ranged from 5c to 9c per pound, according to quality.

Caught Biggest Fish

With the Tampa trailer camp as headquarters the Foxboro couple and their two friends ranged about the Florida peninsula on sightseeing tours. They took in the Florida Keys' trip with its 150 miles and 57 bridges and went 30 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico on an ocean going launch for a fishing trip.

The fishing trip was not expensive, the tab being $4 each for the trip and another $1 for rental of a fishing pole. About 50 tourists took in the trip. And the Foxboro party caught fish, the largest being a 12-pound grouper.

Possibly the highlight of the trip was a four-and-half-hour plane trip back to Toronto. The big four-motored airliner took off at 9.45 a.m. and at 2.15 in the afternoon touched down at Malton. It was the first plane ride for both.

"Our one mistake may have been to go to Florida too early in the season," laughed Mr. Wilson. "When staying only a month it means you return during the coldest part of the winter and you mind the change."

But the Florida trip is a fine experience and is one which Mr. and Mrs. Wilson would have been sorry to have missed.

'Blitz For The Blind' Canvass Starts Tonight at Six O'Clock

Tonight a number of the sightless people of the city and district will be looking wistfully perhaps at Belleville.

Maybe not wistfully, for they know, like many others, Belleville has yet to "turn down" an appeal for a worthy humanitarian cause.

And they are hoping that tonight will not be "the first time."

For this is Belleville's "Night for the Blind."

It is the night when the Campaign Committee of the National Institute for the Blind's Building Fund for its Quinte — St. Lawrence Residence and Service Centre at Kingston launches its "Blitz Drive."

Only One Appeal

The drive is not to be compared with a "tag day" nor will it be an annual affair. The campaign which started Feb. 1st through Feb. 15th will be the only one of its kind for its particular purpose.

Tonight, three hundred canvassers will start on a house-to-house canvass for funds. Please be courteous and kind and give what you can, for these warm-hearted folks are giving of their time and effort to collect, what they hope, will be the city's $25,000 quota of the overall $255,000 costs of construction of the centre.

Canvassers will call at your homes between six and seven o'clock tonight, with some starting off at six.

Residents are asked to keep their porch lights burning to facilitate the efforts of the canvassers. If you are going to be away, please leave your contribution with a neighbor, or send it direct to campaign headquarters.

Results Broacast

Results of the campaign will be broadcast at intermittent periods during a special program over radio station CJBQ. The program starts at eight o'clock and lasts through until 11. Many distinguished local artists will be heard during the broadcast.

The new residence and service centre will look after the needs of the blind in six counties. It will provide residence for about thirty sightless persons besides special facilities for those who are in private residence. The new centre fills a long-felt need in the district it will serve and officials are confident the residents of this district will not fail them in their appeal.

"Let Your Light So Shine."

LIVELY DREAM

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (CP)—A 12-year-old boy from an orphanage at Grahamstown who spent a day at the seaside dreamed that night he was swimming. He dived out of the second-storey window of the orphanage and was found on the ground, dazed, with a sprained arm his only injury.

'Y' May Have To Close Classes In Two Sections

In making his report to the January meeting of the YMCA Board of Directors, J. Bryson Leslie, chairman of the physical committee, stated "It is very likely that we will shortly have to close registration for classes for nine-year-old boys and for women on Wednesday night. We are pleased to announce this in one respect, because it implies that these classes have almost reached capacity. On the other hand it is unfortunate that we may have to refuse some people entrance to the classes and thereby deny them the chance to participate in our physical program. The physical committee however wishes to emphasize quality of instruction and program for members rather than concentrate on enrolling a large number of people. It has always been a YMCA policy that quality of personal service to members be first.

In concluding his report, Mr. Leslie informed the members of the board that the physical committee hoped to commence another class for nine-year-old boys in the late spring and advised the members to inform their friends to enroll their nine-year-old sons now for this class.

The board was informed that there was space for women in the Wednesday afternoon class.

$1,000 Damage In Small Blaze At Collegiate

Spotting flames through a basement window as they passed through the collegiate grounds, an unidentified couple Saturday night saved the Belleville Collegiate from possible serious fire damage.

The blaze, starting in the basement, followed up through a sawdust and shavings chute to the first floor and then followed a soil pipe to second floor. Total damage was less than $1,000 Fire Chief Gerald Vance stated.

A box of wood shavings and sawdust in the collegiate basement below the woodworking department was said to have been the cause of the blaze.

Each night the shavings and sawdust are swept and dropped to the basement through a chute in the floor. It is thought that an oily rag or a cigaret butt may have got mixed with the sawdust and smouldered for hours before it broke into flames. The fire went up through the chute and burned a small section of the wooden floor in the woodworking department, then followed the soil pipe up through the ceiling where minor damage was done in the drafting room.

Credit was given to the persons responsible for turning in the fire alarm. Had the blaze gone unnoticed much longer much greater damage may have resulted, according to firemen.

As it was firemen were hampered in their efforts by heavy smoke which filled the section of the basement where the fire started, and also in the woodworking department.

SPECIAL GIFTS

ARDINGLY, England (CP)—Unusual contributions have been seen on the collection plate of the Anglican Church in this Sussex town, but the strangest has just been recorded. Two envelopes after a recent service contained cigarets for the rector, and biscuits for the church mouse.

RADIOACTIVE SPRAY

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (CP)—An insecticide made from dried chrysanthemums is expected to kill flies that have become immune to ordinary sprays. The new insecticide is radioactive, made by growing chrysanthemums in an airtight chamber holding carbon dioxide gas.

Obituary

MRS. LOUISA M. HALL

The funeral of Mrs. Louisa M Hall was held from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home on Saturday. The Rev. Duncan McTavish, assisted by the Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, conducted the service.

The bearers were: Fred Mowbray, Roy MacDonald, Clarence Hall, Clinton Calnan, Howard Hall and Delbert Mowbray.

Interment was in the Belleville cemetery.

MRS. MABEL CATHERINE MARGARET BEASLEY

101 West Bridge Street

Following a three-weeks' illness, Mrs. Mabel Catherine Beasley, of 101 Bridge St. West, died in the Kingston General Hospital on Saturday. She was 59 years of age.

Born in London, England, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Judd and had been a resident of the locality for the past 13 years. Prior to taking up residence here, she had lived in Ottawa.

Surviving are her two sons, Francis T. J., of Ottawa, and Roy of Belleville. A daughter, Miss May Beasley, is a resident of Ottawa. There are two brothers, Thomas Judd, of New York City, and James Judd, of London, England. Three sisters reside in England: Mrs. W. Wadham, Mrs. H. Whiting and Mrs. C. Maybee. Two grandsons also survive, Francis and Matthew Beasley, of Ottawa. Her husband Francis, predeceased her.

The service was held at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home this Monday morning. Interment will be in Ottawa.

MRS. TERESA AGNES McWILLIAMS

The funeral of Mrs. Teresa Agnes McWilliams was held from her late residence at Corbyville to St. Charles Church at Read this Monday morning. Mass was celebrated by Rev. E. Briceland, who also said the late rites in St. Charles Cemetery. There was a large attendance at the church and the floral and spiritual offerings testified to the esteem of the deceased.

The bearers were John Farrell, Leo Lally, Joseph Buckley, James O'Sullivan, Bartley Walsh and J. Walsh.

MISS JESSIE MACLEAN

Following an illness of some duration, Miss Jessie MacLean, 72 Alexander Street, and a lifelong resident of this city, died in Kingston on Saturday evening. The late Miss MacLean was born in this city, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacLean and had resided in this city all of her life. She was well known and highly respected and in music circles in the city was held in high regard.

For many years she was a music teacher and many children in the city passed through her hands. She was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and for many years was a valued member of John Street United Church choir. In St. Andrew's Church, she took an active part and belonged to many of the women's organizations of the congregation.

Surviving are one sister, Miss Edith MacLean at home and one nephew, Donald MacLean, of Camp Shilo, Manitoba.

Resting at the Pinkston Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Ole Man Woodchuck Fails to See His Shadow, Can Spring be Far Away

Old Groundhog peeked from his underground lair,
There was frost on the trees,
and snow in the air,
He gazed all about him — no shadow there lay
An announced to the family:—
"We're topside to stay."

Sullen overcast skies following in the wake of a cold snap gave Old Man Woodchuck or Brer Bear—take your pick, the chance to predict that spring is just around the corner.

For this is the day "Ole Woody" wakens from his winter sleep, comes up for air and a look at what's going on in the outside world. If, as the legend goes, he sees his shadow he "high-tails" it for the winter dungeon, curls up with the family and snoozes for another forty days.

If, however, it's dull and overcast as was the case today, he shakes the sleep from his eyes, wakens the snoring brood and starts looking for food, for he is out for the season.

But that is purely legend, although a lot of folks, especially those in the southern part of the United States place great faith in the woodchuck, or bear story. Some, it is said, wait patiently by known woodchuck holes to get a peek at the fur-coated fraud if and when he makes an appearance.

But you can take it for what it is worth. Had the 'chuck been subject to nightmares and come up for air at practically any time this winter he would have chosen to remain "topside." Some will say he hasn't even bothered to hibernate.

But don't take it for granted spring is around the corner. Old Man Winter has been known to toss all legends, superstitions and whatnot into the discard in a late-season flurry of activity. And that could happen this season.

Better tip the woodchuck off, if you see him around grubbing for grub.

Service Station Owner Thought Fire Alarm Just Another False One

The next time that someone calls David Taft, R. R. 2 Trenton, to tell him that his service station is afire, the chances are that he will believe them.

Saturday morning, while eating breakfast in a Trenton restaurant a frantic telephone call from a neighbor telling him that flames were shooting from the roof of his premises failed to disturb Taft greatly.

He went on calmly eating his breakfast but when he later arrived at his combined grocery store and service station four miles south of Trenton he found the fire department battling the blaze. The flames endangered barrels of coal oil and motor fuel stored in the rear of the building; and licked toward gasoline pumps at the front through broken windows.

The service station operator said he had been in the habit of stoking the wood stove early in the morning and that people had often called him telling him his place was afire when there was only smoke rolling from the chimney.

"But I was wrong this time," he admitted ruefully.

Taft lives alone with his big cat Tim. The scorched animal was rescued from the burning kitchen by Vernon Kemp, 14, soon after the outbreak of the blaze.

Because telephones in the district were out of order, neighbors had difficulty in turning in the alarm to the Trenton Fire Department. Finally a passing motorist was hailed. He drove to Trenton and raised the alarm.

HIPPO PUT TO SLEEP

Baha's Group Holds Meeting

The members of the local Baha'i community met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger White on Sunday and elected the personnel of its young adult group called "Workshop '63."

The keynote of this organization is an adventure in understanding those matters which will prepare young people to take a more active part in the social, cultural, religious and administrative aspects of society and to more adequately prepare them to play a mature role as local, national and universal citizens.

Mr. John A. Robarts, chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada, the administrative body of the Faith, addressed the workshop club on the history and development of the Baha'i Faith in Canada. It was announced by Mr. Robarts that a weekly study class would be set up to investigate the organic unity of various religious systems, religious unity being one of the major tenets of this group.

The officers elected to serve on this year's workshop are Roger White, president, and Helen White, secretary-treasurer.

Following the meeting, the group enjoyed refreshments served by Mrs. Melba Loft of the Shannonville Baha'i Community.

New Economic Chain Will Be Forged Soon

MANDEVILLE, Jamaica (Reuters)—The first link in a new economic chain joining Jamaica with a sparsely-populated area of Canada's Pacific coast will be forged soon.

The Jamaican plant, which will become a main source of supply for Canada's giant new aluminum smelting project at Kitimat, B.C., is due to be formally opened Feb. 21.

It will help to transform Jamaica, renowned for years as a "pleasure island" and a producer of rum, sugar and bananas, into a strategic area of world-wide importance and a big dollar earner for the sterling area.

The reason is the increase in production of bauxite, the raw material from which aluminum is made.

And Mandeville, a resort centre at an altitude of about 2,000 feet, is becoming an important cog in the exploitation of the bauxite.

About five miles from here a subsidiary of Aluminium Limited of Montreal, one of the three companies interested in developing the bauxite industry of Jamaica, has built its plant. It is the subsidiary, Alumina Jamaica Limited, due to open the plant formally Feb. 21, although production actually started in December.

In a short time Jamaica is expected to become one of the most important suppliers of bauxite in the world.

Quebec Bonspiel Gets Under Way

QUEBEC (CP)—The 40th Quebec international bonspiel gets under way today with 120 rinks competing for 14 awards.

Entered in the 'spiel are 22 rinks from Ontario, 17 from New Brunswick, 14 from Nova Scotia, one from Prince Edward Island and 54 from Quebec province.

There are three rinks from Chicago, two from Detroit, two from Wausau and one from Wauwatosa, Wis., one from Nashua, N.H., and one each from Brookline and Winchester, Mass.

Two rinks from the Quebec section, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans Association, skipped by Col. C. A. Young and Les Carpenter, will make their first appearance in the 'spiel this year.

Last year's trophy winners back to defend their titles include Mel Stonehouse, winner of the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy in 1952 and his Ottawa Glebe quartet, and N. Findlay of Toronto Royal Canadian, winner last year of the grand aggregate award and the Cite de Quebec Cup.

Other 1952 winners entered include Ira McEwen of Montreal Thistle, Dr. C. R. Baxter of Moncton, N.B.,. and Dave Kennedy of Pointe Claire, Que.

V. A. Selkirk of Peterborough and Dr. M. R. Stalker of Ormstown, Que., who were thirds on winning rinks last year, are entered as skips this year.

The 'spiel will be divided into two divisions for the opening events, the Chateau International Trophy and the Omega International Trophy. Losers of first-round games in each section will drop into "C" section, for the Francois Jobin International Trophy.

Rinks reaching the quarter-final round in these three events will qualify for competition in the blue ribbon event, the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy.

Mrs. Agnes Demorest Enjoys Party Celebrating Her 94th Birthday

Nine candles on one side of a birthday cake representing 10 years each and four on the other side of the cake equalling one year for each, together totalling 94 years, were lighted this afternoon at the special birthday party for Mrs. Agnes Demorest, a bed patient in the Belcrest Nursing Home on Marshall Road.

Still alert and retaining all her mental faculties, Mrs. Demorest today celebrated a birthday few ever expect to see. She has been a guest at the home operated by Mrs. E. J. Smith for the past five years and according to the owner, it is the practice to give every guest a birthday party.

"Mrs. Demorest's memory is marvelous, considering her age," Mrs. Smith said today. She can recall working in Toronto as a young girl when Toronto's population was only 25,000, (present population, 1,500,000.) At that time she was employed as a tailoress by a downtown clothing manufacturer. The present location of the parliament buildings was then a grain field. She married Frank Demorest while in Toronto and for many years helped her husband farm east of Foxboro. He died in 1930.

Born in Sidney

She was born on the 9th concession of Sidney township in February, 1859. In the capacity of tailoress she was employed through the years at Stirling, Belleville, Rochester, N.Y., and Toronto.

The one time tailoress said she worked exclusively on men's suits doing custom tailoring. Then, all button holes were worked by hand. Mrs. Demorest recalls prices for a custom suit ranged from $18 to $40.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Magee and moved with her parents to the Ridge Road district at Rawdon in early years attending school at No. 1 S. S. Rawdon. She studied her trade as a tailoress in Stirling.

Her niece, Mrs. Grace Henry of Buffalo, N. Y., attended the party, as she does every year along with a nephew, Dr. S. Demorest from Foxboro and his wife. Other friends from the nursing home and surrounding districts were also present.

Confined to Bed

Five years ago while visiting with a relative in Rawdon township, Mrs. Demorest slipped and fell in the kitchen, fracturing her hip. Since that time she has been confined to her bed. However, she says she is quite comfortable and does not complain of any pain as long as she remains in bed.

Her father, John Magee was born in Ireland. He and his father came to Canada in 1837 by windjammer taking eight weeks to cross the ocean. The family settled in Picton, later moving to Rawdon township where the Crown land was taken up. The elderly woman claims to be a direct descendant of William of Orange.

This afternoon a bouquet of flowers was presented to Mrs. Demorest from the nursing home and her picture was taken with members of the staff and her friends. Mrs. Smith says the lady is extremely popular with everyone. She said, "we feel she is just like one of the family here."

EISENHOWER ASKS

4. Promised all action within his power to wipe out racial segregation in the District of Columbia and in the armed forces. Beyond that, Eisenhower indicated he would work "through friendly conferences with those in authority in our states and cities" to seek civil-rights progress.

5. Announced a new system of checking the loyalty of federal employees, together with a series of studies and surveys designed to end "waste and incompetence" in the post office and other departments.

"Our people," Eisenhower said, "have demanded nothing less than good, efficient government. They shall get nothing less."

He asked Congress for a good bit of legislation—"corrective action" of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, for one thing, and an extension of the government reorganization act.

Eisenhower's most important announcement—freeing Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists on Formosa to strike at the Communist-held China mainland—came as something of an anti-climax. Word of it had leaked in advance, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur among others commended it warmly.

The new president states his view of the fleet's "neutralizing" mission:

"This has meant, in effect, that the U. S. Navy was required to serve as a defensive arm of Communist China."

Truman issued the order on June 27, 1950, two days after the start of fighting in Korea. He directed the 7th fleet to protect Formosa against Communist invasion and to assure that the Nationalists did not attack the mainland. The explanation was that the order was designed to keep the Chinese Reds out of the Korean war.

Since 1950, Eisenhower recalled, the Reds have entered the war and, with Russian backing, he said have turned down every peace overture from the United Nations.

"Consequently," Eisenhower said, "there is no longer any logic or sense in a condition that required the U. S. Navy to assume defensive responsibilities on behalf of the Chinese Communists, thus permitting those Communists. . .to kill our soldiers and those of our United Nations allies in Korea.

"I am, therefore, issuing instructions that the 7th fleet no longer be employed to shield Communist China. This order implies no aggressive intent on our part. . ."

Eisenhower disclosed another move in the Far Eastern conflict—"immediate increased attention to the development of additional Republic of Korea forces." This was in line with his campaign demand that Korean troops replace other UN forces in the front lines as soon as possible.

He said his foreign policy, in general, will envision "all peaceful methods and devices — except breaking faith with our friends."

Then—in apparent reference to the meetings Presidents Roosevelt and Truman attended at Yalta, Potsdam and else—the new President declared:

"We shall never acquiesce in the enslavement of any people in order to purchase fancied gains for ourselves.

"I shall ask the Congress at a later date to join in an appropriate resolution making clear that this government recognizes no kind of commitment contained in secret undertakings of the past with foreign governments which permit this kind of enslavement."

Turning to affairs at home, the chief executive outlined a series of projects already started by his administration:

A new federal loyalty and security program to protect the government from "false servants" and "to clear the atmosphere of that unreasoned suspicion that accepts rumor and gossip as substiues for evidence."

Studies to straighten out the complexities of the defence establishment, revamp the tax laws to give small business a better break, and map legislation to replace the farm price-support laws which expire at the end of 1954. He said the present farm program will be enforced and a new program drafted to reduce "governmental interference in the farmers' affairs."

Eisenhower asked of Congress, among other things:

1. Early statehood for Hawaii. He didn't mention Alaska, which is normally Democratic while Hawaii votes Republican.

2. "Corrective action" to amend the Taft-Hartley labor law. Eisenhower said the labor department was making some specific recommendations and he would send them along later.

3. Amendment of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act to remove what he called discrimination against some groups of aliens.

4. Extension of the old-age and survivors' insurance laws "to cover millions of citizens who have been left out of the social security system."

5. Extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act.

And on a number of other subjects Eisenhower presented only broad outlines with the details to be filled in by later messages. He summed up what he described as "the grand labors" of his administration in these words:

"Application of our influence in affairs with such fortitude and such foresight that it will deter aggression and eventually secure peace;

"Establishment of a national administration of such integrity and such efficiency that its honor at home will ensure respect abroad;

"Encouragement of those incentives that inspire creative initiative in our economy, so that its productivity may fortify freedom everywhere; and

"Dedication to the well-being of all our citizens and to the attainment of equality of opportunity for all, so that our nation will ever act with the strength of unity in every task to which it is called."

Gen. MacArthur, in a statement issued in New York Saturday night, had said the prospective order to the 7th fleet would "correct one of the strangest anomalies known to military history."

SEA CADETS' CRUISE

TORONTO (CP)—Four Royal Canadian Sea cadets will sail Feb. 6 aboard HMCS Quebec for a month's training cruise to Berfour, Garnet Harold Bass of Barrie, Francis George Maquire of Collingwood, George Albert Bell of Midland and D. Perrault of Montreal, will leave from Halifax on the 10,000-ton cruiser for visits to Bermuda, Port of Spain and Trinidad.

DIES AT 101

CORNWALL (CP)—Mrs. Angus McPhail, who celebrated her 101st birthday last July 24, died Sunday at her home at nearby Harrison's Corners. She had lived her whole life in this district.

Her husband died 14 years ago. She is survived by three sons and two daughters, including John A. McPhail of Montreal, and Mrs. Austin McDonald of Wolfe Island.

MOTORISTS LIKE TOLL ROADS

It would seem to be only a question of time before Ontario turns to the toll highway as a partial solution to the traffic problem. Experiments in the United States show that motorists are quite willing to pay tolls for highway facilities of a type that cannot be financed out of ordinary revenues.

The most striking example of the successful toll road is the New Jersey Turnpike which finished its first year of operation only a few days ago. It is a 118-mile stretch of road running north and south through the state. For the most of the distance it has two traffic lanes in each direction separated by a centre strip.

Its designers regarded is as the toll road of the future. It was felt that the original facilities would meet all traffic needs until 1960. Already it is over-crowded and the four lanes are to be increased to six. The road is taking in money at a rate it was not expected to reach until 1968. Toll revenue for its first year was expected to be $7,150,000 but it was more than double that amount. More than 20,000,000 vehicles had used it, nine-tenths of them were passenger cars.

The toll highway has not proven to be answer to the traffic accident problem but statistics show some improvement over the national average. There were 47 fatalities on the turnpike last year, which represents a rate of 6.1 per 100,000,000 vehicle miles, and compares favorably with the national rate of 7.6. The speed limit is 60 miles per hour and turnpike officials consider this safe under good driving condition but agree that it can be too fast on a wet or slippery pavement.

The New Jersey Turnpike is the newest of a number of such toll highways in the Eastern States. Quite a few Canadians have had occasion to use some of them in recent years. It appears the common experience that motorists take to them at once, quite willing to pay a moderate fee for the convenience they offer. The rate for a passenger car is about a cent a mile. Persons living alongside the road can get a lower annual ticket rate. Trucks pay substantially more, assessed by the weight of the vehicle and the load.

The significance of the success of the toll highways is seen in the willingness of motorists to pay tolls for better highway accommodation. The cost of highway construction has reached a point where it is no longer possible to provide for the traffic needs out of tax revenues. The toll highway is a partial answer to the problem.

NUISANCE TAX RULED OUT

It has not been officially announced but it is nevertheless "official" now, that the federal government has decided to abolish the radio licence fee, effective March 31, the end of the fiscal year.

Few levies have been so unpopular with Canadians. It might have been regarded as a reasonable fee many years ago when only a few had radios but it had long since become a nuisance. Its abolition now, with an election impending, is a rather transparent gesture.

Much more welcome is the accompanying word that for the time being at least, Ottawa will forego the collection of television receiving set licence fees. The CBC had recommend a licence fee of $15 per set. This figure is something more than a "nuisance" levy, and in view of the fact that the great majority of television set owners depend on American channels for TV entertainment, such a fee at this time would be greeted with loud protests. Even in those areas where CBC television programs are available, the overwhelming preference is for the American networks.

One Ottawa correspondent hints that there is a possibility that the federal government might never impose a TV fee, but while large sections of the country remain without TV reception of any kind there is the old argument that taxpayers in these sections are subsidizing the TV entertainment enjoyed elsewhere.

DANGER IN SIMPLE ACTION

News reports within the past few days, notes the Sudbury Star, told of two accidents in which one man was crushed to death and another man was seriously injured when the motor vehicles on which they were working slipped off "jacks" holding the vehicles off the ground.

Death and injury prove that some motor vehicle drivers are careless while making repairs or changing tires on their machines. It has been the experience of a great number of drivers to see a car start to roll and fall off a "jack" when a tire is being changed.

Nor is it unusual to see home mechanics working beneath vehicles resting on improvised supports of wood, cement blocks, bricks or some other material.

Accident prevention means keeping alert to the possibilities of death or injury and taking all possible precautions to see that the circumstances are not created to invite disaster.

When working on a motor vehicle it is a simple matter to see that the wheels are blocked when using a "jack", to make sure that the machine does not roll. The use of an improvised "jack" is something to be deplored at any time.

The death of one man and the serious injury of another should serve as a warning that danger lurks in what appears to be a simple action.

REMARKABLE FEAT

Some remarkable feat I was sure had occurred
The moment I answered the phone.
And this was the cry of delight that I heard:
"The baby is walking alone!"

Back as far as the time when our race first began,
In the very same rapturous tone,
A cave mother shouted this news to her man:
"The baby is walking alone!"

As it was then, is now, so it always will be
The sweetest of thrills that is known
When it's shouted with joy, as 'twas shouted to me:
"The baby is walking alone!"

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 2, 1933

Miss Lillian Tuck has left for her home in England after visiting friends here.

Mr. Freeman Westover, of the local Bank of Montreal staff, has been transferred to Prescott.

Mr. W. C. Springer and the members of his family left today on a motor car trip to St. Augustine, Florida.

John Bruyea, Frankford's oldest inhabitant, died today at the home of his son, Jacob Bruyea, in Trenton. He had reached the age of 103 years and four months. He was born in Murray township and resided in the Frankford-Trenton district all his life.

Gordon McLean has sold his pool and billiard business to F. McCarty and sons, Frank and Charles, of Trenton, who some time ago conducted a simiiar business here on Front Street, near Victoria Ave. They have been living in Trenton for the past five years.

30 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 2, 1923

Mrs. E. Rowe, of Brantford is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Hardy, Sinclair St.

Mr. Charles Logue, of Kingston, is a visitor in town

Mr. Charles Hanna, president, and Mr. G. F. Reid, treasurer, of the Belleville Agricultural Society, have returned from Toronto where they attended the annual meeting of the Provincial Association of Fall Fairs.

Mr. Fred Langley is visiting his parents in Hastings.

Mr. J. V. Walsh, Warden of the County of Hastings, was in town today.

Mr. John Kingston, of Tweed, was in town today.

More water was pumped at the city pumping station during the month of January than in any month in the city's history. The new record reached the total of seventy-three million and one hundred thousand gallons of water for all purposes. This is an increase of about 25 per cent in the year.

40 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 2, 1913

The Harbor Commissioners, Mayor J. F. Wills, Mr. A. P. Allen and Mr. B. L. Hyman have returned from Ottawa where they had interviews with government officials with regards to new docks and other improvements to the harbor here. They report that considerable work will be done here this year.

The town of Trenton has purchased a new fire engine and 50 new water hydrants are to be installed in the town.

This morning the Penny Savings Bank system was opened at Queen Alexandra School. Mr. Sneyd, manager of the Merchants Bank, addressed the teachers and pupils and gave them instructions. The rate of interest is three per cent.

Mr. Morgan O'Rourke, of Copper Cliff, is home on a visit to his parents.

50 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 2, 1903

The annual meeting of South Hastings County Orange Lodge is being held at Trenton today. The following are in attendance from Belleville: F. M. Clarke, grand secretary; S. J. Wedden, county master; D. Duffin, county secretary; J. B. Hendricks, W. C. Reid and W. Cole.

Mr. Ernest Wallbridge was driving from Long Point to Huff's Island, Prince Edward County, with a load of stone Saturday evening last when his horses went through the ice near Grape Island. With help from Grape Island people the horses were rescued and the sleigh and horse harness were also saved.

The local drill shed deputation is now in Ottawa and if they get a fair chance to talk will convince the government officials that this city most certainly needs a new drill hall. The following compose the deputation: Mayor R. J. Graham, Ald. W. W. Pope, Ald D. V. Sinclair and Ald. W. W. Chown. Lt.-Col. J. Earl Halliwell is also in Ottawa to lend his support.

Strength for the Day

HOPE

In this age in which we live we hear a great deal about wishful thinking; and almost invariably the term is uttered in accents of contempt.

Is wishful thinking always bad? Usually it is, for it consists largely of unrealistic daydreaming. But wishful thinking may be just another word for hope, and hope is one of the greatest of Christian virtues. Hope is desire cherished with a confident sense of anticipation. In hope we not only wish for something but we entertain the strong conviction that we will get it.

Certainly wishful thinking of this variety is a lot better than the dark, despairing cynicism and melancholy with which many people view life. People so afflicted confidently believe that the worst is always sure to come, that there is no hope for the world, and that after a slippery descent in which we may grasp at a thousand unstable things by which we hope to be saved, we come at last to the precipice and drop over.

Give me wishful thinking before an attitude such as that. St. Paul declared that "tribulation worketh steadfastness; and steadfastness, approvedness, hope; and hope putteth not to shame; because the love of God hath been shed abroad in our hearts thru' the Holy Spirit which was given unto us." (Rom. 5: 5.)

No Legal Existence

(North Bay Nugget)

Widdifield, the sprawling, outsize township which has been passing laws, collecting taxes, electing councils and receiving government grants for some 67 years, apparently never has had the right to do so.

The Department of Municipal Affairs has no record of Widdifield ever having been incorporated, So-clerk Arthur Carmichael informed the township council at a meeting recently.

Caught with its records down, the department is asking a municipal board hearing to proceed with the incorporation of the township in the near future.

In order to bring records up to date, the department of municipal affairs, in bringing records up to date, is re-incorporating all municipalities of which it has not previous record, the meeting was told.

West Has Seen It All Before

(New York Times)

The usual list of anniversaries of notable events falling in the year 1953 contains one unusual item.

This year, a line reads, is the 500th anniversary of the fall of Constantinople — an event which shocked and frightened all Western Europe as much as any event since then. Yet the effect was largely symbolical. The Turks, Seljuks and Ottomans had been undermining the old Eastern Roman Empire for four centuries.

The Ottomans held most of Asia Minor, both sides of the straits, and were firmly established in the Balkans. The city founded by Constantine the Great which had withstood all attacks for 1,100 years, except that of the piratical Fourth Crusaders in the year 1204, had imposed Roman law, spread Hellenic culture and its own form of religion over a vast part of Europe and Asia, collapsed in a single day under the assault of the huge polyglot army of Sultan Mohammed II, called the Conqueror. The date was May 29, 1453.

Gibson tells the story as the tragic last act of a great drama which began. "In the second century of the Christian era the Empire of Rome comprehended the fairest part of the earth and the most civilized portion of mankind."

By the middle of the fifteenth century the last of the Caesars was making a hopeless stand in his beleaguered capital. "Amidst these multitudes the Emperor (Constantine XI), who accomplished all the duties of a general and a soldier, was long seen and finally lost; . . . his mournful exclamation was heard, 'Cannot there be found a Christian to cut off my head?' and his last fear was that of falling alive into the hands of the infidels.

"The prudent despair of Constantine cast away the purple; amidst the tumult he fell by an unknown hand, and his body was buried under a mountain of the slain. After his death resistance and order were no more."

The shock of the fall of Constantinople to Western Europe, one can easily imagine, was much greater than the shock caused by the Russian Communists' coup d'etat in Czechoslovakia in 1948. Both events, however, illustrate the recurrent crises which pressures from the vast heartland of Eurasia have brought upon the peninsula known as Western Europe over the last twelve centuries.

In a long backward look Arnold J. Toynbee in the current issue of Foreign Affairs recalls that Europe's present feeling of being under siege from the East is one that she has experienced three times before in the years since the fall of the Roman Empire. Arabs, Mongols and Turks, each in their own expansive era, have thrown the continent on the defensive.

Since the Turks were turned back from the walls of Vienna in 1683 Western Europe has been able to take the offensive. In this brief modern period Western civilization has been carried around the world.

This modern period is the only one we are intimately acquainted with. Memory of old struggles when the West was on the defensive has quite died out, to be revived only by history books. Hence the amazement and sense of unreality when along about the Ides of March, AD 1946, the West found itself confronted by another offensive from the East from a totally unexpected source, viz, the Russia of Peter the Great, of the reforming Czars, and an ally of the First and Second World Wars.

Communist Russia has something of each of the three great forces which has assailed the West since the fall of the Roman Empire in the West.

Like the fanatical Arabs it has a faith that it feels bound to impose on the world by fire and sword or by "purges" and prison camps.

Having virtually annexed China, Moscow now rules almost the same vast domain as the Great Khans of the Mongols.

Like the conquering Ottoman Turks it has created a system that must be continually expanding and on the offensive. The Turks, after taking Constantinople 500 years ago, pressed on to swallow the Balkans and Hungary — as the Russians have done in our time.

The Turks reached the outskirts of Vienna — where the Russians lord it over the Austrians today. But there the Turks were stopped and their decline began. We cannot say the same of the Russians.

For 500 years Constantinople has been Istanbul. It is no longer a capital. Its superb position for commerce, means little, since trade with Black Sea ports has dwindled.

But it is still the guardian of the narrow strait between Europe and Asia and it has a definite place in the defensive strategy of the West against the offensive of the East—a place which Emperor Constantine, its founder, or Sultan Mohammed II, its conqueror, never dreamed of.

The Death Of a Ship

(Hamilton Spectator)

The death of a ship is a sad thing.

For several hundred Canadians, the burning of Empress of Canada at Liverpool will mean a difficult rearrangement, possibly a cancellation, of plans to go to Britain this summer for the coronation.

For many thousand Canadians, her loss will be a more indirect but more poignant sorrow. Some knew her in pre-war days when she was Duchess of Richmond—one of those four rollicking, rather top-heavy sisters known as the drunken duchesses. Others knew her in her grey, war-time role of troopship, in which she carried 187,000 men to and from the fighting. Still others knew her, refurbished and renamed, as one of the happiest ships on the North Atlantic run.

From her decks, thousands of men and women had their first sight of Canada: The brooding coasts of Belle Isle Strait; the lighthouse at Father Point and the pilot boat tossing alongside; the optical quirk by which the masts seem to duck down to clear Quebec Bridge; the strange up-river journey in which only fields, farms and cows, not water, are visible from a deck chair.

She was one of the few survivors of a gallant merchant fleet which suffered perhaps the worst [illegible] losses of any big company. Her sisters, Duchess of Atholl and Duchess of York; her namesake the original Empress of Canada; the magnificent Empress of Britain; Empress of Asia; Montrose—all these were lost by enemy action. Empress of Russia burned in dock at war's end. Two veterans, Empress of Australia and Montcalm, were worn out in war service.

Now only two big ships remain to fly Canadian Pacific's checkered red and white house flag: Empress of Scotland (the former Empress of Japan), and Empress of France (the former Duchess of Bedford).

The death of a ship is a sad thing—and most specially the death of a ship of long and honorable service.

Installment Sleeping

(By Robert H. Davis, in Reader's Digest.)

To the millions of sleepless people I give my 25 years of experience with sleeping and waking hours, culminating in a complete victory over slumber. Formerly, no matter what time I went to bed, it was a certainty that I would wake up within three or four hours. One night, happening to look at myself, I was shocked by my personal appearance and decided to shave. This woke me completely and put me in a normal state of mind, whereupon I went back to bed and immediately fell asleep. For the next three nights I hung pictures, puttied the bookcase and read for three hours each night.

Thus I came upon the great discovery. In six months I so readjusted my sleeping that six perfect hours of slumber out of 24 was quite sufficient. My repose is so complete that for 20 years I have not experienced anything approaching a sustained dream. I have three hours of perfect repose after I go to bed. Then I get up and work. And mark the benediction of three golden hours in the middle of the night. The crash of traffic has ceased. The household is quiescent. No callers, no telephones, no arguments. In these three hours I pursue my labors, achieving at times results that would be quite impossible at any other time.

With the sandman's approach I stop work and return to bed. I am in a receptive state of mind to approach the second phase of slumber, and within five minutes, regardless of what I have been reading or writing, I am in my last sleep, which lasts for three more hours. It is an establihed fact that the first sleep into which the sleeper falls is the most profound. For this reason there is more rehabilitation in two short sleeps than in one long one. By breaking my sleep into two parts, each being completed and 100 per cent efficient, I get twice as much benefit as the sleeper who sleeps seven, eight or nine hours without interruption.

More Factories

Personal Health Talks

MIRACLE IN MINIATURE

Any one who has encountered the so-and-so who, nominally, conducts this column, knows I'm deaf on one side and dumb on both sides.

A year ago my good ear threatend to quit. For a month or two I lived in a bale of cotton. I wished I had devoted more study and practice to lip-reading.

Hitherto I had discovered that monaural deafness has its compensations, or perhaps I should say monaural hearing is nearly as good as the binaural kind except that in a group of people you can't tell who is speaking unless you catch his or her jaw waggling. In other words, loss of hearing in one ear impairs ability to appreciate the direction from which a sound comes. This handicap I believe, explains my extraordinary propensity for getting lost.

When I was sewed up in cotton I discovered one delightful compensation in binaural deafness. Driving is like piloting a sail plane. You just glide along in cathedral silence, and the traffic all around you is hushed too. "My stars," I thought, "this old crate runs like a watch—not a creak, rattle, knock or rumble . . ." I was on a long trip—away downtown, fully ten miles, to consult an aurist recommended by my own aurist.

It seemed that this far away ear specialist has devised a remarkable gadget for deafness like mine. Just what my own aurist called my kind I didn't hear, but he found a perforation of the drum membrance of the good ear—I reluct to say.

The downtown aurist's father had been an aurist too. Indeed, his father had developed the idea of the gadget in years of study and experimentation, so that he himself had contributed merely the adaptation of plastic material.

The aurist inserted a pliable plastic test tube an inch long and ¼ inch in diameter. The instant the tube touched the drum membrance hearing in the one ear was fully restored.

When I left the aurist's office, wearing the gadget, I congratulated myself that I didn't live in that neighborhood. When I started on the way home I suspected some one had been tampering with the car — it made a variety of noises I hadn't heard recently.

The doctor teaches the patient how to insert and how to remove the gadget—insert it in the morning, remove it at night. Of course it is invisible.

This miracle in miniature happened as I have described it. Some days I wore the gadget for many hours without discomfort. Other days my ear seemed too sensitive and I did not wear it — but it dispelled the deafness whenever I wore it. Some patients insert it every morning, wear it all day, and get great satisfaction from the improved hearing. Others quarrel with it, as I did. Had my good ear gone permanently deaf I believe I'd have learned to wear the gadget all day. But the hearing returned to normal and I lost interest in the device.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Detergents are Antiseptic

Do detergents have the same antiseptic or disinfectant value as soap, for instance for dishwashing, handwashing and laundry? (B. R. E.)

Answer—Yes.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

It would be hard to say what part of our bodies is more vulnerable and delicate than our necks and that upper section of our chests immediately below our necks. There the complex organs of breathing and speech, the larnyx, trachea and bronchi are located; the tips of the lungs are in that area; and the heart is not far off. Yet our style of dress, both for men and women, decrees that this particular spot shall be the only exposed area when we dress up in our winter coats. The lapels are nicely folded back, as though delliberately to offer this sensitive V to the fury of the elements.

Most of us wear scarves to cover it. But some of the scarves are flimsy silk, and some are worn so stylishly that they do not half protect the V. Many of us are inclined not to bother with the scarf if the day is not too bad; or what is worse, to leave it off for short walks out to lunch, or on some other brief excursion out of doors.

In the country and the backwoods, of course, where they know their physiology better than we do, lapelled coats have never been much in fashion. A farmer likes the coat that buttons square up across the chest and under the chin; and wants it big enough to button over a scarf, too. The backwoodsman's mackinaw jacket is square-rigged. The parka which has spread southward from the Arctic in great popularity in recent years takes full account of that most vulnerable area, the upper chest.

An Indian on James Bay told me that the secret of warmth and health, after warm feet, is a snug scarf around the neck and a snug belt or sash around the middle. Heat flows up off us the way heat flows up off a fire. And if we can impede or imprison our heat with scarves and sashes at the main points of escape, the waist and the neck, we will not ever be really cold.

But in the name of fashion, we city folk leave open a lovely little V-shaped chimney, out which our heat pours. And we protect the delicate mechanisms behind that chimney with no undershirt, to speak of, a thin outer shirt, and a necktie.

It is no wonder we cough.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TOIL ON, SAD HEART

Toil on, sad heart, courageously,
And thou shalt find thy dream shall be
A noonday light and truth to thee.
—Ellen Sturgis Hooper

How often we arrive at the time when some secret power tries to convince us of the futility of life, only to be lifted out of our lethargy by such lines as those quoted above. Sadness and discouragement are happily often but growing pains in our progress toward spiritual growth and completeness of character.

We have but to study history, and the lives of those who have created it, to be convinced that all experience is a measurement of worth and calibre. The poet Longfellow gave expression to this fact when he wrote "some days must be dark and dreary." We would not appreciate the sunlight if no dark or stormy days were ours. We need all sorts of weather in our souls to condition us for apt and sturdy achievement.

Let us often hear the whispering of those words by that gifted poet: "Toil on, sad heart, courageously." Always the way ahead is better than we think. I drove home from my office recently with the fog so thick I had to creep my car home. That's the way it is when we get set in the gloom of futility or failure. The fog passes. "Weeping endureth for the night, but joy cometh in the morning."

The sun dial records only the sunny days. Why can't we do that? In my diary I like to write them. They give promise and hope. The athlete conditions himself, so that when the test comes he will not be found wanting. He thinks little of the hardships that are essential to his training. He only thinks of the day of triumph. Think only of that!

Sorrow, failure in many things, unjust criticism, misunderstandings, all these are conditioning experiences. We must take them in good heart, faithfully performing to the best of our ability. The "noonday light" is sure to break. "Faithfulness in the little things" will reap its own reward. "Toil on, sad heart!"

Be Like A Pine Tree

(Wall Street Journal)

As a youngster, Sally was so conscientious that she made herself miserable over minor tragedies. Early one fall, when there was an exceptionally heavy snow storm, her grandfather took her for a drive.

"Notice these elms," he said. "The branches are so badly broken that the trees may die. But just look at those evergreens, undamaged by the storm."

"There's only two kinds of trees in the world, —the stubborn and the wise. An elm holds its branches rigid and trouble piles on until its limbs finally break, disfiguring or killing the trees. But when an evergreen is loaded with more weight than it can hold, it simply relaxes, lowers its branches and lets the burden slip away. The next morning after the storm, the evergreen is unharmed.

"Be a pine tree, granddaughter. Bear what you can, then let the rest of the load slide off."

No Trouble Keeping This Pioneer Family "Down on the Farm"

Eighty-eight years ago William Kuhl sailed from Germany and hewed a productive farm out of the Sullivan township bushland, 15 miles south of Owen Sound, Ont. Today his grandson, Julius Ernest Kuhl, five of his six sons and two daughters, all have farms within a few miles of the old homestead totalling 1,816 acres, and none wants to be anything but a farmer. The sixth son is on the home farm. Although some of his family have tried their hand at other callings, all returned to farming after a short time. Besides his farming activities, 59-year-old Julius has taken an active interest in community projects. Kuhl family are, from left, front row: Mrs. Gordon Garvie, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Kuhl, Mrs. Harvey Crowe; back, George, Gordon, Ernest, Otto, Alvin.—Central Press Canadian

'The Incredible Canadian', Burton's 'A Sense of Security' in Greatest Demand Among Library Patrons

Truth is more attractive than fiction with the reading public of Belleville, a discerning young woman informed the Ontario Intelligencer yesterday.

The young woman, Miss Olive Delaney, head librarian at the Corby Library here, was discussing current tastes among those who would rather curl up with a good book than watch television's Milton Berle.

Miss Delaney scotches any ideas that people today, what with the unsettled world affairs, are seeking escapist literature. Belleville people, at any rate.

"Biographies," she pointed out, "are getting the biggest play just now." She further explained that she had no inkling why this preference existed.

Most Popular Book

But, she pointed out, Bruce Hutchison's "The Incredible Canadian," the story of Mackenzie King, is practically a sellout, from a librarian's point of view. Aside from the fact that the enigmatic Mr. King was one of Canada's most mysterious personalities, Miss Delaney said she could give no reason for the book's popularity. But it happens to be number one on the hit parade of books and she gave the impression that even the Conservatives are reading it.

Just to show that Canada is still politically aware, however, Miss Delaney hastens to add that Donald Creighton's "John A. Macdonald" trails Mr. King's story by only a half-step.

"It's impossible," she said, "to keep either one of these biographies on the shelf for any length of time."

Burton's Book Liked

Another biography which happens to be going like popcorn at a county fair is C. L. Burton's "A Sense of Urgency". The story of Mr. Burton's business career and the Robert Simpson Company, it has developed an appeal to a great many people, who are desirous of knowing how that particular merchandising empire developed, or to a great many people who would like to discover how such a merchandising enterprise could develop under other hands—such as their own.

Four other biographies are being sought with a good deal of enthusiasm. "The Shape of Sunday," the story of novelist Lloyd Douglas, is one. This writer, apparently, has a host of admirers.

"The Struggle for Freedom", by Chester Wilmott, also is getting a fine reception. An appraisal of the present world situation, Miss Delaney describes it as an extremely well done book and worthy of its popularity.

"Escape or Die", by Paul Brickhill, constitutes light, authentic stories of the Royal Air Force and also gets Miss Delaney's as well as the public's, endorsation.

A. J. Cronin, the Englishman, who many years ago set aside his surgeon's scalpel for a typewriter, scores again with his biography "Adventure in Two Worlds." It has its points, Miss Delaney believes, because few men have the talent to make two careers out of one life, an accomplishment Mr. Cronin has managed to achieve, despite the jaundiced eye with which many critics view his literary efforts.

Historical Novels Lead

In straight fiction field, historical novels continue to lead the parade — parade being about the only word one could use after reading Kathleen Winsor's "Forever Amber" of a few years back.

At any rate, "The Silver Chalice," by Thomas Costain, is the most sought after in this realm of endeavor. It has a religious background, Miss Delaney says. "Steamboat Gothic," by Francis Parkington Keyes, deals with the wealth and glamor of southern plantations before the U.S. Civil War. Undoubtedly it oozes moonlight and romance, but it's popular.

Nevertheless, the reading public remains encouragingly discerning, Miss Delaney says. Ernest Hemingway's "Old Man of the Sea," a tremendously powerful short novel, has met with great approval. The same can be said of John Steinback's "East of Eden." This also holds true of Herman Wouk's "The Cain Mutiny," a naval story of World War II.

Lesser lights in the fiction field include "The Far Country," by Neville Shute. This is a love story set in Australia. "The Curve and the Tusk," by Stuart Cloete, portrays the mental struggle between the whites and blacks of Africa—a book whose timeliness may shove it to the best seller lists.

Edna Ferber who, like Mr. Keyes, can dash off a few thousand words before breakfast, gets on the top list with "Janet", a novel with a Texas ranch background. There is one thing about Miss Ferber, she always changes the background—certainly the least she can do for the same old plot.

Travelogues in Demand

Travelogues are always popular, Miss Delaney says, as are books on crafts. There is little demand for poetry, although the devotees of same are consistent patrons.

Miss Delaney hinted that many Belleville readers are taking to their couches these days as "A Few Buttons Missing", the story of a psychiatrist, has found its way into a good many homes. Anything on psychology also excites public interest, she explains.

In addition to the main library, a subsidiary is situated at Queen Elizabeth School to serve the east end population. With books available for both adults and children, that branch is open every Monday and Thursday from 3 to 6 p.m. The reading material is kept entirely up to date, although Miss Delaney revealed some disappointment that parents have not taken greater advantage of its facilities. The children, she says, are using it extensively.

Aside from its literary stock, the Corby Library, also holds a music division. This was set up a few years ago by the Soroptimists Club, which donated $500. The library, which has a basic collection of classics, buys records and lends them out at two cents a day. All money from such rentals goes back to the purchase of new records. Miss Delaney says that eventually children's records may be introduced to supplement the present collection.

An average of 400 books goes out of the library during week days, Miss Delaney states, with an additional 700 leaving on Saturdays. The period from September to April constitutes the heaviest reading months.

Aiding Miss Delaney in serving the Belleville and district reading public are Joyce Watson, in charge of the boys' and girls' library; Wilma Durie, general assistant; Mrs. Margot Hughes, general assistant; Mrs. Kay Belisle, part-time adult assistant; and Maureen Wyatt, Carrol Post and Marilyn Gariepy, all student helpers.

Congregational Meeting

CARMEL CHURCH

Rawdon — Carmel congregational meeting was held in Jubilee Hall on Friday evening with a good attendance. The W.A. members served a potluck supper.

Rev. A. E. Baker, pastor, opened the business meeting with a brief worship service after which he outlined the various duties of church officers as found in the United Church Manual.

The various reports of the organizations were given and each department had a bank balance to carry into 1953.

Officers

The trustees, stewards and elders are elected for life. The session is composed of Harry Brown, clerk; Frank Bailey, Sr., Joseph Grills, Edward Pyear.

Stewards—Charles Bailey, Arthur Pyear, Jack Armstrong, Ernest Grills, Everett Grills, Ray Hagerman and Clayton Stapley.

Church trustees — Frank Bailey, Lorne Brooks, Ernest Carlisle.

The group planned to have a new floor laid in the church this year and some minor repairs to the outside of the two buildings.

BURR'S UNITED CHURCH

Burr's — The annual congregational meeting of Burr's United Church was held at the L.O.L. hall at Allisonville on Tuesday evening. At potluck supper was served by the ladies of the W.A. A collection of over $18 was received.

After the dinner Rev. A. Poulter took charge of the meeting.

The officers of 1952 were returned to office with the addition of Mr. M. Parks to the board of session to fill the vacancy caused in the passing of Mr. George Huffman.

Burr's was asked to become a part of the Wellington charge. A motion taken on this carried. Reports from the various church organizations showed appreciable progress.

Deepest sympathy is extended Mrs. E. Crook and family, Crofton, in the passing of her husband, Mr. Crook, who had been in falling health for some time. Committal took place at Burr's cemetery Tuesday afternoon last. Rev. B. P. Squire officiated.

Mrs. B. P. Squire, Consecon, returned from Rhode Island, on Saturday.

Mrs. E. S. Anderson, Belleville, and Miss Beatrice Williams, Napanee, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr.

Hope to Preserve Historic Abbey From Crumbling

LONDON (Reuters) — Winston Churchill asked Friday for donations of £1 each from 1,000,000 people to keep Westminster Abbey from crumbling.

"Both the monuments and the stonework are falling into decay," the 78-year-old prime minister said at a ceremony launching an appeal for £1,000,000 from persons in the English-speaking world "so that the abbey can be preserved for generations yet to come."

"The soot of London must be cleaned away and the structure restored," he said, standing in the historic Jerusalem chamber adjoining the musty 1,000-year-old grey-walled abbey. "Shall we in this valiant generation allow this building to moulder under our eyes?"

He then dropped a £1 note into the tray in the chamber. The first donation had come from the Queen who will be crowned in the abbey next June 2. Other members of the Royal family also contributed £1 each.

BOLT LEADS GOLFERS

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Tommy Bolt, Maplewood, N.J., sank a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the 17th hole and won the $10,000 Tucson open golf tournament Sunday with a 15-under-par total of 265. He collected $2,000. Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., finished one stroke behind to collect $1,400.

New Rotation Leave Scheme Brings Complete Units Home

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (By Mail) — (CP)— The Canadian Army's new-style rotation sequence has been announced to units, although sailing dates have been withheld from the troops.

Psychology plays as great a part as security in withholding that information, since commanders want to forestall disappointment should timetables have to be altered because of weather or shipping delays.

For the first time units are to be rotated out of Korea as units.

The infantry battalions will be going home in one wave, complete —battalion headquarters, all four rifle companies, and support and headquarters companies. So will the 1st regiment, the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery.

They will be relieved by complete units.

While certain smaller service units also will be rotated as units, most will change over on a man-for-man basis.

First replacements coming to Korea in the upcoming sequence will leave Seattle, Wash., in early March. Major elements will be the 3rd battalion, the Royal Canadian Regiment, 56th transport company, RCASC, and 59th field squadron, RCE.

Units will spend two days in Kure, Japan, being processed, and then proceed to Korea.

After turn-overs of equipment and stores have taken place the relieved units will sail from Pusan to Kure, where they will spend five days being processed and doing their last-minute shopping for home.

Going home early in the second week of April will be the 1st battalion, RCR, the 37th transport company, RCASC, and 23rd field squadron, RCE.

The second wave coming over from Seattle will comprise the 3rd battalion, the Royal 22nd Regiment, the 81st Field Regiment, RCA, and the 38th field ambulance, RCAMC.

After being relieved in Korea and going through the same process the first departing wave did, the 1st battalion, Royal 22nd, the 1st regiment, RCHA, and the 37th field ambulance, RCAMC, will sail from Yokohama late in April.

There will be another similar sailing early in May of smaller units among the services attached to the brigade, who will have been relieved by counterpart units leaving Seattle early in April.

"B" squadron of Lord Strathcona's Horse will be with the last wave, leaving Yokohama in early June after relief by "A" squadron, which leaves Seattle with other replacement units in May.

Throughout the whole move 200 men a month will be returning to Canada by air, after being relieved in their units on a man-for-man basis.

Anti-Red Leader Of Textile Union Goes to U.S. Job

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Turbulent Sam Baron, Canadian chief of the United Textile Workers of America and one of the stormiest figures in Canadian labor, is moving out of the country.

A few months after negotiating the unprecedented jump from the Canadian leadership of a CIO textiles union to the same job in an AFL union, Baron is going back to the United States in another job with the UTWA.

He will be leaving behind him a record of personal and union strife as rough as any in recent Canadian labor history. Amiable but tough, Sam, a hot anti-Red, has loved to tangle with the Communists in labor but also has staged running fights with his own union chiefs.

One upshot of his intra-union scrapping was that in 1951 he was fired out of the Canadian directorship of the Textile Workers Union of America (CIO-CCL), as the result of feuding with the international president, Emil Rieve of Washington.

Baron bounced back from that last year to move into the Montreal office of R. Kent Rowley, leftist Canadian director of the AFL-TLC United Textile Workers of America after the UTWA had staged an anti-Red purge of its Canadian leadership.

Union informants here were in some doubt as to who would succeed Baron as Canadian boss of the small—about 6,800-members—but active and vocal UTWA, which once was a centre of Canadian union Communist activity.

According to information here, there was a good chance the job would be split between Roger Provost, Quebec-Maritimes director of the union and president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, and Jack Robinson, Ontario director.

Labor quarters here said that, should a single director be appointed, it was likely Provost would be the man.

There was no immediate word in Montreal from Baron.

One of the outcomes of a Baron scrap was the sudden resignation in late 1951 of Pat Conroy as secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Congress of Labor. Conroy pulled out of his CCL job, when as he interpreted it, the CCL convention in Vancouver voted lack of confidence in him by not backing his support of Baron for a post on the CCL executive.

That scrap, involving much backroom operating, eventually had an impact on the selection of new union heads elsewhere. After it, Baron fought his own president in an international convention and then moved out of the CCL union to take over the UTWA.

District President Visits Melrose W.I.

Mrs. M. Lazier was hostess for the January meeting of Melrose W.I., which opened in the usual manner with Mrs. A. English presiding. The roll call "The Talent I Would Like to Possess", was answered by 22 members and three visitors.

The short course "Home Care of the Sick", is to be held next Thursday and Friday at the home of Mrs. C. Hagerman.

Mrs. R. Robson, district president, gave an interesting talk on "Citizenship" mentioning the pioneer days of our forefathers and an article on moving a mining town from Sheridan to Lynn Lake via "Cats".

Mrs. C. Bates gave the motto, "When you're in hot water up to your neck, be like the tea-kettle sing."

Mrs. C. Osborne read the origin of the thimble. A reading, "Starting the Week Right" was read by Mrs. R. MacFarlane. Miss B. MacFarlane gave a paper on Canada's future.

Mrs. F. Bush and Mrs. R. McLaren demonstrated fancy sandwiches which proved to be tasty as well as dainty.

Women's Institute

PINE GROVE W.I.

Pine Grove Women's Institute met for its regular monthly meeting at Mrs. A. Finkle's home. The president, Mrs. H. Detlor, presided, and 13 members, one visitor and five children were in attendance.

The provincial president's letter was read, noting that conveners of Home Economics and Health and Resolutions are to attend the Guelph conference this year.

It was decided to make a donation to the Canadian Mental Health Association rather than conducting a penny round-up.

A canvass is to be made in aid of the National Institute for the Blind's new home.

The films on the Royal Journey will be shown on March 10 rather than February 10, as previously announced.

A pie social was planned for February 20 under the convenership of Mrs. L. Finkle, with Mrs. W. Slater, Mrs. H. Coulter and Mrs. J. Brown as a committee.

Mrs. F. Finkle, convener of Historical Research and Current Events, took charge of the program.

Mrs. Finkle gave a paper on "Out of the Past — Courage, Unity and Service," stressing the fact that though the pioneer forefathers had few or none of today's luxuries, they had in abundance love, loyalty, faith, courage and their principles are carried on today, enriching the land of their birth. All the present and the future depends on the past, which has been an honorable one.

Wedding Anniversary

An account of the 68th. wedding anniversary of Daniel and Lucy Vanderwater, grandparents of Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, was read from an old family scrapbook.

"Grandma—Now and Then" — Mrs. C. Ross; "I Don't Envy Them a Bit," May Finkle.

A report on the Folk School, which she had attended at Mr and Mrs. E. Prindle's home, January 23-26, was given by Miss Barbara Brown. The theme was "Developing Leaders in Hastings County."

Mrs. H. Coulter reported on the Ontario Federation of Agriculture convention held in Toronto on January 6 - 8.

After the meeting concluded refreshments were served and a social half-hour enjoyed.

Coronation Details Carefully Planned To Avoid Awkward Moments of Past

The Queen, reading the history of past coronations in England, may be thankful that her own on June 2 is being so carefully organized that few hitches or awkward incidents are likely to happen. During the nine centuries that kings and queens of England have been crowned in Westminster Abbey, coronations have rarely gone smoothly. When Queen Victoria was crowned, the 19-year-old monarch said later that the bishop was "remarkably maladroit" and the archbishop "confused and knew nothing." The present Queen can rest assured that no such predicament will occur on June 2. The whole complicated ceremony is being prepared with the precision of a military operation. Furthermore, as heir-presumptive, she was an attentive onlooker at the coronation of her parents, as shown above. — Central Press Canadian.

Irish Canadian Girl Has Heavy Job in Britain

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Pocket-sized Geraldine McDonnell, 24-year-old Irish Canadian from Vancouver, has a man-sized job in Britain.

Miss McDonnell, just five feet two inches, is a "remedial gymnast" in a provincial hospital near London. Her job is to help, by exercise, those who have lost the use of their limbs. She takes persons made helpless by arthritis and infantile paralysis and tries to teach them to walk again.

"We move in after physiotherapists have applied lamp treatment and other remedies," Miss McDonnell said in an interview. She is the first woman to serve as a gymnast in this hospital, and there aren't many anywhere. Men outnumber women in this field of medicine because of the strength needed.

Yorkshire School

The first school for remedial gymnasts in Britain was established last October at Wakefield, Yorkshire. So far the only course has been for men only—the first women's course is scheduled for June or "perhaps later."

Dark-haired Geraldine, a colleen with Irish-blue eyes, is entered for the course. And she's hoping that its pioneer qualities will not result in an indefinite starting date. She wants to return to Canada with a new career.

Geraldine, Vancouver - born, sarted her working life in Canada as an English and games mistress at high schools in Nelson, B.C. She didn't care much for teaching, so, when an opportunity presented itself, she jumped at the chance of a medical career. Her only brother is a doctor at Vanderhoof, B.C., her father retired from a first-aid job in a prison hospital, and her ancestors were doctors in Ireland.

Before returning to Canada, she has to spend nearly two years in Britain. "By then I'll be thoroughly homesick," she said with a laugh. She's already missing her folks at South Burnaby, B.C. Meantime she enjoys life in Britain and the continent, having returned recently from a Christmas holiday in Paris with a Vancouver girl friend, Nancy Bowell, who works with the United Nations in Geneva.

TO TEST ATOMIC SHELLS

FT. SILL, Okla. (AP) — The United States Army's huge 280-millimetre cannon will be used to fire atomic shells at the Nevada proving grounds this spring after crews are trained here. Maj.-Gen. A. M. Harper, commandant of the artillery centre, said the gun can fire both conventional and atomic shells.

WILL ACQUIRE STOCK

Opera Festival To Have Interest For Canadians

TORONTO (CP)—The fourth annual opera festival which opens here Feb. 11 will have interest for families spread all across Canada. Members of the Royal Conservatory Opera Company include top-ranking singers who come from many parts of the country.

On opening night, when Giacomo Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" will be presented, with the governor-general in attendance, the leading role of Cio Cio San will be sung by Irene Salemka, whose parents still live in Weyburn, Sask. Irene, now studying in Montreal, was brought here for the role and will sing opposite James Shields, who was brought up in Vineland, Ont. Joan Hall who sings Suzuki comes from Winnipeg and Sharpless will be sung by Irene Bouchard of Ottawa.

Two former Winnipeg girls, Louise Roy and Mary Morrison, will alternate as Fiordiligi in Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" with Sylvia Grant of Calgary singing Dorabella. Ferrando is being sung by Edward Johnson, a former Hamilton tenor who has been studying in New York, and Guglielmo by Donald Garrard of Vancouver. Andrew McMillan, whose parents live in Montreal, will alternate with Jan Rubes as Alfonso.

A new departure for the company will be the presentation of "The Consul," the third work on the festival program. It is a contemporary opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti which had a successful Broadway run and has dramatic as well as musical appeal.

All the singers of leading roles are professionals and paid as such, while the chorus is made up of undergraduates at opera school of the Royal Conservatory of Music.

Members of the Opera Festival Association, who have taken over the administration of the opera company, feel that since it can attract capacity houses for 10 days with full-scale operatic productions, they have the beginning of what might be in the future a truly national opera company.

Women's Activities

ZION W.A.

Marmora — The W.A. of Zion United Church, North Marmora, recently held its January meeting at the home of Mrs. Edward Robinson, following a potluck dinner. Mrs. George Fox, president, presided for the session.

The meeting opened in the customary manner followed by the Missionary program. Mrs. Fox read the call to worship. Mrs. K. J Crawford took the Scripture reading. Mrs. Gordon Moffat gave program four of the study book, Healing and Health.

Following the transaction of items of general business, Mrs. Crawford closed the meeting.

During the day, two quilts were quilted for the mission work of the asociation. The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George Fox.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

A Husband With Unpredictable Moods

If a man is mean all the time, at least his wife knows where she is and what she is up against. But to be married to a creature of unpredictable moods, especially when it is impossible to determine the reason for any one of them, is, to my way of thinking, even more trying.

A wife of 23, who has a six-year-old child, acquired this sort of husband in a second marriage. What happened to her first husband, who was the father of the little girl, she does not reveal, but about the second, she says:

"At times he is just as sweet and wonderful as he can be, and at other times he is downright hateful. He starts making a scene and calling me names the minute he comes home from work. He knocks the child around as though she were a ragdoll yet she worships the ground he walks on. He accuses me of things I'd never dream of doing, and he says I'm lazy, which I don't think is true either. He goes out a lot alone but, on the other hand, he does take me out with him a lot, too. The funny thing is, that at home he'll say bad things to me, and then, when we go out, he talks about me as though I were the most wonderful girl on earth.

Mixed Up

"I've tried to talk to him and find out just what makes him act this way, but it does no good. He says he loves me or he wouldn't be living with me. I have become so mixed up that half the time I don't know what I am doing. I never know what he is going to say or whether he is doing it to get mad at something I do."

Now there are so many reasons why a person is unpredictable in moods and reactions that it would be useless for me to try to guess the cause for this man's behavior.

It might be that he is one of those people who have never grown up emotionally, and so he has never learned to control his feelings. Hence, he acts exactly in the spirit of the way he happens to feel at any given moment. It might be that he has something on his conscience that bothers him, and so he takes out on his wife his rage at himself. It is so much more comfortable to act as though someone else were at fault than to keep remembering one's own guilt. It might also be that he resents either consciously or unconsciously, having to take over the support of another man's child. This would also explain his violence toward the little girl.

Whatever the cause, I don't think that any such situation will ever improve if a wife simply goes on accepting it, willingly or unwillingly. This doesn't mean that she should necessarily leave her husband. It does mean that she should assert herself in a firm and self-respcting way. And a firm and self-respecting way is, not to keep snapping back at him when he says insulting things and calls names, but to tell him quietly, but definitely, that she will not put up with that sort of thing any longer.

Try to Find Solution

She might tell him, some time when she can make an opportunity to bring it up in one of his better moods, that if there is anything in the home, or in their relationship, that disturbs him and makes him unhappy, she thinks they should discuss it and make any necessary adjustments. She might even suggest that she assume the support of the child herself by getting work to do on the outside. His reaction to that suggestion would undoubtedly give away his real feeling on this subject. And she should tell him that she has become so unhappy with him that she does not feel she can go on unless he is willing to co-operate in making a happy home. Then, for the time being, she might carry that thought no further, but simply leave it to simmer in his mind.

From that point, let he go on in her usual way as cheerfully and patiently as possible and await developments. While it is perfectly possible that there may be no change at all, it is also possible that the results may be better than she thinks. In any event, she will have the satisfaction of having taken some definite action, which eventually might lead the way toward future definite action, if that should become necessary.

TOKYO DEFENCE BUDGET

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will spend 2.6 per cent of her national income for defence in the fiscal year starting April 1 if the Diet approves the budget bill submitted Friday. The 960,561,000,000 yen ($2,668,000,000) budget includes 83,000,000 yen for the national safety agency defence department and 62,000,000 yen as Japans share of expenses for garrisoning U. S. security forces.

Potatoes and Parsley Are Quality Foods

By Mary Moore

A man said "You should eat the parsley and send the steak back—instead of eating the steak and leaving the parsley."

He said this because parsley is so high in vitamins it has four times as many as its closest vitamin-bearing competitors. It outclasses all vitamin A foods and is extremely high in vitamin C, which is scarce in Canadian grown foods available in winter. We acquire most of our vitamin C from citrus fruits, but parsley has it is abundance.

This lecturer is a noted physicist and knows his vegetable analysis but just the same my name's Moon Mullins if I'll send a steak back to any kitchen and just munch on parsley. Emily Posts says we should eat our parsley so that ought to settle that.

I weary though over trying to convert folks to eating it. It must be because parsley is so cheap and easy to grow that they spurn it.

Now is the ideal time to start a little pot growing in the kitchen window; then you can snip it off as it branches out, for your salads every night. Or buy a big bunch and be sure to give everybody in the family some every day. It is easy to work it into the cooking too. Notice the following recipes.

And another thing—the best part of a potato is just under the skin so plan to serve them in the ways best adapted to potatoes cooked in their jackets. Potatoes contain vitamin C in good amounts and vitamin A, B and G in fair amounts. They are rich in minerals. Just see that you do not drain these precious minerals off in the vegetable water.

BASIC POTATO CROQUETTES

Scrub potatoes clean and boil in as little water as possible until very tender. Water should just be evaporated by the time they are done. Rice or mash the peeled potatoes until smooth. To 2 cups mashed potato add 1 teaspoon grated onion, 3-4 teaspon salt, 1-16 teaspoon pepper, 1 or 2 tablespoons very finely chopped parsley and 1 beaten egg. Beat the mixture until very light. If the potatoes are very dry you may want to add 1 or 2 tablespoons milk. Spread on flat dish to chill. Mold into cylinders, balls or cones and roll in flour then in 1 well-beaten egg diluted with 1 tablespoon water, and in fine sifted breadcrumbs. Brown in deep fat at 375 deg. Fahr. turning once. Drain on paper towel.

I called the potato croquettes basic because they do make such a good base for meat croquettes.

MEAT CROQUETTES

Use potato croquette mixture above. Add 1 or 2 cups ground meat. If you use beef add 1 teaspoon each horseradish and Worcestershire sauce. If you use ham add 1 teaspoon prepared mustard. If you use ground fresh cooked pork add 1 or 3 teaspoons drained green pickle relish. If you use chicken add 1-2 teaspoon celery salt or 1 tablespoon extremely finely chopped celery and omit the onion—but always include the parsley. Fry as you would the potato croquettes.

QUARTERED POTATOES IN SPANISH SAUCE

Cook potatoes of even size in boiling water until not quite tender. Peel and carefully cut into quarters. Gently melt 1-4 cup butter and add 1-4 cup each finely chopped green onion tops (or sprouts from old onions) and parsley, 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper and 1 chopped canned pimento. Let these cook slowly for five minutes, then add the quartered potatoes. Cook gently for 10 minutes, turning potatoes over once. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, turn out into hot serving dish, and pour over them the sauce remaining in pan.

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

Bake 6 medium-large potatoes which have been scrubbed well, at 475 deg. Fahr. Very high heat makes baked potatoes fluffy. Cut large cross in top, scoop out insides and add to them, 1-4 cup hot milk, 2 tablespoons butter or fat, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper and 1-8 teaspoon paprika—and guess what?—2 tablespoons parsley. Mash and beat until light. Refill potato skins. Dot with butter or sprinkle with grated cheese. Brown and reheat at 350 deg. Fahr.

THE SPRING BRIDE is going to be dreamy in a soft, foamy, debutante type of wedding gown. A hip yoke and side panels of lace, over a full-blown skirt of nylon tulle and satin, makes for a beautiful wedding gown. Wide scalloped lace makes the long, pointed sleeves as well as the snug bodice.

COMING UP in the millinery picture is the little all-ribbon hat, so nice and soft to wear, and so packable. Narrow, ombred ribbon, in tones of red to purple, makes a pretty profile cap, with the ribbon twisted in rolls at either side to form little textured rosettes.

APRIL SHOWERS will sprinkle down on lovely raincoats. A beauty is a reversible taffeta raincoat, one side in a gold print motif, the other solid. The coat has large push-up sleeves, and a removable helmet cape.

COLOR gleams in smart at-home fashions. Shocking pink is the color chosen for a handsome costume. The top is a cashmere sweater blouse with a tiny collar of flowered French brocade bound in satin and tied with long ends to match the satin, instep-length skirt which has a circular cut.

ALWAYS FRESH, and capable of many variations, is black and white. A beautiful floor-length evening gown is of white chiffon, with a wide girdle and broad halter straps of black velvet. The softly curved bodice dips to a cleavage point and is intricately tucked. The skirt falls in soft, well-defined folds.

THE SLIM LINE marks important gains in the spring coat showings. The narrow-full-length silhouette is used by one designer for a handsome coat with push-up sleeves and an intricately-handled collarless neckline, which, like the rest of the coat, is outlined with upholstery braid. The coat is of brushed white wool.

COULD BALANCE BUDGET

WASHINGTON, (AP) — The Chamber of Commerce says United States government spending can be cut by $10,600,000,000 from former President Truman's estimates for the next fiscal year—more than enough to eliminate the predicted deficit. The chamber proposed in a report Thursday night that the federal government limit spending to $68,000,000,000.

Raids by Chinese Nationalists On China Coast Paying Off

By FRED HAMPSON

HONG KONG (AP)—It begins to look as though the raids of Chinese Nationalist guerrillas on the coast of Communist China are paying off.

The Communists are diverting more troops into unprofitable, unwelcome and expensive guard duty which takes manpower and money away from Korea and the Communist effort to industrialize at home.

Red defence forces along the coast were nominal until mysterious guerrilla raids from the sea started about a year ago.

"Guerrillas from the sea" sounded to Hong Kong ears like something out of an opium pipe. No one except the Nationalist newspapers paid much attention to them until the Communists began to impose martial law on coastal areas, rounding up hundreds of "Nationalist sympathizers" and closing roads to all except the military.

Raids Follow Pattern

The raids followed a pattern. Small bands of expertly-trained men would land at night on an undefended point near a small Red garrison. The raiders would overwhelm the garrison, nab a few arms, prisoners and food, and leave. Usually they were reported operating from three small gunboats with landing craft.

Formosa, Chiang Kai-shek's island bastion, said nothing. Since the start of the Korean war, the U.S. 7th fleet has patroled Formosan waters to see that both Reds and Nationalists stayed on their own sides.

As the Korean war dragged on and the Reds stalled at the truce table, Chiang's men on Formosa learned the amphibious arts. There were more frequent appearances of the sea guerrillas and their gunboats.

Red coastal defences became jittery and called for reinforcements.

Three months ago, the guerrillas threw a Sunday punch. They pulled a smashing raid that may have been almost division strength (about 10,000 men) and came back to their island base with 800 captives. Incidentally, the base was not Formosa.

A Lot of Men

A division is a lot of men to put on the water and bring to bear silently and quickly. They struck Nanjih Island, north of Quemoy, part of the Communist coastal defense network, and in three days of heavy fighting reported 2,000 Reds killed including the commander of the Communist 83rd division.

With 800 prisoners who have been counted and interviewed by neutral observers including correspondents, the pretense that Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists had nothing to do with the raids wears pretty thin.

But attitudes have changed. The feeling here is that if Chiang can raid, let him. If he can invade, let him try.

The talk appears to be slipping from "raid" to "invasion" in 1953. This is partly a hope stemming from a "more aggressive" Asian policy expected of the new Eisenhower administration, in some quarters. It doesn't look like a solid hope yet.

The Communists seem definitely to fear invasion, possibly because they cannot trust their coastal population.

From Communism To Catholicism

Aldo Togliatti (above), son of Italy's top Communist, Palmiro Togliatti, has deserted the Reds and embraced the Catholic faith, according to reports from Rome. His conversion, it was said, came when his father left his mother, Rita Montagnana. The reports said Aldo is planning to enter the priesthood. — Central Press Canadian.

MADOC

Madoc — The third annual united two weeks of prayer effort, sponsored by the Madoc and Elzevir Sunday School Association was held this year from January 11th. to 25th. in Trinity United Church, Madoc, with good crowds in attendance.

The first speaker, from January 11th. to 16th. was Rev. Gordon Mill, of the Pentecostal Assemblies, Kingston, who is well known as the radio pastor of "Gospel Echoes", each Sunday at 2:05 p.m. over CKWS, Kingston.

Mr. Mill is a talented concert pianist, and his solos were a highlight of each service, while his varied experience in pastoral work brought many interesting illustrations.

Topics - Contents

A brief synopsis of topics and contents follows: "The necessity and consequence of seeking God", brought to the attention that it was not vain to seek God, for He would answer prayer. "The Necessity of the New Birth" showed that a re-birth is necessary before one can enter the kingdom of God." "The Impact of Truth" revealed the fact that if man would only face the truth instead of trying to run away from it, then God would be allowed to rule the life. "Having and Not Possessing", illustrated that it is not enough to have within one's grasp the truth of God's salvation, but one must appropriate this to his or her life, for it is as hopeless to be lost within sight of the goal as it would be a million miles from it. "The Authenticity of the Scriptures" was portrayed, using recent happenings in the world to show that Scripture is still being fulfilled.

Great Inspiration

The second speaker from January 18th. to 25th., was Rev. Alan Ferry, of Old Davenport Rd. United Church, Toronto, whose wide experience in the study of chemistry, medicine and theology, along with his years of military service, proved a source of great inpiration as he unfolded the marvellous working of God in his life. The first message, "The Need for Evangelism,' pointed out the necessity of not being absorbed with prophecy, although the condition of the world would lead one to think that Christ's return was eminent, but the need for evangelism, which would fit men for Christ's return. "Can God?" was an enlightening discource on the power of God, proving that He is ready to do His part. "What Must I Do to be Saved?" presented man's part in the plan of God which was to be entirely God's, not withholding any part of his life of possessions. "The Three R's of Salvation", repentance of sin, remission of sin and reception of the Holy Spirit," portrayed each member of the human race on the wrong track in need of salvation, with a wonderful deliverance provided. "The Necessity of the New Birth" was a message given as the life story of the speaker, Mr. Ferry, who, although he was a religious man for some time, discovered the necessity for a personal acquaintance with Jesus Christ. "The prodigal gave an insight into the life led by the modern prodigal. "The Way, the Truth and the Life", the closing message, showed that only in the true religion of Jesus Christ is found the true way to eternal life.

Highlights of Campaign

Two highlights of the campaign were the Friday evening services, when on the first Friday night the Revivalaires Quartet, from Peterborough, rendered special numbers, and the last Friday, Mr. Ferry spoke particularly to young people pointing out to them that the only power that can keep them from the sin and evil of this present age is the power of Jesus Christ in the life.

The participating choirs were Trinity United; St. Peter's Presbyterian; Salvation Army; Tweed Holiness Movement; Standard; Pentecostal; Queensboro United; Eldorado and Union and Trinity United Junior choir. The song leaders and chairmen were: Rev. J. F. Lane, Rev. M. Heslip, Rev. F. McPhail, Rev. H. Lewis, Rev. R. Walsh, Rev. L. Pace, Rev. J. Poynter, Miss Janet Rodgers, Mr. Allan Sagar, who is president of the Sunday School Association, and Mr. Allan Ketcheson, honorary president.

Scene of Korea's Controversial "Operation Smack"

Artillerymen are seen swinging into action on a Communist outpost during the controversial "Operation Smack" in Korea. U. S. congressmen criticized the "theatrical aspects" of the 150-man raid on Spud Hill in which three U.S. soldiers were killed and 61 wounded. The operation, which was witnessed by field commanders and newspapermen, was defended by the Eighth Army's retiring commander, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, who stated that it was in no way designed as a demonstration for spectator benefits. He added the raid was fully justified, well planned, but imperfectly executed. The attackers did succeed in destroying Chinese Red bunkers, killing from 13 to 38 Reds and wounding many more. — Central Press Canadian.

SYNOPSIS OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE ZONING BY-LAW NO. 6443 AND AMENDMENTS THERETO.

NOTE: The Land Use Plan on the opposite page has been amended by the elimination of the "C" Local Business District at Bertram Blvd. and Victoria Avenue. The Districts presently shown as "D, E, F & G" on the plan now become "C, D, E and F" respectively.

SECTION 1. General. Declares that the published land use plan with amendments is part of this by-law.

The City is divided into six classes of districts as shown on the plan: the classes are designated as follows:—

A. One and Two Family Dwelling District
B. Multiple Dwelling District
C. General Business District
D. Commercial District
E. & F. Industrial Districts.

1:4 That this by-law shall not apply to any land or building which on the day of the passing of this by-law is used for any purpose prohibited by this by-law.

Does not prohibit the use of building lots having a lesser frontage or area than is required by this by-law providing the ownership has been registered before the passing of this by-law.

Prohibits the use of cellars, garages or similar buildings for the purpose of living quarters.

No dwelling shall have an inside floor area of less than 380 sq. ft.

LOADING SPACES. In any district whenever a building is erected or altered for a use which involves the frequent shipping of passengers or goods, LOADING SPACE shall be provided according to the floor area of the building as follows:—

Floor Area	No. of Loading Spaces
3,000 sq. ft. or less	None
3,001 sq. ft. up to 23,000 square feet	1
23,000 sq. ft. up to 43,000 square feet	2

In England, particularly, grim-faced officials feared that many more residents along the eastern coast had been swept out to sea.

Millions of Dollars Loss

The money cost of the week-end disaster—one of the worst in Europe's peacetime history—ran into uncounted millions of dollars.

In the Netherlands, hundreds of persons were still stranded on rooftops and in trees as today dawned bleakly over a scene of devastation unparalleled in the country's history. The death toll was expected to pass the 400 mark before nightfall.

Troops were rushed to help and those on leave were summoned back to emergency duty. The Netherlands' Queen Juliana and her 72-year-old mother, former Queen Wilhelmina, went to the flood area this morning to comfort the stricken.

English lowlands from the mouth of the Thames north to Yorkshire—the land called East Anglia—were flooded by water six feet deep. The water coursed as far inland as three miles.

30 Bodies Recovered

England's hardest-hit spot appeared to be Canvey Island, 25 miles down the Thames from London. After 30 bodies were recovered there, police superintendent W. S. Pope said at least casualties could be expected and some 5,000 persons would have to be evacuated. Island residents clung to rooftops or trees for hours until they were saved, or fell exhausted into the turbulent waters.

Thousands of British and American service men and rescue teams worked around the clock to remove survivors. Tens of thousands were removed from coastal towns.

The flood even reached London as the Thames at high tide pushed into the streets of Putney, a southwest suburb. Water lapped at the base of Cleopatra's Needle, the ancient Egyptian obelisk standing on the embankment in the capital's heart.

Reports of horror, death and destruction came from all along the east coast. Snettisham, Norfolk, reported 20 missing and five known dead. The Suffolk resort of Felixstowe counted 17 dead.

Several Thousand Evacuated

At Mablethorpe and Sutton-On-Sea several thousand were evacuated. A Lincolnshire police superintendent estimated homes of 5,000 to 6,000 persons had been flooded on a 20 - mile stretch of coast. The waves carried away concrete and steel walls 20 feet high.

Cley, in Norfolk, was under eight feet of water and many houses were swept out to sea. The Norfolk fishing port of Yarmouth reported eight dead. Dead cattle floated through the ancient streets of Aldeburgh, picturesque Suffolk fishing village and tourist spot.

Health authorities were busy trying to prevent outbreaks of typhoid and other diseases as the thousands of refugees poured inland.

Sub Sinks at Dock

At Sheerness, Kent, the 1,000-ton submarine Sirdar sank at its dock and another Royal Navy ship, the 1,100-ton frigate Berkeley Castle, capsized. There were no casualties. Yachts and fishing craft were smashed against the sea walls or carried inland.

Among the 40 believed dead near Hunstanton, on the North Sea coast of Lincolnshire, were six Americans from the United States bomber base at Scunthorpe. Eight others were listed as missing.

In The Netherlands, and Belgium, the death roll mounted rapidly as the stricken little countries mustered their resources to meet mounting dangers of disease and starvation. Search teams still were unable to contact many flooded areas.

The Dutch weather bureau warned that high winds today would continue to threaten the broken dikes. In Britain, the forecast was for fresh winds tending to "moderate slowly."

Dikes Breached

Breaching Holland's historic dikes in countless places, the floodwaters poured inland as much as 40 miles at some points. Hardest hit were the provinces of Zeeland and Northern Brabant in southern Holland, the Frisian isle of Texel, and the Island of Walcheren, at the mouth of the West Scheldt.

At some points the swirling floods were 30 feet deep. Farmers faced months and years of hard toil to reclaim the salt-damaged acres for agriculture.

Authorities estimated that areas populated by 4,000,000 Dutch and Belgians were flooded. Both countries proclaimed a state of emergency.

The waters poured south into Belgium, flooding even wider areas of Flanders and turning the great port of Antwerp into a city of confusion. Telephones and electric lights were knocked out. Ships in drydocks were overturned.

More than 50 cities and towns called for emergency aid. Emergency radio circuits crackled with a confused jumble of calls for aid.

55 Reported Dead

In Graveldeel — population 5,316 —55 were reported dead. To the west, the twin islands of Goeree and Over-Flakkee reported 40 casualties and asked for a big steamer to evacuate the population.

So far, 32 drowned had been reported from the islands of Zeeland province. Some of these islands still were cut off from the outside. Nord Beveland—more than 60 square miles in area—was said to be totally under water. Another Zeeland island, Schouwen-Duiveland, also was out of touch.

Thousands of Dutch and Belgians tried to plug the gaping holes in the dikes with sandbags or fought their way through the swirling, near-freezing waters seeking survivors. Many were drowned in their homes before they could escape.

Britain Sends Aid

Two battalions of French Army engineers were dispatched to the stricken lowlands. Despite its own catastrophe across the channel, Britain's Royal Navy ordered four helicopters to Valkenberg, the Netherlands, to assist.

U S. Army forces in Germany sent a group of engineers and a small survey team. Lt.-Gen. Manton X. Eddy, U. S. Army commander in chief in Europe, planned to follow up with a flying visit to see what help his forces could give.

Premier Willem Drees summoned the Dutch cabinet into emergency session.

DULLES MEETS

The French fear the new policy toward Formosa waters might the hard-pressed French forces mean the U. S. is thinking of putting Chinese Nationalists into the Korean war. In that event, the French fear Communist China might send troops to help the Communist-led Vietminh fighting in Indo-China. The Chinese Reds already are helping the Vietminh rebels with arms and supplies.

-Dulles, on the other hand, wants to find out from the French what they intend to do about getting Western European unity working.

French Are Wary

The French have been wary of the proposed European defence community, which would rearm West Germany to help defend Western Europe. French leaders thought up the plan in the first place, but stalled after giving it a second look.

In a radio address Sunday, Dulles saluted French leaders for inspiring the "constructive and imaginative" Schuman coal-steel plan and the EDC. But he added:

"Such creative thinking and planning has caught the imagination of the American people and we want to know more about your purposes and plans for the future so that we can take them into account in our planning."

ROSSMORE

Rossmore — Sympathy is extended to Mrs. Charles Reddick on the death of her mother, Mrs. Benedict, who passed away in her 93rd. year. She will be greatly missed by her relatives and large circle of friends who knew her as a grand and noble person.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Stier (nee Lorene Ross) are spending their honeymoon in New York.

Mr. J. Empey is in Borden on business.

Mrs. Stephenson has returned home from the hospital and is improving slowly.

The regular weekly euchre was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Empey, Wednesday night. Five tables were at play and prizes awarded according to the score. Mr. E. Anderson won lone hand prize; Mrs. Empey and Mr. Frazer won high prizes and Mrs. Smith and Mr. Ross won low prizes.

RAWDON

Capacity Audience Attends Talent Show

Rawdon — The Silver Jubilee Hall at Carmel United Church in Rawdon township had a capacity audience on Thursday evening, when folks from all nearby points gathered for an evening of entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brooks, who are presidents of the Young Adults (which, by the way, is composed of folks from the crib to the arm chair) and their executive, were in charge of the ararngements and a varied program was greatly enjoyed.

The pastor, the Rev. A. E. Baker, was master of ceremonies and as he handed out words of praise, did a bit of advertising, and announced several coming events which will be of interest to folks in this district.

Local Talent

The local talent from Carmel community was well received. Lyle Couch recited "My Little Bedroom"; Bill Bailey and Paul Jeffs, both pupils at the Williams' School, delighted with a dialogue in costume; Mr. Douglas Pyear sang an Irish song with his mother as accompanist; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown contributed a vocal duet, "Memories," with their daughter as accompanist; Mrs. Arthur Pyear and Miss Verna Brown rendered a piano duet.

The outside talent was as follows:

From Campbellford—Miss Iona Sharp gave a tap dance number in costume and later a vocal solo with her sister as accompanist; Mr. Aubrey Sharp and his sister, Miss Donna Sharp, delighted with a violin and piano selection.

From Burnbrae—Mr. Gerald Taylor delighted with three piano accordion selections and his number was a masterpiece of musical ability.

From Stirling—Miss Heather Rodgers, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, sang two selections with Mrs. A. E. Baker as accompanist; Mr. Wm. Reynolds sang a patriotic selection with Mrs. A. Pyear as accompanist; Mr. William Moynes contributed a piano solo: Mr. X. P. Mayhew sang a couple of selections and played his own accompaniment on his electric guitar; Mr. Jack Bush gave a cornet solo with Mrs. Baker giving piano accompaniment.

From Mount Pleasant — Kalvin and Carol Sharp sang, "Bicycle Built For Two." in costume; Mr. Percy McMullen contributed three readings, one humorous, "Overheard at the Country Club."

From Belleville — "The Quintones", with leader Alf Evans, tenor, Kaye Dalton; baritone, Dick Brettingham, and bass Jack Todds, delighted with a varied selection of rhythm singing, using many old favorites such as plantation medleys, 'Jingle Bells' and 'Blowing Bubbles.'

The program closed with "The Queen," after which the ladies served sandwiches, pickles, pie and coffee. The cast was seated at a long table on the platform and pie was served in abundance.

Mr. Bill Murray manipulated the velvet curtains for the program.

Thanks was tendered to one and all who had assisted with a successful evening.

The Carmel group are planning a church service on May 17th.

HENSLER REMANDED

TORONTO (CP)—Frederick Hensler, of Montreal, charged with stealing a copy of the Currie report from a Montreal printer, was remanded Friday without bail to Feb. 2 on a charge of non-support. His wife, whom he married in Hamilton, and their three young children live in Markham, northeast of Toronto.'

FRANKFORD

FRANKFORD — The annual dance of Franck Lodge No. 127, A.F. & A.M., was held Friday evening in the Community Hall. A large crowd enjoyed a fine evening of dancing to the music of the Commodores Orchestra. The hall was attractively decorated with the Regal Purple and Gold Colors.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Madill of Port Hope visited Mr. and Mrs. Holt Madill this week.

Sorry to hear that Mrs. Bill Rose is confined to her home with the mumps.

Glad to hear that Bruce Jandrew is able to be back on the job once again following his recent illness.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs Hugh Phillips on their blessed event Thursday evening.

A Valentine Dance is to be held in the Batawa Recreation Hall on Friday evening, February 13, with music to be provided by the Oshawa Continentals. The dance is under the sponsorship of the Sacred Heart Catholic Women's League.

Col. Rosco Vanderwater of Chatterton visited friends in Frankford Wednesday afternoon.

The Community Concert Association of Trenton and district is hold its annual membership campaign this week, Feb. 2 to 7, and all persons wishing membership cards this year are requested to contact Gene Lohnes.

Messrs. Clayton Powell and Walter Morrow drove a number of ladies of the Frankford United Church W.M.S. to Cobourg Wednesday to attend the Presbytery meeting of the W.M.S. Those attending were: Mrs. Bert Rowe, Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel, Mrs. Cecil Reid, Mrs. Clayton Powell, Mrs. David Mallory, Mrs. Walter Morrow, Mrs. Holt Madill and Mrs. Fred Charlesworth.

The two senior classes, Frankford United Church, held a skating party Wednesday evening. All met at the church, and from there drove to Stockdale for an hour of skating on the mill pond.

After the skating, all returned to the home of Francis and Barbara Stickle for the balance of the meeting. Hugh Lohnes had the worship service which opened with a Scripture reading. Mr. Jack Williams then spoke to the classes, along the theme of the "Current series of Sunday School Lessons."

Bountiful refreshments were enjoyed, and all agreed that it had been a most pleasant and profitable evening.

CONVICT RACKETEER

NEW YORK. (AP) — Jackie Gross, 26-year-old brother of jailed bookie, Harry Gross, was convicted of perjury Friday by a jury. Jackie was accused of lying to a rackets-probing Brooklyn grand jury which produced evidence to smash his older brother's $20,000,000 - a - year gambling ring. Harry Gross currently is serving a 12-year term for book-making.

HOW DO YOU FEEL RIGHT NOW?

If you never know what it is to feel off-colour and "all dragged-out" then this message is not for you. But if you are like most of us and suffer those days when it's just plain drudgery to keep going . . . then read on. The first thing to remember is that those dull, weary, under-the-weather days are probably unnecessary. Chances are the whole trouble lies in a sluggish system that needs some help. That's where Kruschen can help. Kruschen Salts contain active principles similar to those of well-known Mineral Springs and are just what lazy kidneys need to stimulate action. Kruschen is mild and sure for common constipation too. So altogether they are just the ticket for you the very next day you wake up feeling seedy. Just a tiny dose in your morning coffee. Troops and Volunteers Race To Rescue Hundreds Still Marooned by Flood Waters

LONDON (CP) — The death toll in Britain's greatest peacetime disaster in modern history mounted today as troops and volunteers raced to rescue hundreds still marooned and imperilled by flood waters caused by raging week-end hurricanes.

Rescue workers counted the number of dead at 389 and expressed fear it may hit 1,000. Five hundred persons on Canvey Island in the mouth of the River Thames were unaccounted for.

Scores of bodies, still uncounted, floated among vast seas of debris along Britain's battered east coast. The disaster almost rivalled the terror and severity of the evacuation of Dunkerque and the blitz.

While a great army of troops and civilians rushed by land, sea and air to snatch survivors from possible deaths in new tides, the Queen and Prime Minister Churchill acted quickly on behalf of the stricken country.

Queen Tours District

The Queen toured the stricken Norfolk area by car, talking to pitiful groups of survivors and offering her sympathy and condolence.

Churchill called an emergency cabinet committee meeting and ordered his government to mobilize every means for rescue and rehabilitation.

The week-end of terror struck Saturday afternoon when a howling hurricane sank the British ferry steamer Princess Victoria off Northern Ireland, drowning 132. Only 44 were saved.

News was flashed later that a British trawler had disappeared in the North Sea with 15 aboard.

Then the furious gales whipped up great walls of water which raced southward, slamming through seawalls and dikes along the east coast of England and the west coast of The Netherlands and Belgium.

400 Bodies Recovered

By noon today about 100 bodies had been recovered from the submerged Canvey Island, reclaimed by the sea 300 years ago. More could be seen floating among the branches of trees or lying sprawled on rooftops.

Flood survivors were convoyed to high ground and huddled in emergency quarters. Planes dropped supplies to some isolated rescue centres and all day long the work of barricading against new tides went on.

Rescue workers were hopeful that the gale winds which die down somewhat during the day would not bring fresh disaster with the next tides due tonight.

It may be days, however, before the floodwaters recede enough to permit the great task of rehabilitation—and hunting more dead—to commence.

Farms Ruined for Years

Damage in property alone will run into the tens of millions of dollars—a heavy blow to money-pinched Britain. Inundated farmland may be ruined for two to three years to come by the salt water.

Tales of horror, of heroism and of pathos were common throughout the stricken area.

A rescue worker on the island, his clothes sodden and mudcaked, said: "We are still fighting against time for the living—if there are any. We have no time to bring in the dead."

Faced with the threat of today's tide bringing fresh danger to the island, police today ordered 2,000 persons who had clung to their homes in less flooded parts to evacuate.

Saw Ghastly Sights

Eye - witnesses wading through the brown flood-water saw ghastly sights. The bodies of children lay entangled among the branches of trees—flung there by the vicious waves from the North sea which engulfed the island early Sunday morning.

The bodies of cripples and old persons were brought from cottages, as the rescuers sought any who might still be alive. A choking stench hung over everything.

Stunned men and women tramped across the wooden bridge connecting the island with the mainland, carrying bedding and parcels of food. At their heels trudged small children clasping their dolls.

Small boats and dinghies ferried back and forth, taking survivors off.

All Seeking News

Men and women in tears lined up outside the police station in the mainland town of Benfleet, seeking news of relatives.

The seven-mile-long island, popular with Londoners at summer week-ends, was reclaimed from the sea in 1622. Thousands live there the year round.

All along the east coast, where families have lived with the sea for generations, the week-end was one of terror.

At Salthouse, Norfolk, a 73-year-old woman was swept through her front door to death when a great wave roared through her house. A young mother gave birth to a baby at Mablethorpe while firemen climbed the wall to her flooded home to take her to hospital.

Airmen Aid Rescue

A boy of seven stood in a kitchen sink at Whistable, Kent, with water up to his ears until he was rescued.

At Hunstanton, Norfolk, 400 American airmen aided rescue work in launches and on foot. Their wives cut sandwiches and made coffee for them. Seven airmen have been officially posted as missing.

Hunstanton looked like a ghost town as the floodwaters receded. Blocks of concrete were tossed on to the roads like pebbles.

At dawn today wives and husbands began to search in the wrecked towns for the families they had lost, looking first in the emergency centres for the homeless. Scores of children cried for parents they may never see again.

Cautious police officials listed as dead only bodies actually recovered from the swirling floods.

Prime Minister Praises Speaker Of Parliament

BRANTFORD (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent Saturday night lauded Hon. Ross Macdonald as one of the greatest Speakers the Commons has ever had and as a man who knows when to keep his hat on, even when kings are around.

Speaking at a testimonial dinner in honor of Mr. Macdonald, the chairman of Commons proceedings, the prime minister said no Speaker since Confederation has been greater than he and few have been his peer.

CENTENARIAN DIES

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Peterborough's oldest resident, Mrs. John Corkery, who celebrated her 100th birthday in June, died Sunday. A native of Ireland, she came to Canada with her family as a child. Her husband, John Corkery, postmaster here for many years, died in 1940 at the age of 92.

Revolution In Colonial Countries Leading Objective

By RICHARD O'REGAN

VIENNA (AP)—Western diplomats in Vienna report growing evidence that Moscow apparently has made revolution in colonial countries a leading objective for 1953.

In Africa and the Far East, colonial Communists have been pressing for "independence" from the West and closer ties with Moscow ever since the war. The diplomats say they believe Moscow now has sent out orders for speeding up Communist-led colonial unrest because:

1. It received special attention from a recent meeting of the Communist-run world peace congress in Vienna.

2. Publications of the Cominform have been devoting an unusual number of columns to what is described as the "growing upsurge of national-liberation movements in colonial and dependent countries."

During the Red peace congress, speakers from the colonies of Britain, France, Belgium and the Netherlands used more than half the total time for debate. One after another, Communist representatives from Africa and the countries of the Far East demanded "freedom" from the West.

In the weeks following the congress, Cominform publications have been demanding that colonial Communists make a greater effort to win independence. This evidently means that Moscow feels its greatest hope today lies in the colonies for making inroads into Western defence and unity.

GETS NEW VARSITY POST

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Andrew R. Gordon, noted scientist and member of the defence research board, has been appointed dean of the school of graduate studies at the University of Toronto, President Sidney Smith announced Sunday night. Dr. Gordon, who takes over his new post July 1, succeeds the late Harold Innis. He has been head of the university's chemistry department since 1944.

Buses Checked To Capture Man Wanted by Police

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial, suburban and city police Sunday night checked all buses coming into the city for Ralph Grubisech, 33, of Hamilton and Windsor, wanted by Buffalo police in connection with the slaying of a jeweller last December.

Police stopped and searched the busses on the highway and city police, checked all passengers at the Toronto depot after the suspect's auto was found abandoned near New Hamburg, 12 miles west of Kitchener.

Two other men, Maurice (Digger) O'Dell, 27, and Walter Griffen, 26, are being held at Hamilton awaiting extradition.

Police Set Up Roadblocks To Trap Fugitives

TORONTO (CP)—Provincial police set up roadblocks Saturday east of here in a vain attempt to trap a car which may have been carrying a man and woman wanted in connection with two killings and a bank robbery in Kansas.

It was the second alarm in 24 hours arising from reports the couple was somewhere in the Toronto vicinity. Friday an anonymous caller told police the suspects were in a Toronto restaurant, thereby touching off a search of the district.

The couple are Louis Sturgess, 32, and his blonde companion, Virginia Iser, 20. Local police say they are wanted in connection with a $40,000 bank robbery at Kansas City, Kas. Two days after the robbery a man and a woman were found shot to death near the hold-up scene. Police believe the dead couple were accomplices and were killed to avoid a division of the loot.

A car answering the description of the one the couple is believed driving was reported travelling along the road to Toronto from Oshawa, 25 miles east.

House Refuses To Change Blue Laws

LONDON (AP)—The House of Commons refused Friday to change Britain's ancient, strict and often confusing Sunday blue laws.

By a 281-to-57 vote the House rejected a measure to allow stage performances and professional sports on Sunday. It also defeated, 172 to 164, an amendment asking for appointment of a commission to investigate the whole subject. The balloting cut across party lines.

The Lord's Day Observance Society had presented a petition signed by 512,737 citizens protesting any change in the present statutes, which date back to 1625.

The old laws contain numerous anomalies. It is legal to buy a tooth brush on Sunday but not tooth paste. It is permissible to have shoes repaired but not to buy shoe laces. Many provisions are seldom enforced.

John Parker, Labor member, sponsored the bill.

JOHN FORD HONORED

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John Ford received the Screen Directors Guild 1952 annual award Sunday night for "directorial excellence" of "The Quiet Man." The winner of three Oscars for directing is in Africa on location.

Prisoners Air Views of Inmates At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP)—What do long-term prisoners ponder during their years behind bars?

The answer—locked in the minds of prisoners themselves until three years ago—now is being made public through monthly publications.

Written and edited by the prisoners themselves, these small magazines are also distributed outside prison walls.

At Kingston penitentiary the Tele-Scope, with an all-prisoner staff, airs the views of inmates to their fellows and the rest of the world in some 24 pages every month. The 32-page CB Diamond serves the same purpose at Collins Bay Penitentiary, 10 miles west of here.

They Like Poetry

The Diamond editor says prisoners always send a flood of copy for each issue.

He gets scads of poetry. "Many inmates like writing about bars and stars," he says.

But prisoners express themselves in other literary ways. One-quarter of each issue is sports. There are short stories, monthly features on rehabilitation. two or three editorial and a page devoted to alcoholics anonymous.

Printing and editing departments of both prison newspapers have trouble with staff turnover, of course. When one man's sentence is up, another has to be trained to take his place.

All material for publication is submitted to prison authorities for approval. But the editors and staff are allowed to pick whatever topics they wish for treatment.

Suggestions put forward in the magazines have led to prisoner art exhibitions, literary contests and blood donor clinics inside prison walls.

Although the first penal paper appeared in the United States 70 years ago, such publications are comparatively recent in Canada. They began in this country with the first issue of the Tele-Scope, then a single-page mimeographed sheet of sports news.

FRANKFORD

Stockdale Y. P. U. Elects Officers

FRANKFORD. — The Stockdale Young People's Union held its annual election of officers at a recent meeting in the Stockdale United Church. The new executive is as follows, honorary president, Rev. R. MacEachern; president, Donna Plumpton; vice-president, Harold Pitcher; secretary, Marilyn Snelling; treasurer, Glen Floud; faith and evangelism commission, George Plumpton and Evelyn Plumpton; missions and world outreach, Myrtle Hall and Barbara Walt; stewardship and training, Vera Pitcher and Beverly Forge; citizenship and community service, Bernice Pitcher and Helen McDonald; recreation and culture, Glen Floud, Don Kidd, Edith McDonald, Donna Plumpton and Hazel Cox.

Following the meeting a skating party was enjoyed on Cold Creek. Refreshments were served afterwards in the church basement in the form of good hot chicken noodle soup and biscuits.

Presbytery Skating Party

The first annual Young People's skating party of Cobourg Presbytery of the United Church, was held in Frankford arena last Thursday evening. These skating parties are sponsored in the aid of missions. There was a good crowd on hand, and the contribution to missions will run about $24.00.

Due to Florida weather enjoyed throughout January in the district the ice certaintly wasn't what one would expect at this time of year. The old saying "you just get what you pay for" didn't quite hold true in that case. After literally burning up the ice for two hours, the party sojourned to Stockdale arena (Cold Creek) and the wide open spaces, where skating was really enjoyed for another hour. To date, there has been no report of missing persons, so it may be assumed that no one fell in.

The weekly euchre party was held in the Canadian Legion hall, Tuesday night, with a fair turnout. Under the sponsorship of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion, a fine evening of cards was enjoyed. Ladies' first prize went to Mrs. H. W. Rose, with second going to Mrs. Frank Johnson. Men's first went to Borden Sexsmith, with second going to Don Bates. Cecil Frost was lone hand winner.

Starting next week, there will be a slight increase in price, and refreshments will be served at the close of the games. From now on, no lone hand prize will be given, but a special monthly prize will be given.

The Frankford District Hockey League team held a practice on Tuesday night after skating, and although the team is light in weight, there seems to be some promising talent. Four teams have entered the league, Glen Miller, Johnstown - Centenary Combines, Springbrook and Frankford.

FRANKFORD

S.S. Teachers, Officers Hold 'Mirror' Meeting

FRANKFORD — A special "Mirror Meeting" was held on Wednesday evening in the United Church hall by officers and teachers of the Sunday School. Most of the members came to the hall rather mystified as to what was actually meant on their invitations to the "Mirror Meeting." The purpose of the meeting, as explained by superintendent Sid Martin, was that the Sunday School might look at itself and see if there were improvements to be made and in what departments.

Rev. MacEachern took charge of the worship service. The Scripture passage, taken from Matthew 14 was read. He then read a portion from "Pilgrims Progress," on the story of "Little Faith."

The Mirror

Superintendent Mr. Martin took charge of the meeting. The "Mirror" was a large chart, with ten pages, each page covering a phase of Sunday School work, and each phase being comprised of several questions. As each question was asked, a vote was taken as to whether this point was being properly handled, or whether it required attention. As in any Sunday School, there were many points that were satisfactory, and others which caused rather red faces.

For the points that required attention, those present were requested to jot down comments on those points. On completion of the check, each one present was called on for suggestions for improvement of any points he or she had checked. Many good constructive suggestions were received and action is being taken already in some departments.

The phases considered were: equipment and premises; organization; teaching; knowing the pupils; use of Bibles, worship, the church family; week day activities. witness for Christ and missionary outlook.

Some of the main points considered were: A better follow-up of absentees; the need for more leadership training; a complete revision of the music in the senior Sunday School; class projects; a broader coverage of moral issues in the temperance department; a greater emphasis on the need for full time workers in the church, and a greater knowledge of the world church.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served.

Chief Matchee, One of Few Hereditary Chiefs in Canada

MEADOW LAKE, Sask. (CP)—Chief Matchee, 86-year-old head of a Cree Indian band on the Meadow Lake reserve for a quarter of a century, is one of the few hereditary chiefs remaining in Canada.

The custom among most Indian tribes today is to select a chief every two years. But Matchee's band does not want an election while their beloved chief lives.

Matchee's young mother died at his birth in the lodge of a pagan chief on the Stony Point Cree reserve in northern Manitoba. He was brought up by friends on his father's reserve, soon earning his present name which means "good little hunter."

Recalls Buffalo Hunts

When he grew to manhood, buffalo herds had all but vanished in the wake of mass slaughter by the Indians and white pioneers.

But Matchee recalls how Indian hunters used to ride broadside up to the stampeding buffaloes and attack them with long knives. At the age of seven he attacked a buffalo calf with his own little knife.

A great upholder of the white man's law, Matchee despises the liquor traffic and also Indians who shoot moose out of season. He is interested in the welfare of young Indians, loves little children and is a protector of the aged.

"We were much better off in the old days," he said as he sat in his mud-chinked log cabin on the reserve. "We Indians do not like sweets, but now we eat sweets because we do not get enough meat."

Remembers Victoria

Matchee says he cannot remember all the names of the kings under whom he has served "but I remember Victoria well. She gave us our treaty. She gave us guns, too. Then we threw away our bows and arrows."

He still proudly wears the medal of 1900, presented to hereditary chiefs by King George V, then Duke of Cornwall and York, on a visit to Western Canada. Matchee's father handed down the medal to him.

His leather-brown face breaks into a wide smile when he recalls that dances were what he loved best in the old days.

"We danced nearly every night. We made our own music with drums and rattles, and we had many kinds of dances—the big round dance, the sun dance and the midnight dance."

Matchee suddenly closed the interview with the announcement: "Now I am going to tell you something."

"Once the coyotes were eating everything we had. We loaded all our guns and tied cords to the triggers so the coyotes would shoot themselves. I forgot about it and shot myself in the foot. I had to crawl 10 miles to my me-ka-wa-pwa. (tent) When I got there my knees were just like meat."

Tough Task of Removing Locomotive From Station Basement Finished

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP)—Railroad salvage experts have completed what they think is the toughest job they've ever tackled: getting a 467,000-pound locomotive out of t h ebasement at Washington's Union station.

The last piece of old No. 4876, whh came to a spectacular end Jan. 15, was removed Jan. 27.

Today those responsible for getting her out—J. D. Morris, assistand general manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Sidney Kerl, manager of the Washington Terminal Co., and John F. Swafford, assistant master mechanic for the PRR—told how it was done.

First, let's set the stage.

ton, out of control, roared off the rails at a speed estimated at from 35 to 40 miles an hour. It tore down a steel fence, smashed a news stand, and the engine crossed the crumbling floor of the huge concourse. The floor gave way. Old 4876 had her nose poked through the door into the waiting room when she halted. Her rear end was in the basement.

No one was killed, although more than 40 were injured.

President Eisenhower's inauguration—just five days off—made the job much harder.

The railroaders tidied up the best they could and pulled the wrecked cars out of the station. The engine was dumped completely into the basement and the hole was boarded over.

Then they had to cut the monster to pieces in incredibly cramped quarters.

"There was exactly two inches between the top of the locomotive and the new flooring," Morris said.

"The thing is," Swafford said, "we had to be so careful. If we made a bad move we were liable to knock down a support, and the whole thing would cave in again."

The salvage operation began Jan. 23. By working around the clock the job was done in 4½ days.

No. 4876 was 79 feet, four inches long. The posts in the basement were placed so that nothing wider than 12 feet could be taken out.

Kerl figures the total damage will run well over a $1,000,000. The locomotive's cost is $450,000, and $300,000 worth of equipment was salvaged.

CHARGE SHIP LOOTED

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Three men were remanded Thursday on charges of theft of more than $1,000 worth of radio-telephone and other electrical equipment from the freighter City of Cleveland. They are: Albert Paradis, 19, Arthur Lefleur, 20, and Maurice Brazeau, 25. They were arrested aboard the freighter, moored for the winter at nearby Ojibway on the Detroit river.

Principals in Ike's Decision to Free Chiang

Members of President Eisenhower's top advisory board on war strategy, the national security council, are shown after their first meeting in Washington with the president. Their advice is believed to have contributed to Eisenhower's historic decision to end the neutralizing role of the U.S. Seventh Fleet in the Formosa Strait in order to permit Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese Nationalists to attack the Chinese mainland. The major strategic decision is the first move by the president to fulfil his election promise to end the Korean stalemate. The council members are, left to right: General W. Bedell Smith, head of the Central Intelligence Agency; Allen Dulles, who will take over Smith's job when the former becomes undersecretary of state, and General Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff. — Central Press Canadian Photos.

President Eisenhower is believed to be assured of strong support when he presents his plan to Congress to open the way for Nationalist forays from Formosa against the Communist China mainland. One effect of the move would be to release Chiang's Nationalist soldiers, like those pictured, for commando-type raids and possibly air strikes.

Van Doos Coming Home Want to Be Paratroopers

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (By Mail)—(CP)—More than one-third of the Van Doos due to go home in April don't want to take their home leave when they get there.

They want to become paratroopers, and they want to begin their training right away.

"What's more, they've signed official requests and have asked the army to arrange a special course for them. They say they'll take their 60 days' leave afterward.

The 1st battalion, the Royal 22nd Regiment, like the other 1st battalions of Canada's permanent force units, is a paratroop unit. On returning to Canada it will revert to that role. It is scheduled to sail from Japan during the last week in April.

The spontaneous movement caught on when two subalterns made the original request. They were Lieut. Haldene Merrithew of Queen's county, N.B., and 2nd Lt. Frank P. Fornass, Assiniboia, Sask.

Many Join Unit

They weren't the only ones in the battalion who wanted to remain with it on its return to Canada and yet had not qualified for wings.

Many soldiers joined the unit just before it left for Korea last year. And to brush up on training for the Korea assignment Lt.-Col. Louis Trudeau had halted paratraining the preceding November.

Word of the subalterns' request spread and the men soon began parading before their company commanders with similar requests.

The company commanders went to Trudeau, who said he would ask Brig. M. P. Bogert, commanding the 25th brigade, what could be done.

Bogert said that before putting the request up to Ottawa he wanted official forms drawn up and signed by the men. That was done and the unusual request is going forward.

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon — Cottage prayer meeting last week was held at Mr. and Mrs. Don Cooke's home. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd MacInnes of Holloway, were present and Mr. MacInnes took charge of the meeting and brought a most helpful and inspiring message that was much appreciated by those present. This week the meeting was held at Mr. and Mrs. Delbert McCurdy's home, with Arthur Wilson in charge.

Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Norman and Barry were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ashley.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Fitchett and Billy, of Picton, were Wednesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitchette.

Sarah and Arthur Wilson were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart, of Lakefield, spent Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McCurdy.

Shower

Miss Lois Emerson entertained a large number of young ladies on Friday evening in honor of Miss Muriel Ashley, bride-to-be. Miss Marilyn Fitchett led in community singing. Short readings were given by a number present. Mrs. Carl Bateman read the special address and Muriel was presented with a linen shower. After voicing her appreciation for the gifts, refreshments were served.

Mr. Wilfred Holland, of Kindersley, Sask., spent a few days recently with Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Farrell.

Miss Sarah Wilson spent Tuesday with Mrs. Wesley Farrell, of Moira.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cooke, David and Allan, spent Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. John Ross, of Corbyville.

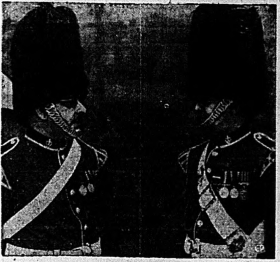
A venture of Christian fellowship was started on Sunday when 22 members of the United Church here journeyed over to Fuller for the afternoon service there in the United Church. It was a surprise attack and the members of Fuller greatly appreciated the visit. The group was much impressed with the new minister, Rev. W. Tyson.

Donna and Sharon Hammond contributed a duet. It was revealed that more of such visits would be beneficial.

LISTED AS SUICIDE

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Coroner C. Everett Kelley Sunday listed as suicide the death of J. Thompson Brown, a director member of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours, Inc., finance committee and a former vice-president of the firm. Kelley said that Brown, 70, was found shot through the head in his home at Montchanin, Del., Saturday night.

Second Coronation



Next June's regal ceremonies in London will be the second coronation attended by two bandsmen of the Royal 22nd Regiment. Sgt.-Maj. Phillipe Di-Marie (left) and S. Sgt. Raymond Pouliot, both of Quebec City, played in the Canadian Army band during the coronation of King George VI. They sail next week to join Canada's North Atlantic Treaty Organization formation in Germany and to participate in the coronation ceremonies of Queen Elizabeth. — (CP from National Defence.)

STOP AMBULANCE SERVICE

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — All but one of Birmingham's Negro funeral homes stopped ambulance service Sunday when a new city ordinance went into effect. The statute requires funeral homes to carry $100,000 personal liability and $5,000 property damage insurance on each ambulance. It applies both to white and Negro ambulances.

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Just what is going on in Ontario Hockey Association circles when the president of the organization takes sides with his town team in its protest against an edict handed down by the executive?

The Oshawa Truckers, admitting their mistake in not turning up for a game here with the Glen Roys on Friday, January 19th., were ordered by the OHA executive to play the game here on Friday, February 6th., and in addition reimburse the Glens $65 for advertising and other out-of-pocket expenses.

Manager Don McNevin was advised by letter from OHA general manager Bill Hanley to this effect and he figured the matter was ended.

Now Oshawa have kicked over the traces saying they won't play the game and OHA president, Stu McTavish is supporting their claim, according to McNevin. Incidentally McTavish lives in Oshawa.

The latest word is that, and get this, Mr. Hanley is thinking the matter over, after handing down the decision of the executive, and is to let McNevin know some time today.

It appears the Oshawa interests discovered they have three games in a row this weekend, the Belleville game included, and thereby hangs their squawks. They have no one to blame but themselves for the situation.

A GOOD ONE!!

Those who missed the exhibition joust between the Junior Hawks and the Toronto St. Michael's Buzzers here Saturday night, and they were not a few, passed up one of the most exciting ice battles of the current season. The Double Blues edged the Hawks 8-7 in a wide-open, free-wheeling display that was eye-pleasing to the last whistle.

The Hawks after a somewhat shaky start when the Irish poked home three goals without a return, got back into the best stride of the year and fired six goals in the double-blue nets before the Toronto crew swung back into scoring action. This they did in lightning-fast offensives and drew within a 6-5 edge at the end of the second period. It was anybody's game from there in and twice the score was tied. The Irish slammed home what proved to be the winner in the last minutes of the game and held off the Hawks' fighting bid until the gong rang.

Dick Duff, 16-year-old centre ice sensation of the Irish, was the star of the tilt, scoring five of the Irish eight goals, two of them on brilliant solo efforts. The youngster hails from Kirkland Lake and is one of a family of 13, the greater part of them hockey players. Duff should cut quite a swath in the hockey trails of the future.

The Hawks came up with a brilliant exhibition, with Henry Therrien, Gilmour, Halstead, Jones and Bobby Green turning in fine efforts. The Hawks' third line of Casey, Brooks and Hermiston did yeoman service and did a fine job holding the Irish lines in check.

Members of both teams were guests of the Knights of Columbus at an informal reception in the K. of C. clubrooms following the match. Coffee and sandwiches were served, and the boys indulged in games until it came time for the visitors to entrain for home.

Father Flanagan, coach of St. Michael's, spoke briefly, thanking the Hawks and Knights for the fine reception and for the fine exhibition of hockey. Bill George, former Belleville resident, now of Toronto, and St. Michael's, was here with Mrs George. Bill also said a few words and voiced some disappointment at the size of the crowd. "We'll come down again," he promised, "and after the fine exhibition displayed tonight, the arena here should be packed."

NEED THIS ONE

The Glen Roys, who haven't been developing any healthy tan of late from the warm smiles of Lady Luck, will be Peterborough-bound by the time this edition reaches the front door. They tangle with the Petes in the Liftlock City tonight and a win for the lads of the Kawarthas will hoist them to within one point of the section second-place Glens.

They're not feeling too happy over the bolt-from-the-blue setback the Petes handed them last Friday night when to all outward appearances they had the game in the bag. But that is hockey. The least-expected happens when you least expect it. And Friday night's verdict was just another proof of the old saying: "The game is never won, lost, or over, until the final whistle blows." How true!

However, the Glens left today with the grim determination to shake the jinx or whatever it is that has dogged their last four or five games. They will be at full strength tonight, with the exception of "Huck" Reeves, still out with that shoulder injury, and the Perdueville gang will know they've been in hockey hassle before the curtain falls.

Meanwhile, lookit what happened over the week-end. The power-packed Oshawa Truckers were handed a fancy shellacking, their worst of the season by the Orillia Pontiacs who zoomed into high gear and whupped the group leaders from the Motor City by a 12-4 score. And down Kingston way, even Mike Rodden's columnar pats on the back failed to save the day for the Goodyears who bowed to the Stouffville Clippers 8-6 with the Clips nipping the Goodies with two goals in the final fourteen seconds of play.

Orillia hopped into a third place overall tie with the Kingston Goodyears, but still trail the Clippers by five points in the western division of the group. Down thisaway, Kingston is clinging precariously to the lead with 22 spots with the Glens two points in the rear and the Petes atrail by three.

RESIGNS AS COACH

Pat Wilson, playing coach for the last two seasons with Stratford Indians of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League, resigned after last Friday night's workout.

Indian president-manager C. H. Meier appointed Lyle Roth, Indian captain, acting coach.

Pat, it will be recalled, was the playing coach of the Belleville Redmen baseball club in 1951 and took them to the Central Ontario League finals, losing out to the Brockville Memos.

Blank Chicago, Trounce Leafs For 2-Point Lead Over Habs; 5 Shutouts in Week-End Play

By CRAIG SWAYZE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Jolly Jack Adams may not be so jolly these days when contemplating National Hockey League action over his recent invasion of referee Red Storey's dressing room. However, you can be sure he isn't wasting too many frowns on the recent antics of his first-place Detroit Red Wings.

The explosive Detroit manager who loves nothing more than winning has cause to smile. His free-wheeling hockey machine is rolling once again.

The Stanley Cup champions, who looked tired last week when they let Montreal Canadiens take over top slot, shifted into high gear during the week-end and pulled off a pair of one-sided victories to resume their familiar role of league leaders.

Scoreless Tie

Blanking Chicago Black Hawks 4-0 Saturday night, the Wings bounced Toronto Maple Leafs 5-1 Sunday. Montreal could manage but a single point in a pair of games against Boston Bruins, who fought Canadiens to a scoreless tie Saturday and then gained a 4-3 Sunday decision.

Meanwhile, the tail-end New York Rangers, who bowed 4-0 to the Leafs Saturday, turned the tables Sunday in Chicago and chalked up a 1-0 shutout over the Hawks.

The wings now hold a two-point edge over the runner-up Montrealers while Toronto is seven points back in third, a game in front of the Chicagoans. Boston holds down fifth, three points down the line, and the trailing Broadway Blues are 25 points off the pace.

Gordie Howe with a pair of goals—his season's total now is 37—and three assists shared honors with goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk in the Detroit Sunday victory.

Sawchuk was hit in the mouth by a shot off Harry Watson early in the game and had to be helped from the ice. However, he returned 20 minutes and 12 stitches later with no apparent difference in his effectiveness.

Alex Delvecchio added two for the Detroit cause, Marcel Pronovost getting the other. Sid Smith notched the lone Toronto goal.

Winger Joe Klukay provided the tying and winning goals in Boston's 4-3 decision over Montreal. The winner came with less than two minutes to play, and all after the Habs had held a 3-0 second period lead.

Leo Labine and Ed Sandford added the other Bruin tallies while Paul Masnick potted a pair for the Montrealers and Bert Olmstead the other.

Rookie Aldo Guidolin combined with George Senick and Don Raleigh to score the lone New York goal at Chicago while Lorne Worsley chalked up his second NHL shutout by turning aside 44 shots in the Ranger nets.

Tony Leswick, Reg Sinclair, Red Kelly, and Howe provided the firepower in Detroit's 4-0 Saturday win over the Hawks. The shutout was Sawchuk's sixth of the season and came as a present to coach Tommy Ivan on his 42nd birthday.

Harry Watson and rookie Eric Nesterenko each netted a pair of goals Saturday night as Toronto blanked Rangers 4-0. The white-wash job was Harry Lumley's seventh of the season and his third consecutive Saturday night of zero goaltending.

Jerry McNeil collected his 8th shutout.

Giant's Star Gets Beating

NEW YORK (AP)—A taxi driver beat Henry (Hank) Thompson, 27, New York Giants baseball player, about the head and face with a sawed-off baseball bat in an argument after a pre-dawn automobile collision Saturday, police reported.

Thompson, a Negro, was taken to hospital, where 14 sutures were required to close his wounds.

Police identified the taxi driver as William Winfrey, 30, also a Negro, and arrested him on a charge of felonious assault.

Reds, Braves Dangle Offers For Kiner

NEW YORK (AP) — If Ralph Kiner, the National League's home-run king for the last seven years, leaves Pittsburgh Pirates he probably will go to Cincinnati Reds or Boston Braves.

Out of the wave of reports circulated during the major-league meetings here last week-end came these two definite facts concerning a deal for the 30-year-old slugger:

1. The Reds have offered Pittsburgh five players, valued by vice-president Gabe Paul of Cincinnati at $300,000, for Kiner.

2. The Braves have handed Branch Rickey, general manager of the Pirates, a long list of players whom they are willing to include in a deal for him.

There were other reports that Brooklyn Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies also were interested, but they were denied by top club officials. And still another had Wid Mathews, personnel director of Chicago Cubs, offering $200,000 for the Pittsburgh star.

The offers of the Reds and Braves fit in with Rickey's pattern of disposing of ailing top-notch players and rebuilding with younger talent.

Rickey declined to say what players.

"Let's put it this way," he said. "A deal for Kiner definitely is contemplated and is nearer completion than 24 hours ago but it will not be completed as soon as another 24 hours.

"I am not interested in cash. I want young players who can help us. That is the only reason Kiner is on the market."

NHL President Holds Judgment On 'Jolly Jawn'

DETROIT (AP)—President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said Saturday night he likely will rule Tuesday in the case of Detroit's general manager, Jack Adams, who is accused of invading the referee's dressing room to argue about officiating here Jan. 18.

Campbell conducted a hearing Saturday, calling in referee Red Storey, who claimed Adams waylaid him en route to the dressing room and then invaded it to protest further.

The NHL president also called in Adams, who insists he thought Storey invited him into the dressing room to discuss his protest further.

St. Michaels Edge Hawks 8-7 In Free-Wheeling Exhibition; Game Best of Junior Season

In a nip-and-tuck battle that could have gone either way, the Toronto St. Michael's Buzzers edged the Belleville Black Hawks 8-7 in a junior "B" exhibition thriller here Saturday night.

The game was the best junior tilt seen here this season with both teams forgetting the exhibitional angle and going all out to grab the victory.

It was fast, clean hockey all the way with both teams maintaining a terrific clip throughout the entire sixty minutes.

The Hawks led the classy Toronto squad 4-3 at the end of the first period, clung to a slim 6-5 margin in the second, but were outscored 3-1 in the final chukker. They fought desperately to tie the count by the Double-Blue defence held out and clung to the one-goal margin.

Duff Stars

Dick Duff, sensational young centre ice star of St. Michael's team, lived up to all advance notices. Rated as one of the best in the Big Six junior group, the 16-year-old youngster turned in a dazzling exhibition, scoring five or his team's eight goals. Two of them were the result of brilliant solo efforts in which he swept through the entire Hawk squad to park the puck behind Bobby Green in the Hawks' net. Villemore with two, and Ratza, were the other goalgetters for the Double Blue.

Henry Therrien, playing one of the best games of the season, sparked the Hawks' offensive, getting three goals and two assists. Delbosco, Jones, Halstead and Gilmour were the other Hawk trigger-men.

Rugged in Spots

The game was rugged in spots with Referees Tim Williams and Dick Fitzpatrick handing out 13 penalties. Stocco and Ratza started a pushing duel that earned them majors while Ratza drew a misconduct sentence.

The Hawks could not get untracked in the first half of the opening period and the speedy St. Mikes' forwards slammed in three goals without a return. The Hawks came to life with Therrien's opening goal at the eleven minute mark and they flashed an offensive that saw Halstead, Jones and "Hammerin' Hank" hit the twine to give them a period 4-3 lead.

They continued their drive in the second period and increased their lead to 6-3 with Delbosco snatching a goal and Therrien completing his hat trick. St. Mikes roared back and before the whistle blew Duff and Green scored to narrow the gap to 6-5.

Both teams cut loose with steaming offensives in the third period and Colvin tied it up after four minutes. Duff staged one of his brilliant solos to give the Double Blue the lead, but Pat Gilmour scored on a passing play with Therrien and Jones to once more tie the count.

Duff proved the hero when he slashed home a pass out from behind the Hawks' net to give the visitors an 8-7 lead, one they never relinquished.

The teams:—

Belleville — Bob Green, Green, Delbosco, Stocco, Brooks, Halstead, Bovay, Jacklin, Jones, Therrien, Gilmour, Hull, Hermiston, Casey, Goyer. Coach: Don Barrett.

St. Mike's Buzzers - Bob Dodds John Pascht (A), Bob Watt, Bill Hope, Jerry-Cronin, Frank Zingrine, Dick Duff, Andre Villemore Ken Linesman, Des Moroney, John Zalay, Bill Colvin, Dave Green, Bryon Jones, Jack Dockeray, Pete Grosso, Ed Ratza, Jean Scanlon. Coach: Father Flanagan.

Barrie Flyers Maintain Hot Pace, Zoom Within 4 Points of Marlies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Those same Barrie Flyers who only 14 days ago were all but counted out of the race for first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series now are within four points of the league-leading Toronto Marlboros.

While the front-running Marlies were losing 4-3 Saturday to Galt Black Hawks and ekeing out a 2-1 Sunday win over St. Catharines Teepees, Hap Emms' aggressive team downed Oshawa Generals 6-3 to keep pace with the league leaders. On top of that they still hold an important game in hand on the Dukes.

Galt Wins

Galt's hard-fought decision over the Marlboros allowed them to hold their fourth-place tie with St. Catharines who drubbed the tail-end Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts 7-3 Saturday night.

Toronto St. Michael's remained alone in third place with a 2-1 Sunday victory over a spirited Guelph, Biltmore crew.

Windsor Spitfires, holding down eighth place, managed only a single goal in a pair of interlocking games with Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association teams.

Saturday night they bowed 4-1 to Three Rivers Reds and Sunday dropped an 8-0 contest to Montreal Canadiens. Quebec Citadelles clipped last-place Montreal Royals 4-1 in the only other week-end JAHA game.

Orv Tessier and Ken Robertson led the Barrie attack against Oshawa with two goals each. Don McKenny and Don Cherry added singletons.

Galt's goals were divided among Jim McBurney, John Sleaver, Ken Wharram and Frank Bettiol while Parker MacDonald, Louie Bendo and Chuck Burns came through for the Dukes.

Brian Cullen paced St. Catharines with two goals, the others going to Billy Haas, Hank Ciesla, Joe Kastelic, Ian Cushanen and Ron Murphy. Greg Hicks netted a pair for the Shirts while Buddy Horne grabbed the other.

Louis Bendo and Gerry James provided Marlboros with their Sunday afternoon punch, Benny Poliziani getting the lone St. Kitts marker. Ed Plata and Paul Knox scored for St. Mike's with Bill Connelly firing the Guelph singleton.

Minor Hockey

The Maple Leafs, Black Hawks and Rangers were victors on the ice Saturday morning in the pee wee games played at the Arena while Red Wings and Canadiens battled to a two-all tie.

Henry and Dickie were goal getters for the Maple Leafs, shutting out the Bruins 2-0. In another shut-out contest, MacDonald, Boulter and Morrow netted the three Black Hawk pucks into the Baron's goal.

In the Rangers-Horn etsgame, E. Dies and Goyer accounted for two goals each and Follwell sank the odd Ranger goal. Asseltine and Lloyd for the Hornets counted the two netters for their team as the Hornets went down to a 5-2 defeat. In the tie game R. Pointer scored both goals for the Red Wings and Lucas and Hull evened it with one each for the Canadiens.

Three games were played in the bantam loop. Canadiens defeated the Bruins 4-2; Rangers were victorious over the Red Wings, 2-1, and the Black Hawks shut out the Maple Leafs 3-0.

McLaurin accounted for three and Murphy one for Canadians and MacDonald and Campbell netted one each for the Bruins. Canning was credited with three assists for the Canadiens.

Rangers two goals were slipped into the mesh off the sticks of Wannamaker and Rowbottom with Deacon adding an assist. The Red Wings goal went to Woods, assist Garrison. Pollard and Green got the three Black Hawk goals with Green getting an assist and McLean, two assists.

CLAIMS FOUR RECORDS

ELGIN, Ill. (AP)—Frank Breen, 38, claims four world horseshoe-pitching records. Pitching two shoes in a six-hour marathon Saturday, Breen tossed 1,362 ringers in 1,774 pitches.

Three other marks came during the session as Breen scored 271 points and 86 ringers in 100 straight shoes, and looped 28 straight ringers.

Eight Teams Will Tee Off In Intercounty

BRANTFORD (CP) — Eight teams in the Intercounty Senior Baseball League will tee off May 15 with a 62-game schedule for each team, equally divided away and at home. All of last year's seven teams were represented here Sunday at a meeting which saw the inclusion of the Oshawa club headed by John Harris.

Other teams are London Majors, St. Thomas Elgins, Galt Terriers, Waterloo Tigers, Guelph Maple Leafs, Kitchener Panthers and Brantford Red Sox.

The vote on admission of Oshawa needed a unanimous decision of the other clubs and after it was decided to play the 62-game schedule with concessions to St. Thomas and London owing to the long travel to Oshawa the club was accepted into the dold.

The entry is for one year only and will have to be brought up again in 1954.

Hornets Cling To AHL Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pittsburgh Hornets are still atop the American Hockey League today but Cleveland Barons moved a step closer during the week-end, taking both their games. Only one point separates the two teams.

At Buffalo Sunday, the Barons trimmed Buffalo Bisons 3-1 with Lou Crowdis, former Buffalo goalie in the nets for Cleveland. He replaced the injured Johnny Bower and played brilliantly.

Steve Wochy scored twice for the victors while the Bisons were shorthanded. Eddie Olson added an insurance marker. Bob Fryday tallied for the Bisons.

In the only other Sunday game, at Providence, St. Louis Flyers moved into a third-place tie with Hershey Bears by defeating Providence Reds 5-2.

Motto McLean's second goal broke a 1-1 deadlock in the second period and sent the Flyers on their way to victory. Pete Conacher Lou Jankowski and Guyle Fielder were the other St. Louis marksmen. Paul Gladu and Pete Kapusta tallied for the losers.

Saturday Pittsburgh blanked Buffalo 6-0, Cleveland outscored Hershey 5-3 and Syracuse defeated St. Louis 4-2.

High Scores In West. League

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The rubber flew in a minor avalanche in Western Hockey League games this week-end with 44 goals scored in four games.

Saskatoon Quakers edged Edmonton Flyers 6-5 in a hard-fought game Saturday night. Jim Ross, Jackie McLeod, Chuck McCullough, Bill Dea, Herb Jeffrey and Johnny Chad split the Quakers' scoring. Larry Wilson sparked Edmonton with two goals.

Vancouver Canucks slaughtered New Westminster Royals 10-2 to remain atop the league, two points ahead of Saskatoon. Les Hickey paced the victors with three goals.

Tacoma Rockets drubbed Calgary Stampeders 10-1 with Wayne Brown firing three goals ahd Doc Halderson two for the victors.

Seattle Bombers plastered Calgary 9-1 Sunday to round out a disastrous week-end for the Stamps. Lorne Nadeau, Doug Macauley and Rudy Filion each scored a brace for the winners.

Oldtimers In Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP)—Two old-time baseball players who later won fame in the majors and a former league secretary who died last year were named Saturday to the International League's Hall of Fame.

Honored by league writers were Estel Crabtree, former Rochester outfielder who later starred with St. Louis Cardinals; Fred Merkle, a first baseman with Rochester and Reading before going to New York Giants; and the late William Manley, secretary of the league from 1911 to 1952.

The league adopted a 154-game schedule for 1953, opening April 22 and closing Sept. 13.

Summer Golf Worth $500,000

CHICAGO (CP)—A 24-tournament summer schedule worth about $500,000 in prizes was announced Sunday by the Professional Golfers Association.

It includes the Canadian Open at Scarboro Country Club, Toronto, July 8-11, worth $15,000.

Richest tournament is the $75,000 "world" championship Aug. 6-9 at Tam O'Shanter course in Chicago.

Vancouver In Big-Time Football, Despite Opposition from Winnipeg

By AL VICKERY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

REGINA (CP)—Vancouver returned to big-time football during the week-end but not before stiff opposition was registered by Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The Vancouver football club was granted a franchise into the Western Interprovincial Football Union for 1954 under special conditions when WIFU delegates met in a two-day conference here.

This action was taken Saturday when Calgary Stampeders, Edmonton Eskimos and Saskatchewan Roughriders voted in favor of accepting the west coast application.

Winnipeg delegates voiced strong opposition to the entry of a fifth team, but relented after the vote and made the decision unanimous.

Edmonton and Calgary have long been favorable to the Vancouver bid, but it took a complete about-face by the Riders to swing the deal. Much of the credit for changing Riders' heart was a three-man delegation from Vancouver which visited the four participating cities and presented a good case.

Included in the conditions the Vancouver entry must meet or forfeit the franchise are: A stadium with a seating capacity of 15,000 by 1954 a certified report that 6,500 season tickets have been sold, and payment of all additional travelling expenses for the four other clubs created by Vancouver's entry.

After the Vancouver issue was cleaned up, the executive agreed to play the Ontario Rugby Football Union champions in a sudden-death game in the home of the Western titleholder, the winner to advance into the Grey Cup final against the Big Four champion.

Walter H. Sprague of Edmonton was elected president of the union, succeeding Ralph Misener of Winnipeg.

Says TV Policy Could Wreck Minor Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Senator Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado says the major league's policy towards baseball television could wreck every minor-league club in the United States.

The senator, president of the class-A Western League, let loose with his blast Sunday night at the annual dinner of the New York Baseball Writers. Most of the major-league owners were in the audience.

He accused the majors of "conniving with a super-salesman (for television) to take the last drop of blood in the minors' territory."

Johnson said this salesman, whom he did not further identify, was making the rounds of major-league club owners trying to set up a television game-of-the-week.

"Once the minors agree to a game a week they have taken the fatal plunge over Niagara Falls."

Red Sox Sign Bonus 'Baby'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boston Red Sox have signed 18-year-old Billy Consolo to a three-year bonus contract that will pay him a total of $60,000. The deal was announced Sunday by Sox scout Joe Stephenson.

Billy was graduated last Friday from high school, where he was a hard-hitting third baseman.

Indians Slash Mercs Lead to Point With 5-2 Defeat of Brantford Reds

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The high-scoring combination of Jerry Reid and Ray Leckie was the difference Saturday between first and second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series for Owen Sound Mercurys.

The Mercs, holding down top spot by one point over Stratford Indians, earned a 6-2 win against Sarnia Sailors on the strength of three goals by Reid and a pair by Leckie. Meanwhile, the Indians were downing Brantford Redmen 5-2 to maintain their red-hot pace on the necks of the league leaders.

Dutchies Win

In the only other Senior OHA game played Saturday, Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen tightened their grip on third place with a 5-2 victory over the cellar-dwelling Hamilton Tigers. The Dutchies are eight points back of Stratford.

In the rugged Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group, the league-leading Sudbury Wolves suffered a double setback during the week-end, bowing 7-4 to Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds Saturday night and collapsing 4-0 before Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians Sunday.

Buck Forslund added the sixth goal in Owen Sound's one-sided win while Marty Zorrica and Jim Wilson tallied for the Sailors.

Win W. Ontario Badminton Titles

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Woodstock and Hamilton dominated the annual Western Ontario Badminton championships this week-end.

Jim Carnwathh of Woodstock, Canadian junior champion, won the men's single crown, downing P. Ferguson, 15-11, 15-12, while Aveleigh Hepworth, also from Woodstock, won the ladies' singles laurels, defeating D. Templeton, 11-2, 11-5.

In the men's doubles, Bun Brewster of Woodstock and George Thorpe of Hamilton successfully defended their title against Bill Parkes and Howie Ransome of Woodstock.

The Muriel Seeley-Mary Hemming duo from Hamilton defeated Miss Hepworth and Helen Wake of Stratford in a three-game final for the ladies' doubles crown.

Brewster and Mrs. Seeley successfully defended their mixed doubles title against Thorpe and Mrs. Hemming in another three-game final.

Withdraws Team, Loses Game

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—Port Colborne Sailors were awarded an Ontario Hockey Association Senior B decision Saturday night after a member of the opposing Stamford Kerrios punched the referee and the visiting team refused to continue the game.

Doug Caverson of the Kerrios was given a match misconduct penalty for swining at referee Al Jones in the first period and Stamford coach Hank Damore promptly took his team off the ice.

The Sailors held a 2-0 lead when Jones gave one of the Stamford players a holding penalty. Caverson argued with him and was given a 10-minute misconduct. At this the Kerrio player took a half swing at him and was promptly given a match misconduct.

Frankford Bowling Loop

FRANKFORD — Division "A" of the Frankford Bowling League saw the first three teams go down to defeat this week, for the first in a long time. Ray Scott's league-leading Outlaws dropped two games and four points to Bob Arbuckle's Hopefulate. Ross Huffman's Racketeers lost two games and four points to Preston Chase's Jets. Jack Farley's Jack's Jokers took seven points from Lloyd Hanna's Robbers who haven't been able to beg, borrow or steal points lately, having dropped from first to sixth place in two months. Karl Austin's Curly's Crew are making a bid to get out of seventh place, as they shut out Gib Gilmour's Gib's Gang in their three games.

Standing:

Outlaws 99; Racketeers 89; Gib's Gang 76; Hopefulate 75; Jack's Jokers 75; Robbers 66; Curley's Crew 64; Jets 44.

Because of the Masonic Dance in Frankford Friday evening, bowling in Division "B" was called off for the evening and the proposed games will be played at the end of the season.

Oldest Resident Celebrates His 87th Birthday

MADOC JUNCTION — On Wednesday, the oldest resident of the community, Mr. Hiram Ashley celebrated his 87th birthday. Mr. Ashley has a wonderful memory and is enjoying fairly good health.

During the afternoon several members of Eggleton Sunday School, also a former pastor, Mr. Kenneth Stewart, of Lakefield, visited Mr. and Mrs. Ashley. Favorite hymns were sung with Mrs. Maurice Clancy playing the accompaniment on her guitar.

Presentation

On behalf of the Sunday School Mrs. Bert Reide presented Mr. Ashley with a lovely box of fruit.

Candles on a prettily decorated birthday cake were then lighted by Mrs. W. Harlow. These were extinguished by Mr. Ashley, assisted by little Lloyd Clancy. All joined in singing "Happy Birthday."

Mrs. Ashley served homemade candy and refreshments.

Mr. Ashley was the recipient of several nice gifts and many beautiful birthday cards.

In the evening, several neighbors and friends were guests at the same home.

Madoc Junction — Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Donnan.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wannamaker, of Stirling, were dinner guests Wednesday evening of Mr. and Mrs. M. Clancy. Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Beaudrie, of Springbrook, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Fitchett were guests for the evening at the same home.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lansing were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Nelson on Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ashley were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitchett on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Clancy and Lloyd attended the L.O.L. oyster supper at Wellman's on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Sharp and daughters of Mount Pleasant were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson, of Bethel, spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow.

Miss Suzanne Gallagher and Miss Grace Clarke were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. M. Clancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow were dinner guests Sunday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitchett.

Mrs. Nathan Wannamaker, of Stirling, visited Mrs. George Jervis, Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Sayers, of Roslin, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Carter visited Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ashley Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Woodward and Gerald visited Mr. and Mrs. H. Ashley on Saturday afternoon of last week.

MARMORA

Marmora — The weekly card party under auspices of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild was held in the parish hall on Thursday evening with a limited attendance, due to various counter attractions. Prize winners were: Euchre, Mrs. Clifford Jones (playing as a man), Mrs. Carl Heath; bridge, Charles Cronkright, Mrs. Roy Frost. Refreshments were served at the close of play.

Mr. Jack Herman returned home from Belleville General Hospital on Friday.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Free Methodist Church held its monthly meeting in the church on Friday evening.

SAYS 20 MINERS DROWN

BERLIN (AP)—The West Berlin newspaper Telegraf said Sunday 20 East German uranium miners were drowned and 62 others are trapped in the lower levels of a Saxony pit which flooded after the pumps gave out. Two other miners were reported to have been shot to death and six wounded by Russian guards who quelled with bullets a demonstration by about 2,000 men demanding quick rescue for their comrades. Telegraf said the tragedy occurred at Obserschlema, Saxony.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Akoolap Oxpert can smirk at a simple mechanical trick count. And at a precise method of showing them. But you will notice that many of his bids go wrong because of their lack of accuracy.

There was the championship match deal shown here:

NORTH
♥A 9 7 6 5
♣J 10 8 4 3

WEST	EAST
♠J 8 6 2	♠Q 10 9 5 4
♥J 10 8 4	♥K 3 2
♦Q 6 4	♦K J 5 2
♣K 9	♣2

SOUTH
♠K 7 3
♥Q
♣A Q 7 6 5

The bidding goes like this:

South	North
1 C	1 H
2 D	4 C
4 NT	6 C
Pass

The two diamond bid by south on the second round was in a suit that was slightly shaded. But an expert player prefers this shade as a compromise when no safer bid is available.

The south opening bid was a promise of five tricks. Although he had more, this is all he could show in his first bid. His raise on the second round admitted a sixth trick.

North has a count of five tricks; his two high cards, a short in hearts and two shorts in spades. When south shows six, north can see 11 in the pair, enough for game. Hence his four club jump.

If north can see 11 tricks when south shows only six, south is thus told that north has five tricks. Since south has a count of seven tricks he is able to discover 12 in the pair.

The advantage of such definite trick knowledge is too obvious to be ignored. Yet, many players do. And these are the very ones who complain so bitterly when they go sour with slams.

Four no-trump by south is the aces and king asker. Six clubs in response is conventional signal for showing two aces and no kings. No grand slam with so many kings missing. South leaves it there.

Sport in Brief

EDMONTON (CP)—A 47-year-old Winnipeg veteran and a 19-year-old from Saskatoon Sunday became coholders of the Canadian senior men's speed-skating championship.

Frank Stack, Canadian Olympic team member and winner of the senior crown a year ago, and Johnny Sands, key player with Saskatoon Hilltops junior football team, battled to a tie with 110 points apiece in the two-day speed-skating championships.

Behind Stack and Sands were Ralph Olin of Calgary, a member of the 1952 Olympic team, and Bill Kastings of Edmonton. Each finished with 90 points.

Doreen McLeod of Edmonton retained her Canadian senior women's title with 140 points on four firsts and one second. Mrs. Pat Underhill of Edmonton was second with 110 points and Cora Rutledge of Saskatoon third with 50.

There were no competitors from Eastern Canada.

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. (CP)—Ernie McCulloch, Mont Tremblant professional won the Ryan Cup Sunday, coming in first in the men's slalom ski competition here. Lucille Wheeler, St. Jovite, Que., captured the women's event. McCulloch covered the tricky Devil's Run course in 1.29:2. Miss Wheeler ran the shorter slalom course in 1.01:2.

YOUTHFUL ANGLER

STANLEY, Scotland (CP)—Eight-year-old Michael Young, visiting this Perthshire district from St. Andrews, caught a 30-pound salmon when playing with a rod on the banks of the River Ray. His father and a boatman helped to land the monster fish.

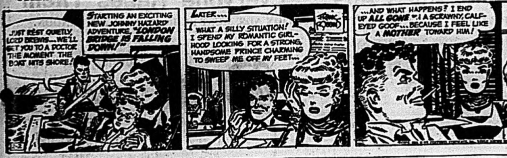
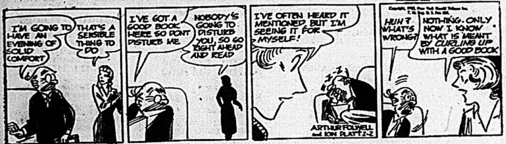
JOHNNY HAZARD — By Frank Robbins



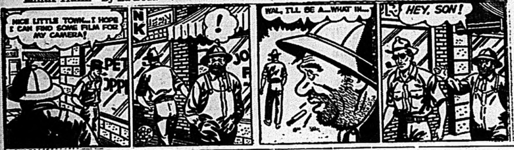
JUST REST QUIETLY, LORD BREWS... WE'LL GET YOU TO A DOCTOR THE MOMENT THE BOAT HITS SHORE!
STARTING AN EXCITING NEW JOHNNY HAZARD ADVENTURE, "LONDON BRIDGE IS FALLING DOWN!"
LATER...
WHAT A SILLY SITUATION! I SPEND MY ROMANTIC GIRLHOOD LOOKING FOR A STRONG, HANDSOME PRINCE CHARMING TO SWEEP ME OFF MY FEET...
...AND WHAT HAPPENS? I END UP ALL GONE ... A SCRAWNY, CALF-EYED GOOF... BECAUSE I FEEL LIKE A MOTHER TOWARD HIM!

MR. AND MRS.—By Arthur Folwell - Kin Platt



I'M GOING TO HAVE AN EVENING OF SOLID COMFORT
THAT'S A SENSIBLE THING TO DO
I'VE GOT A GOOD BOOK HERE SO DON'T DISTURB ME
NOBODY'S GOING TO DISTURB YOU, SO GO RIGHT AHEAD AND READ
I'VE OFTEN HEARD IT MENTIONED BUT I'M SEEING IT FOR MYSELF!
ARTHUR FOLWELL and KIN PLATT 2-2
HUH? WHAT'S WRONG?
NOTHING. ONLY NOW I KNOW WHAT IS MEANT BY CURLING UP WITH A GOOD BOOK

MARK TRAIL—By Ed Dodd



NICE LITTLE TOWN... I HOPE I CAN FIND SOME FILM FOR MY CAMERA!

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Tuesday, February 3, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—You of Aries have fine power of persuasion. and. attractiveness when living true to your chart. You have ambition, intellect, and are keen; no reason not to do a fine job.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Your capacity to do big things is inborn. Don't let gloom, rashness or schemers steer you wrong. Often over-excitement, haste can spoil otherwise good work.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Incidents, outside influences unwisely to tempt your better judgment. Watch this, and be careful in money, business matters. Heart interests can be exciting.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Today says do not collide with opposite sex if possible. Don't speed along without thought of consequences, even if successful. Let off energy slowly.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Remember, words that are tossed about without thought or reason get us into trouble. Hold temper, or you may build up resentment in others, hurt loved ones.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Take things in stride. go safely about problems and you should have little trouble. P.M. clears up many things. Pep up for personal affairs, romance.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Keep in line. Study tasks, duties to arrange for due recreation, time with loved ones. God gave you a free will; you are responsible for what you think, and do.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Warning: Do not permit irirtability or the unsoundly unorthodox to tempt. Many fine aspects, and many good deeds to perform.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Could be one of your best days. Mechanics, miners, farmers, teachers, students, share excelelnt influences. Heart affairs may surprise.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Be keen and acquisitive to get the results you wish now. Some unusual advantages and important contacts; search for them.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Less active for maritime and other transportation and confidential matters than things in general. Fairly productive tendencies.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Wide choice of interests sponsored here. Can prove healthiest, most hopeful aspects of the week. Let no one item or phase dominate your efforts. Be diplomatic; co-operate.

You born today: are usually serious-minded and will go along alone with thoughts, ideas. This you may do ably, but companionship is sometimes better course to follow. Capable of holding position for secret service work, medicine, teaching, building. Guard against carelessness. Hold to religious principles, choose companions wisely. Birthdate of: Horace Greeley, famous journalist; Felix Mendelsshon, great composer.

KIDNEY ACIDS
Rob your Rest..

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—blame it on 'nerves'—when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons and excess acids from the blood. If they fail and impurities stay in the system—disturbed rest often follows. If you don't rest well get and use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's help the kidneys so that you can rest better—and feel better. 134

BOY ARSONIST JAILED

CHICAGO. (AP) — Fifteen-year-old Nelson Letts, who set fires in which his father and another man died, Friday night was convicted of murder by arson. The jury fixed his punishment at 25 years in prison. Young Letts was quoted by police as saying he set the fire to kill his father, Kenton, 49, because he had been drinking and abusive to his mother.

WATCH BABY CAMEL

MADISON, Wis. (AP)— If the Vilas Park zoo's new baby camel gets over the hump, the blessed event may make zoo history. Zoo director Harold Hayes says no zoo-bred dromedary ever has survived in the United States. The newest arrival, born late Thursday, is up and around and has taken nourishment, keeper Walter Dugan said.

ADVERTISING PROMOTES GROWTH!

All business . . . all progress . . . all growth is essentially a matter of bringing people together: Those who make things and those who use them, those who have things to sell and those who have money to spend, those who can do things and those who want things done.

Quickest, cheapest way to bring together maker and user, seller and buyer, do-er and wanter . . . is advertising.

Advertising lubricates the wheels of progress . . . keeps Canada moving ahead. Gives the manufacturer a larger market. Puts him into mass production. Brings down the cost of whatever he makes. Helps the retailer sell more goods for less money. Advertising helps every business to grow faster . . . helps everybody to live better!

Second Man On The Ticket

By Edwin Lanham

The Governor led the way to the observation platform, sat down and put his feet on the railing. He was a big man, with only a slight overlay of fat, and in his movements and his postures there was no self-consciousness at all.

"Roy," he said, "I'm a sentimental man."

"Okay," I said. "We'll have some babies for you to kiss next stop."

The Governor rewarded me with a patient smile. "I've been thinking about Hydetown," he said. "Like the lady who never forgets her first lover, I guess a man never forgets his boyhood home. It will always be the best little town in the country for me."

I had looked it up and I said, "Population 3,220. Rotary meets on Wednesday."

"Population was about 1,200 when I left there," he said. "I don't recall any Rotary Club, but there was an Odd Fellows Hall, of course, and a couple of pool parlors. I suppose it was primitive, even in those days, but it was a nice, friendly town, and I liked it. I used to have a couple of good friends in Hydetown, but I lost track, and you know, I'm wondering if they'll be at the station when this train rolls in. It will make me feel pretty good if they are."

"The whole town will be at the station, Governor," I said. "The county chairman out there, a fellow named John Mills, has been working overtime."

"Oh, I know Johnny Mills," the Governor said. "We were boys together. He pulled the record catfish out of the river one summer. He's one of the two I was talking about.'

"You'll see him at the station," I said. "He's in charge of the reception. He and the mayor, a fellow named Melvin Fisher. I guess you know him, too."

The Governor chuckled. "I guess that burns Mel Fisher up, Roy, arranging a reception in my honor."

"He's not one of those pals of yours, then?"

"Hardly," the Governor said. "In school we called him Meathead Fisher. We never called him anything but Meathead. Everything he did went wrong. Roy, I guess you know my wife came from Hydetown, too."

"Governor," I said, "I wrote a book. If you take the time to read it you'll find out how much I do know."

"I'll read it one of these days, Roy," he promised. "After the campaign. Meanwhile, I'll tell you something that's not in your book. I cleared out of Hydetown because I wanted to make some money in a hurry, and Melvin Fisher was one reason for that hurry. His father left him a tidy pile, by Hydetown standards, and he was carpeting Ruth's front porch with American Beauty roses, long stem. I had to get out and hustle, and as soon as I had train fare to Hydetown and double fare back and something left over for furniture I went back there and poked around among the roses and I found Ruth and married her."

"Ruth told me she never intended to marry anyone but you, Governor," I said.

"Well, maybe so," the Governor said and grinned. "But Melvin Fisher had bought a ring and a dress suit and had picked out the preacher. I'd like to have seen his face that night when he came around with his bouquet of American Beauties. We were already on the train by then. And now here I am, 30 years later, going back to the old home town as a candidate for Vice President of the United States, and Melvin Fisher is mayor of the town and has to give me a big welcome at the station. Poor old Meathead."

He took his feet off the railing and clasped his hands between his knees. "Never mind all that," he said. "Let's get busy on that speech. Roy, I have some thoughts on foreign policy that will probably bring us some urgent telegrams from the national chairman."

When the Governor started work on something, he liked to see it through, and it meant intensive work for me. I had to check some statistics, then I roughed out the speech, and when he had corrected it after dinner I completed the rewrite. It was late by the time I had finished and I shared a nightcap with Bill Evers, who was waiting for Clyde McDonald to come aboard at Marketville. Bill looked gloomy.

"I met that guy McDonald at a governors' conference," he told me. "Roy, he's the kind you've got to watch every minute. You say something casual and innocent and he'll put a twist on it that will curl your hair. I'm worried."

"I think the Governor can take care of himself, Bill," I said.

"Sure he can—in a clean, open fight. But you know how he is. He's apt to take a guy at face value, until proved otherwise. Part of his appeal is that he tends to think the best of everyone, and you know it. He'll talk free and easy and Clyde McDonald will find something to pounce on."

"Bill," I said, and put down my glass. "He's just a columnist. Lay off, or you'll make the Governor jittery, too."

"I guess so," he said. "Okay."

CHAPTER III

In a sense the campaign train was like a neighborly street. Just ahead of the Governor's private car was a car for the office staff.

Then came the press car, a former club car stripped inside and fitted with a typewriter shelf on each side, running the length of the car, at which were typewriters and metal chairs for the correspondents to write their stories.

We had left a lot of track behind us since the campaign started. and most of those abroad the train were regulars. We knew each other well, and we shared a communal life, with an odd sense of suspension in time as we moved in a unit across vast stretches of the country.

Until the telegram came, Bill and everyone else on the train had looked forward to the Hydetown reception as a break in the campaign. It was the halfway mark, and the campaign had been building up to it. Of course it meant a lot of work for all of us, but it represented a sort of hump. Once we were over it, we felt that we would be coasting on through to Election Day.

Mulling it over in my berth, I was not particularly concerned by Clyde McDonald's activities, and I doubted if there was anything sinister in his covering the Warburton campaign. After all, Ego, the national picture magazine, was sending a reporter and a photographer to Hydetown to cover it, and all the news services and the larger metropolitan papers would be represented. And the Governor was expected to make an important speech. There was reason enough for Clyde McDonald to stir out of Washington.

When the train stopped at midnight at Marketville, and McDonald came aboard, I was asleep. I did not see him until morning, when I went to the dining car for breakfast. I had slept late, and there were only a few in the car. As I came in, the first thing I noticed was a man with his nose buried deep in a book. It was the book that caught my eye. I could see the title on the jacket: Second Man on the Ticket, by Roy Mason, and when I looked at the man who was reading it I recognized him from the photograph that appeared at the head of his daily column as Clyde McDonald.

I stopped at the table and said, "You're Clyde McDonald, aren't you?"

He glanced up and said, 'Yeah.'

It sat down opposite him and he closed the book. "Which side of this zoo you on?" he asked. "Looking in or looking out?"

"I work for the Governor," I said.

"Looking out," he said. "I'm looking in."

"My name is Roy Mason," I said, and picked up the menu.

"Oh, yes," said McDonald. "The eminent biographer, I presume. I've been reading your latest achievement."

I gave my order to the waiter and sat looking out the window, feeling fidgety.

"Yes, sir," said Clyde McDonald. "Willis G. Warburton, the business genius. The farm boy who made good. The two-fisted investigator. The family man. The balancer of budgets and issues. You almost made me forget I lost my shirt on one of his dogs one day out in Jamaica."

"You'll find that in one of your old Racing Forms," I said. "That isn't a book about horse racing."

"One lucky thing," McDonald said. "I guess not many of those delegates at the convention go to the track much."

"Andrew Jackson used to race horses," I said. "And Mr. McDonald, the Governor hasn't run an entry in 10 years. He raced horses in the first place because an old friend made him a present of a yearling."

"Oh, indeed," McDonald said. "You got that in here, haven't you?" He flipped the pages of the book. "Yep, here it is:

"No account of Governor Warburton's activities is complete without mention of his brief experience in raising thoroughbred horses. Having received a very fine yearling as a present from a friend, the Governor many years ago established a modest farm for breeding horses. Some of the animals bred at the Governor's farm were entered in races at various tracks throughout the country and acquitted themselves well. The pressure of his administrative duties forced Governor Warburton to abandon his experiment in hippology some years ago."

Clyde McDonald gave me a beatific smile. "Beautiful," he said.

The waiter put my breakfast in front of me, and I drank coffee. McDonald closed the book and gave its cover a little pat, like an old friend. "What's on the schedule of the Great Hippologist today?" he asked.

I winced and said, "Mr. Evers can give you the schedule."

He nodded. "Maybe that's what I got here." He took a sheaf of mimeographed pages from his pocket.

"Yes, this is it. Twelve fifteen, arrive at Milltown. Members of the party will be ready to leave the train upon arrival. Members of the press and photographers will kindly handle own typewriters, cameras, et cetera, et cetera. Reception committee to meet the Governor will include et cetera, et cetra. Entire party will proceed to Milltown hotel et cetera, et cetera. Ah, here we are. Governor Warburton's schedule: 1 p.m., press conference at Milltown Hotel. Two o'clock, luncheon, et cetera. Three o'clock, conference with veterans' organizations. Three fifteen, conference with leaders of textile industry. Four, conference with et cetera, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera — Hey. no speech?"

"Not today," a smooth voice said. "Just et cetera today."

CHAPTER IV.

We both looked up. Lucy Strawn stood in the aisle, smiling. She said, "Is chair taken?"

I got up to pull it out for her, and began introduction, but she cut me off. "We met last night," she said, and sat down. "What's for breakfast? I think I'll try some of that et cetera." She turned to the waiter. "Et cetera," she said. "Sunny side up."

"Yes, miss," the waiter said.

Clyde McDonald grinned. "When you get hold of something," he said, "you don't turn loose, do you?"

Lucy tapped the book on the table with her finger tips and said, "Doing your homework?"

"Research," he said. "Research on the life and times of the Great Hippologist."

I knew it would be in his column next day, and I knew that he, too, was one of those who never turned loose once they got hold of something. Every mention of Governor Warburton's name in his column henceforth would probably carry the bracket (The Great Hippologist.)

"What is this Great Hippologist business?" Lucy asked. "What's a hippologist?"

"A hippologist is a man interested in the study of horses," I explained. "Mr. McDonald thinks it's a cute name."

Lucy surveyed Clyde McDonald. "A cute name for you would be the Great Hippopotamus," she said.

"It's redundant," he said, unperturbed. "But, I suppose, not inaccurate." He looked down smugly at his paunch.

"What happens in Milltown, if there's no speech?" Clyde McDonald asked. "We just sit around and wait for the train to pull out?"

"There's a press conference," Lucy said.

"Yeah, I know those press conferences," he said. "Yokels from the local press sit around bug-eyed while the great man sounds off about nothing at all. No, thanks. But I tell you what. Maybe you ought to hold a little conference with the press, Miss Strawn."

"Me?" said Lucy. "Why me?"

"At some nice bar," he said.

I had finished my coffee, and I set the cup in the saucer with a jar and got up. McDonald gave me a short nod of dismissal, and Lucy did not glance up at all. But if she wanted to pal around with a redheaded goat with a crew haircut, that was strictly her concern, and possibly, I thought, she might do the Governor some good.

I found Bill Evers dictating answers to a sheaf of telegrams in the office car. I slid onto the seat beside him and said, "This looks like insubordination."

"What do you mean?"

"You sicked Lucy Strawn onto Clyde McDonald," I said. "Didn't you?"

"Of course not," he said. "I just told her to butter him up a little."

"It's okay with me," I said. "But it will irritate the Governor."

"Then he'll have to be irritated," Bill said. "We've got to protect him, Roy. That's our job."

"Yes," I said.

"You write the speeches," Bill said. "I'll take care of what goes on behind the scenes."

I went back to the Governor's car and looked over the speech, which had been stenciled for the mimeograph machine. The Governor was alone on the observation platform, smoking a cigar. His wife had left the train on his orders a week before because she was showing the strain of being a candidate's wife, and he looked rather forlorn out there alone, but I did not go out. He had little enough time to himself, and today would be a busy day in Milltown.

When the train stopped at the Milltown station at noon I dropped off at the dining car and took a taxi to the hotel, avoiding the official reception.

Milltown was like any other small city — no place to be left to one's own resources before nightfall. There were no sights to see, particularly after a dozen such stops in a dozen such towns, which seemed all to be exactly alike, so the natural place to lay your hat was on a bar stool. I went to the hotel bar, and later Bill Evers joined me. We had lunch together, and at four o'clock went up to the Governor's suite for the conference with local party leaders. We listened to the reports and while Bill made notes I saw to it that every politician's hand held a well-filled glass.

After the last party stalwart had been shooed from the suite nearly an hour later, the Governor said, "Roy, pour me a stiff one, will you? I've still got that reception to go through."

"You can get a good night's sleep tonight Governor," Bill said. "After we get aboard again at six o'clock there's no stop until me make New Orleans at noon tomorrow."

"Bill, you're the one in need of rest," the Governor said"Worry about yourself for a change. I'm all right. And say, I want to get some telegrams off. Where's Lucy?"

"Lucy?" Bill said. "Oh, Lucy's got a slight ehadache, Governor."

Lucy, I supposed had kept her date with Clyde McDonald. If there was anyone who could get anything out of him, Lucy was the gir. She was a little too cocksure for my taste, and there was a wise, brittle quality that showed me she had been around.

Somehow I had never been attracted to sophisticated women; they tend to make a man feel that he has last the initiaive, and if a man 'loses the initiative he's apt to feel that he is simply being used as a prop to play dolly. Lucy made me feel somewhat that way.

STORM-FLOOD DEATH TOLL NEARS 1,500 MARK

Blast On Aircraft Carrier Injures Several Crewmen

London Says No Explanation Of Explosion Has Been Given

VALETTA, Malta (CP)—An explosion occurred today aboard the Royal Navy aircraft carrier Indomitable and one man was blown overboard. Several other members of the crew were injured.

The explosion took place in the hangar deck of the 65-plane vessel. The damaged ship later put into port here.

The 29,000-ton Indomitable was returning here for a flying-training cruise when the blast occurred, at noon today. Other ships are searching for the missing man.

In London the navy said no explanation of the explosion had been given. A spokesman declined to say whether it might have been sabotage.

Police in Britain still are investigating cases of suspected sabotage last week in two other Royal Navy fleet carriers, the 13,350-ton Warrior and her sister ship Triumph.

The Triumph reported "minor defects of an unexplained nature" in her machinery during flying exercises last week. A faulty electric cable with a nail driven through it was discovered in the Warrior while she was undergoing a refit in Devonport dockyard.

The Indomitable, built in 1940, arrived in the Mediterranean only a week ago.

Paratrooper Held For Slaying Of Ex-Girl Friend

STRATFORD (CP) — A 24-year-old army paratrooper was charged with murder Monday, four hours after his former girl friend was shot and killed on a busy city street.

Pte. Reuben Henry Norman, a native of Wellesley in the Kitchener district, was charged with the pistol slaying of 17-year-old Jean Marie Satchell, a drug store clerk.

Attached to an airborne platoon of the army service corps at Camp Borden, Norman showed no emotion as Magistrate A. F. Cook read the charge and remanded him until Friday.

Gave Himself Up

The shooting took place 50 yards away from the Stratford police station and as a crowd gathered about the crumpled body of the young girl, Norman walked towards the police headquarters and gave himself up, the gun still in his hand.

Witnesses said they saw the girl and a soldier arguing as they walked along the street. Suddenly he whipped out an automatic, put it against her head and fired. She fell screaming to the sidewalk as he continued to pump bullets at her.

Inspector Joe Taylor had heard the shots, and running out of the station, met Norman in the middle of the street. He made a grab for the gun, but Norman handed it to him saying:

"It's all right. You can have it. I won't need it any more."

Dr. Alex Sinclair of Sebringville, who was near the scene of the shooting, hurried to assist the girl. She was still alive, but died before arrival at hospital.

Found Another Friend

Relatives said the girl who was living with her grandparents here had turned down Norman and had found another boy friend.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Satchell and her two brothers and a sister live in the Gadshill district about five miles from here. She left Stratford Collegiate last June after completing grade 10 and had been working in a Stratford drug store.

Investigation showed the girl reported to work in the morning, forgetting it was her morning off. She agreed to come back at 1 p.m., and, instead of going home, went shopping where she apparently met the soldier, police said.

OPP Commissioner Buried at Bethany

TORONTO (CP)—William H. Stringer, Ontario provincial police commissioner who died Thursday night at 66, was buried Monday in Manvers township, near Bethany.

Police chiefs from almost every Ontario municipality and many in Quebec attended funeral services in Fairlawn United Church here. An OPP guard of honor was present in front of the church and at the grave.

Rev. George Trimble of Fairlawn Church conducted the service.

Provincial police were stationed at every main highway intersection between Toronto and Bethany to direct traffic and give their last salute to their chief.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) —Synopsis: Cool air will remain over Southern Ontario today as the storm that brought from 1 to 4 inches of snow to these sections moves slowly eastward through New York state. Skies will clear slowly today and tonight will be generally clear and quite cold in Southern Ontario. Increasing cloudiness, normal temperatures, and a few snowflurries sum up Wednesday's weather.

Meanwhile, clear skies in Northern Ontario will cloud over today with a few hours of snow expected to move southeastward from Manitoba. Although temperatures will be slightly milder tonight, it will be colder again in Northwestern Ontario on Wednesday.

Elderly Physician And Wife Slain By Unknown Killer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A trigger-happy gunman shot down an elderly physician at the door of his home in a quiet residential neighborhood early today, then stalked inside to kill the doctor's wife as she lay in bed.

The unidentified killer roused Dr. Byron W. Hall, 76, from bed by ringing the doorbell. After killing Mrs. Hall, 70, the gunman fled in the doctor's car.

During the shooting, the Hall's 74-year-old housekeeper, Mrs. Minnie Peterson, stood terror-stricken behind a door in the room where she slept.

Mrs. Peterson told officers she heard Dr. Hall go to the door, open it and someone inquire: "Dr. Hall?"

Three shots followed.

Then Mrs. Peterson heard the gunman go to the Hall's bedroom and two more shots rang out.

514 DEAD IN BRITAIN'S WORST HURRICANE, FLOOD

250,000 Acres Land Flooded, Many Homeless

LONDON (CP) — The toll in Britain's worst hurricane and flood in history hit the staggering total of 514 dead today. Thousands of troops and civilians, wet and exhausted, fought the English channel and North sea in a great battle to save other lives and lands still threatened.

Estimates of the number of Britons missing ranged between 600 and 1,000. About 35,000 were homeless and 250,000 acres of land had been flooded. Property damage ran into the millions of pounds.

With the toll growing hourly, there was fear that the spring tides —due in two weeks—would smash again through the weakened sea defences.

Around the clock, in sleet, rain and snow at scores of villages along the east coast, men frantically laid sandbags and piled dirt. Others continued the search for survivors.

Toll Rising Hourly

Just across the channel, in even harder-hit Holland, nearly 1,000 dead had been found and the toll was rising hourly.

Possibly 300 of the missing Britons lived on Canvey Island, in the estuary of the Thames. Canvey's 5 square miles took the country's hardest blow when the ancient dikes crumbled early Sunday and the seas gushed over.

Police said at least 100 died there. Early today there were still some 3,800 persons on the stricken isle. Many of them—some possibly because of the shock—refused to leave their homes. Nearly 7,000 others were rescued by a hastily-mustered fleet of small boats.

Eleven Americans including three United States Air Force men, three wives and five children were dead. Seven others were listed as missing and presumed dead. Most of the U. S. casualties occurred in the flooded town of Hunstanton, near the big U. S. air base at Sculthorpe.

No Canadian casualties were reported. The RCAF's No. 1 fighter wing with 1,000 officers and men is located at North Luffenham, 50 miles away from the stricken area.

The rescue army concentrated on finding the living in their shattered coastal homes. Bodies were located in trees, rooftops, caught in flotsam, but many were left and the valuable boat space was held open for survivors.

Prime Minister Churchill called the flood a "national responsibility." Queen Mother Elizabeth, in a broadcast message this morning, appealed to the country to contribute clothing and bedding for the homeless. Dozens of drives were under way for money, clothing, medicine and relief workers.

While the nation mobilized for relief, the fight went on to bulwark the dikes against future floods. Four million sandbags were issued by the army alone to fight the "battle of the gaps." The giant operation was led by thousands of Royal Army engineers, air force men and sailors.

Veteran Press Reporter Horrified As Canvey Island Gives Up Its Dead

By JOHN DUDMAN

CANVEY ISLAND, Eng. (Reuters) — I wished today that I had never become a reporter as Canvey Island gave up its dead from the grey floods. The horror was overwhelming.

From first light the little boats went out on the lake that only a day or two ago was a flourishing, happy community at the mouth of the Thames.

Then the horror began as the boats rowed back with the bodies.

One by one they were found—floating in the front gardens, sprawled along the shattered sea wall, some still in their beds.

A boy who returned to the island this morning to search for relatives saw something white floating in the front garden of his cottage home.

White-faced and trembling he plunged into the water, forced down the fence and cried, "It's my mother."

With a group of air force men I saw another boat ease up beside a clump of bushes fringing a small red topped house.

One of the men threw a rope into the bushes and gave a tug. A hand appeared above the surface. From a finger came the gleam of a wedding ring. It was a young man still in his pajamas.

It was slow, terrifying work. Slow because the boats were hampered by the fences around the houses. They had to knock many down to reach the windows and peer in, fearful of what they would find next.

Some of the bodies had already floated out of the doors and the windows. A woman still in her nightgown was found sprawled in the mud of the sea-wall.

Eden Plans to Meet Dulles To Talk Over Eisenhower's Decision on Formosa Issue

LONDON (AP)—A host of British misgivings over President Eisenhower's decision to deneutralize the island of Formosa awaited State Secretary John Foster Dulles of the United States today.

Dulles is due in London shortly before Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is expected to voice to an aroused House of Commons Britain's deep concern over the lifting of the U. S. 7th fleet's protective blockade of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Chinese forces on Formosa.

Eden planned to meet Dulles later in the day at the foreign office and diplomatic sources took it for granted that the talk would be pretty plain. Some reliable informants said the British government planned to present an oral protest to the U. S. secretary of state.

On 10-Day Swing

Dulles, now on a 10-day swing through West Europe's capitals with the U. S. mutual security director, Harold Stassen, comes here after three days of conferences in Paris. In the French capital Monday he was reported to have told Pemier Rene Mayer and a group of his cabinet ministers that Eisenhower's decision is expected to draw Chinese Communist troops toward a front facing Formosa—thus relieving pressure on Korea and easing the threat of Chinese participation in the Indo-Chinese civil war.

Dulles also was quoted as saying that the United States does not intend to support Chiang Kai-shek in any Reckless action" against the Red-held Chinese mainland.

Dulles arrives in London at a moment of considerable tension in Anglo-American relations, too. Much of the British press today expressed editorial concern at the Eisenhower policy. Their comment followed similar expressions of anxiety—mainly by members of the Labor Party—in the Commons Monday.

Most MPs construed the new move as freeing Chiang's forces to raid the mainland or island territory held by Red China.

In addition to queries about Formosa, it is expected that Dulles will be told of secret British plans to link British forces in Europe with the projected European army. Official sources said these plans would be applied only after Britain was asked formally to associate herself in a practical way with the six-country European Defence Community.

Hurry Along Project

The chief object of Dulles' trip obviously is to hurry along this project for linking the troops of France, Italy, West Germany, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg into a unified defence force.

Canadians Pledged to Aid Flood Devastation in Europe

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The aid of Canadians was pledged Monday to flood-devastated Britain, Holland and Belgium.

As mounting reports of the week-end havoc continued to reach Canada, members of Parliament at Ottawa unanimously expressed "the earnest desire of the Canadian people" to send help as soon as the stricken countries can say what would be best.

Other volunteer moves to collect flood-aid funds were started independently across the country.

Leaders of the many Netherlanders who have emigrated to Canada formed a special relief committee to raise money across the country among fellow countrymen. The money will be sent to the national disaster funds in Holland.

Starts in Ottawa

The campaign was started in Ottawa by the Netherlands-Canada Society, Ottawa, under its president, Dr. J. Auer, and was echoed at Vancouver by the Netherlands Society there

It is anticipated that most Canadian aid will be channelled through the Canadian Red Cross, which has already offered its stockpile of clothing, bedding and flood-fighting equipment stored at Geneva, Switzerland.

Cities such as Oshawa, Ont., and Victoria proposed relief funds.

Premier Bennett of British Columbia offered the province's aid to Britain. The Vancouver Province proposed editorially that a "generous portion" of the $500,000 remaining in a 1948 fund to aid Fraser valley flood victims be sent to Britain and the Lowlands.

Will Return Aid

Manitoba, which received widespread international help during the 1950 Red river floods, looked for some way to return that aid. Premier Campbell telephoned the British foreign office in London to express his [illegible] sympathy and learn first-hand [illegible] some of the havoc.

All members in the Commons at Ottawa supported the motion of sympathy and promised aid moved by Prime Minister St. Laurent and seconded by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader.

It expressed "the earnest desire of the Canadian people to manifest their sympathy to the sufferers in such concrete form as, after more accurate information is available about the exact need, will prove to be the most helpful. . ."

Sympathy Expressed

Through the reigning monarchs of the United Kingdom, The Netherlands and Belgium, it expressed sympathy to those stricken by "the appalling disaster."

Spokesmen for all parties recalled the help given by those countries to Canada at the time of the Red river flood and in other disasters.

Widow Given $30,000 for Loss Of Husband

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A young Ingersoll widow and her three small children will share $30,000 in settlement of a court action approved by Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow in weekly court Monday.

The amount is in settlement of damage claims of Mrs. Marion V. Sharp, 26, against the H. L. McConnell Lumber Co. Ltd., of Brantford, arising from a highway crash last June in which her truck-driver husband, Morley Homer Sharp, 39, was killed.

Mr. Justice Barlow ordered $12,000 paid to Mrs. Sharp. The remainder he directed to be paid into court to the credit of her three children—$5,000 for Stephen Wayne, 5; $6,000 for Susan Arlene, 3; and $7,000 for Dennis Morley, eight months.

Liberals Will Challenge Govt.

TORONTO (CP) — The Liberal opposition will challenge the Ontario government to take action in reorienting its perspective and rediscovering its responsibilities to the people when the legislature opens next week, Alvin P. Cadeau, president of the Ontario Liberal Association, said Monday night.

Speaking on a free-time political broadcast over the CBC provincial network, Mr. Cadeau said the Liberal party was not opposing the government simply for the sake of opposition.

"There is a task for an opposition party here in Ontario," he declared. There are crowded highways and the resulting deaths, the critical tax and real estate situation in cities and towns, the lack of metropolitan planning and lack of direction in the preservation of our natural resources."

DIES OF POISONING

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — James Lee, 52, died today from carbon monoxide poisoning when his automobile stalled in the snow.

Police said they found the exhaust pipe of Lee's car plugged with snow and the car filled with fumes. Lee worked as a pumpman with Ontario hydro.

BUDGET COMING DOWN FEB. 19 SAYS MINISTER

Possible Clue On Election Chances

OTTAWA (CP) — The budget is coming Thursday, Feb. 19. It will tell Canadians whether higher or lower taxes are in store and may give a clue as to the possibility of an election.

Finance Minister Abbott announced Monday in the Commons that he will bring down on that day the government's annual financial statement. It is one of the earliest dates in many years and two months ahead of last year.

Hopes for tax relief hinge on the generally-accepted belief that this is the last budget before a general election. Pre-election budgets often mean lower taxes. That was the case before the 1949 election.

Mr. Abbott has said that lower taxes depend on increased production. That statement, coupled with the buoyancy of the Canadian economy, has engendered predictions on Parliament Hill of decreased levies, especially in personal income tax.

Pledge Help to Britain

Mr. Abbott's budget announcement occupied only a few minutes of the Commons' time. In other business, members unanimously pledged Canadian help to Britain, Holland and Belgium, beset by disastrous floods during the week-end.

Dr. P. J. G. Morgan Dismissed As Hospital Supt.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Dr. P. J. G. Morgan was dismissed Monday night as medical superintendent of the East Windsor Hospital for the Chronically Ill. He held the post for 20 years.

The recently-appointed board of directors of the hospital unanimously agreed to pay Dr. Morgan three months' salary as a separation allowance, amounting to a total of $3,000.

In a letter forwarded to Dr. Morgan, vacationing in Florida, the board said that in view of the recent inquiry into the hospital's affairs and the resultant organization, the East Windsor Health Association, governing body of the hospital, "cannot continue to retain you as medical superintendent."

Cutter Sights Oil Slick, Markers Where Aircraft Reported Missing

NEW YORK (AP)—The Coast Guard cutter Campbell reported to headquarters today it had sighted an oil slick and dye markers near the scene where a British troop-ferrying aircraft is missing with 39 persons aboard.

The Campbell said it had "sighted several large area oil slicks and dye markers" on the north Atlantic about 120 miles southwest of the position from which the plane sent out an S O S early Monday. The Coast Guard estimated that area was between 250 and 300 miles east of Argentia, Nfld.

The plane, a four-engine York operated by Skyways, Ltd., of London, was bound for Gander, Nfld., from the Azores.

The Campbell said it was searching the area in the midst of snow squalls.

Last report from the plane was received at Gander at 12:35 a.m., EST Monday. A short time later Gander picked up the S O S.

The plane was being used to ferry British troops between London and the West Indies.

Mobilize To Aid Stricken Britain, Holland, Belgium

Thousands Still Huddle Without Food, Water

AMSTERDAM (CP) — Icy flood waters threatened today to engulf hundreds still marooned by the hurricane and flood disasters already claiming 1,500 lives in Britain, The Netherlands and Belgium.

While tens of thousands of troops and volunteers raced frantically to save lives and property and rebuild shattered seawalls and dikes, two Dutch villages appealed by radio for quick rescue from death.

The burgomasters of Oosterland and Bruinisse pleaded urgently for amphibious planes or helicopters to evacuate their 3,877 villages. They warned that if aid is not rushed there will be a "big loss of life."

It is feared the final total of dead in the three countries will surpass 2,000.

More than 600,000 acres including rich potato fields were inundated in Holland, 250,000 in England and a relatively small area in Belgium. Holland forebade the export of potatoes and imposed ceiling prices.

The desperate work of piling sandbags against the threat of new spring tides went on endlessly as rescuers continued to haul survivors from rooftops, attics, dikes and surrounded high spots where they had shivered days and nights in the snow, hail and icy winds.

Offers of aid and expressions of deepest sympathy poured in from Canada, the United States, and from neighboring Western European countries.

Queen Elizabeth II and the Queen Mother visited rescue centres Holland's Queen Juliana also toured stricken areas.

Worst hit in Britain was Canvey Island in the Thames estuary, where 130 were known dead and 300 more still were missing. Most of the surviving inhabitants had been evacuated to the mainland, but more than 3,000 islanders stubbornly refused to leave their flooded homes. — although they were without fresh water, light and heat.

The first burials began in Holland.

A young Dutch farmer, trapped by the flood waters, carried his ill wife to the attic only to stumble near the top of the stairs and drop her into the water below to drown. A father was rescued clutching his tiny infant, born two months prematurely in a flood-menaced attic. Two volunteers trying to save a herd of stranded cattle drowned when their cart overturned into the flood waters.

The dead included 11 Americans in England. Seven other Americans were missing there and presumed dead. All were airmen stationed in Britain or members of United States Air Force families.

No Canadians Dead

There were no reports of Canadian dead so far. Canada's largest community in Britain, the 1,000-strong No. 1 RCAF fighter wing at North Luffenham in Rutland was not touched by the floods. The base is some 50 miles from the ravaged east coast.

The Thames estuary in southeast England and the Zeeland section of southwest Holland emerged as the chief centres of death, destruction and misery wrought by the hurricane-fanned giant waves and tides which crashed inland during the week-end, smashing everything in their path.

Search Continues For Three Downed Planes, 50 Aboard

HALIFAX (CP) — Sea and air searchers looked to clearing northern skies today for new hope in the long and weary hunt for three downed planes and their 50 occupants.

The weather office here predicted good flying conditions over Labrador, where a crippled RCAF Lancaster crashed Sunday in the snowy wastes southeast of Goose Bay. Nine men were aboard.

Snowflurries were forecast over the North Atlantic, but winds were expected to abate from the fury which kept all but one of 11 search planes from reaching the area where a British airliner disappeared Monday.

The big four-engine York, peacetime version of a Lancaster, had 39 persons on board when she was last reported 360 miles southeast of Gander, Nfld. They included British servicemen, their wives and 13 children bound for Jamaica.

First Indication

An early-morning SOS was the first indication the plane was in danger, but it gave no hint as to the trouble. It had then completed about three-quarters of its flight from the Azores.

An RCAF Lancaster circled the reported crash area Monday and reported no sign of wreckage or survivors. Two other Lancasters and two American C-47s continued the search during the night, and today five Lancasters and five American aircraft set out for the crash area.

A British freighter prowled through icy, pounding seas without success and three United States Coast Guard cutters continued a surface search during the night.

Many Planes Out

Eleven Dakotas from the air navigation school at Summerside, P. E. I., droned over Labrador throughout the night in search of the missing Lancaster. Today 12 Lancasters from Greenwood, N.S., and Goose Bay joined in.

Blinding snow thwarted searchers Monday.

The Lanc was returning to Goose Bay airport with two motors useless when it disappeared. It had been diverted from a routine training flight to hunt for a Philadelphia-owned civilian aircraft missing since Friday on a trans-Atlantic hop from Goose Bay.

No trace has been found of the plane or its two occupants.

Slippery Roads Cause Several District Crashes

Skidding out of control when the driver was unable to stop in time after the vehicle in front slowed down, a Charlton auto transport slid into the ditch on the Belleville - Trenton highway early today and crashed into a hydro pole. The hydro pole was broken and the transport was damaged to the extent of about $1,000.

Driver of the transport, Carl Kahut, of Mallorytown, told police that his vehicle skidded on the snow-covered pavement as he applied his brakes. The auto transport was west-bound and empty at the time of the accident.

Several other minor accidents on the highways were reported to provincial police.

At Glen Miller on Highway 33, M. McMaster of Frankford, slid off the road and struck a pole, while a short time later on the same highway cars driven by Elmer Wickens, Trenton, and Geo. Seeney, Campbellford, collided. McMaster suffered lacerations of the forehead.

North of Foxboro cars driven by Thos. Rynn of Rawdon township, and Michael Hogan, of Wilberforce, were in collision.

Yesterday at Latta, cars operated by two brothers, collided on a narrow sideroad. Edmund Hoskins, 19, Plainfield, was on his way home after taking his sister to school. James, 35, was driving in the opposite direction. The brothers met, causing $200 damage to their automobiles.

Belleville Service Darts League

Defeating the CNR team by a 10-1 score, the Big "A" entry in the Belleville Service Darts League nudged closer to the league-leading Hasty Pees at the weekly session last night. The Hasty Pees who were edged 6-5 by the Anti-Tank Regiment saw their lead cut to four points.

In the other games Corbins and Mail Carriers won over the Brewers and ANAF Veterans by similar 7-4 counts.

Steve Sine of the Hasty Pees was the high scorer of the night with a three-dart toss of 140.

The standing: Hasty Pees, 144; Big "A", 140; 9th Anti Tank, 101; ANAF'S, 94; Brewers, 84; Corbins, 78; Mail Carriers, 76 and CNR, 74.

Brigadier and Mrs. R. Gage Being Transferred to W. Coast

Brigadier and Mrs. R. W. Gage, on word received recently from Salvation Army Headquarters in Toronto, will leave the city some time in March to take over command of the British Columbia south division with headquarters in Vancouver. For the past three and a half years they have been leaders of the Mid-Ontario division stationed here in the city.

The two divisional leaders arrived in the city about three-and-a-half years ago when a new division was formed in Central Ontario with headquarters here. Brigadier Gage has been responsible for the work of the Salvation Army, with boundaries extending east to Gananoque and west to Toronto, including Fenelon Falls, Lindsay, Peterborough, Campbellford and Tweed. They expect to leave the city around the middle of next month.

The Brigadier has been an active member of the Rotary Club and his wife was also active with the Rotary Ann organization. During the Second World War Brigadier Gage served with the First Canadian Division overseas as a supervisor. Prior to taking up this command, he was in charge of the Manitoba division with headquarters in Winnipeg.

Commissioner Wm. Dalziel, Territorial Commander, announced Brigadier and Mrs. Gage will be succeeded by Lieut-Colonel and Mrs. Wm. Effer who will arrive in the city from Australia on March 19.

Popular Vocalist Will Make Debut On Television

Mrs. Ethel (Smith) Lawrenson, well known and popular vocalist of this city will make her debut on television next Monday. She will appear on the "You Can Be a Star" program over WHAM-TV, Rochester, next Monday evening.

The program is a talent show and either amateurs or professionals are eligible. Mrs. Lawrenson auditioned for the program before Christmas and was chosen to appear on next Monday's program.

Winners of the talent show are chosen by a panel of judges with the votes of television set owners viewing the program being a determining factor. Set owners in Bellevilel area viewing the program will have the opportunity of casting a vote for the Belleville singer.

Talk on Alcoholic Studies Given

The monthly meeting of the Belleville Ministerial Association was held Monday morning in Bridge Street United Church parlors, with the president, Rev. Sidney E. Larman, presiding. Archdeacon Arhur Smith conducted the devotions.

Rev. Duncan McTavish gave an interesting address on Yale School of Alcoholic studies.

Rev. Keith Daniel gave further report on the Belleville Leadership Training School whereby courses for Sunday School teachers, of all grades shall be given. The inter-denominational training school, Mr. Daniel announced, would be held in Bridge Street United Church, March 9 to the 13th inclusive.

It was decided that the Houghton College sacred concert which is to be held on Sunday evening of March 29 be held at the 8.30 p.m. hour so as to give all lovers of music an opportunity to hear the chorale group.

Speaker Deals With Problems Labor, Owners

A return to the simple fundamentals of life was urged by John Dibblee, personnel manager of the Hyro Electric Commission, in dealing with the problems of labor and management. Mr. Dibblee was addressing the regular noon luncheon of the Rotary Club in the Hotel Quinte yesterday.

The speaker, a man who played a major role in the merging of the 17 A. F. of L. Unions into one agreement on the Niagara power development, yesterday begged for application of the simple rules of Christianity in dealing with unions.

"I think," he said, "this problem, these differences which are threatening the entire industrial set-up are moral upsets not ones of technology. Men in managerial positions are too much interested in production to care for the well being of their employees. A suggestion which I would like to offer would be, let the leaders of industry care for the problems of the men who work the industry and the men will attend to productivity."

"In my mind," the speaker continued, "all the industrial warfare in this continent is evidence of moral breakdown. You realize of course, moral breakdowns are the cause of world-wide conflicts. And if there is no solution found for these industrial problems, we may be involved in a complete nation collapse."

Calls For Honesty

Speaking strongly, Mr. Dibblee offered his solution. "It calls for honesty among men," he said, and it calls for maybe going a little further than honesty. I am speaking of the care of men in the factories by industrial leaders. The whole solution hinges around this business of getting together with your neighbor. You say, why that's Christianity, and it has been preached for 2,000 years and has failed. Indeed, it is Christianity, but it has not been tried for 2,000 years and it has not failed."

Referring to the Niagara power development, the speaker described it as an efficient group doing a fast job at rock bottom cost. "On top of that," he said. "they are living up to the contract. Each side, in this case, is attempting to carry out their obligations and not fighting between themselves. And it was all gained," he concluded, "by the simple application of looking at the problem, by both sides, logically. We must be worthy of each other's trust if we are to have a smooth running development."

The speaker was introduced by Ernest Gurnett and thanked by Ed Bernstein.

Obituary

ALEXADER S. COCHRAN (Madoc)

MADOC — Following an illness for a number of years, Alexander S. Cochran, former clerk of the village, and well-known electrical supply merchant, died at Mrs. Alexander's Nursing Home at Queensboro early this Tuesday morning. The late Mr. Cochran had been a resident of Madoc since 1916 and in that time had taken an active part in the history of the community.

Besides being well-known through his business connections, he became clerk of the township he became clerk of the village and served in that capacity for 28 years. He was well-known and highly respected by those with whom he transacted business of the municipality from day to day. In the Madoc Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 48, he was held in high regard and served his brethren as secretary for many years. He was also connected with the social and sporting life of the community and served as secretary of the Bowling Club. He was an ardent bowler and helped form the club in the village.

In St. Peter's Presbyterian Church he was an active and faithful member when health permitted. He was born at Bishop's Mills, 81 years ago, being the son of the late Gahn and Rebecca Cochran and before moving to Madoc, resided in Oak River in Manitoba.

Surviving are his wife, the former Margaret Robertson, two daughters, Mrs. A. L. (Eleanor) May of Willowdale, Mrs. K. W. (Margaret) Conner, of Madoc, one brother, George Cochran, of Regina, Sask., and four grandchildren.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

Hastings County Received $238,800 in Grants Last Year from Ontario Govt.

Following up the story appearing in Saturday's edition of the Ontario Intelligencer with respect to provincial grants received by the city, the tax rate in rural municipalities is also considerably lesesned because of government aid in one form or another.

For instance government aid received by the county of Hastings last year amounted to a total of $238,800, a big percentage of this being subsidy on county roads and bridges.

The county receives 50 per cent subsidy on county road costs and 80 per cent of county bridge costs is borne by the Ontario government. Last year in Hastings this subsidy amounted to approximately $150,000 as one-half of a $300,000 road budget. This was for the county alone. Government road grants of up to 70 per cents are paid by the government to townships for road purposes.

Other Grants

Other grants received by the county were $25,000, as one-half of the net cost of operation of the home for the aged, $10,000 as 25 per cent of the cost of the work of the Children's Aid Society in the county. In both of these instances, however, the grants are turned over to the townships from which the patients or wards come.

The province paid $12,000 toward administration of justice costs in the county, $1,500 as part of the county assessor's salary and $300 toward the salary of the county weed inspector.

In addition to the regular 50 per cent grant on county road costs the county last year received another $40,000 as payment for road development work done by the county on the Foxboro-Frankford road.

This was a scheme whereby the Ontario highways department agreed to pay the costs of rebuilding a four-mile section on the Frankford end of the above road. County employees actually did the work with the cost of everything, but the additional right of way and fencing, being paid by the province.

Conferred with Doucett

To Elmer Sandercock, M.L.A. for Hastings West, goes much of the credit for the highways department bearing the cost of rebuilding the western section of the Frankford-Foxboro road. Mr. Sandercock, along with county and Sidney township representatives, had met with Highways Minister Doucett on many occasions impressing on him the need for rebuilding the road on the development road scheme.

Again this year Mr. Sandercock and county officials will meet with the highways department in an effort to secure additional funds to complete the road.

Another large amount of government aid which Hastings has enjoyed in the past two years was in connection with the construction of the new home for the aged west of Belleville.

On a total cost of approximately $1,000,000 the Ontario Department of Health paid 50 per cent for building and equipping the home.

300 Canvassers Collect $5,300 in 'Blitz for Blind'

Upward sof three hundred canvassers for the National Institue for the Blind Building Fund Campaign, braved the wintry blasts early last evening when the "Belleville Blitz" got under way.

According to the latest returns released this morning by campaign chairman Stanley Goodwin, manager of the Bank of Montreal, some $7,124 now lie in the coffers of the fund.

The amount of actual cash collected by the "blitz" amounted to $5,300 with the balance being made up by sundry cheques and other donations.

The amount of $5,300 does not represent the final figures for the blitz as a number of canvassers have yet to report. Other monies will be coming in from special committees, industry and business, but it is stated that the anticipated amount is still far short of $25,000 quota allotted to the city.

Chairman Goodwin paid tribute to not only his canvassers for the splendid job they did of a terrific task, but also to the general public for the fine reception accorded the door-to-door callers.

Results Satisfactory

"Considering the weather," he said, "the results were very satisfactory, and we feel that a number of people who were out for the evening or away from the city will donate their share to the fund.

Mr. Goodwin and other members of his committee as well as a number of well-known city personalities went "on the air" last night as intermittent results of the drive were broadcast.

An outstanding musical program was heard during the campaign time period of three hours.

To clear up any misunderstanding the grant of $7,500 which was earmarked by Hastings County Council during its recent session, will go to the county allotment, and not to the city's quota.

Campaign officials remind potential donors that all monies can be forwarded to the Bank of Montreal here, where they will be deposited to the fund account.

Constable's Face Red After Rebuff To Royal Couple

SNETTISHAM BEACH, England (AP)—"Keep out, it's no place for sight-seers," said a constable who stopped a station wagon entering this flood-ravaged community Sunday.

So Elizabeth II, Queen of England, and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, who were in the station wagon, ordered the chauffeur to turn about, and get out.

The constable hadn't recognized the lady, and he was ruddy with blushes when told today he had turned back the Queen.

The Queen saw a great deal on her tour of the devastated region, and learned at first hand that the greatest need of flood sufferers was wood for their fire places to dry out homes as water receded. She ordered that wood be sent from her Sandringham estate, and lorry loads of it were being delivered today to Kings Lynn.

Many were encouraged by the Queen's show of personal solicitude. Many drove from Buckingham Palace to Benfleet to visit rest centres for the thousands rendered homeless.

Broken Glass On Heating Boiler Causes Concern

TRENTON (Special) — A broken waterglass on the heating boiler at Ross Gunter's garage caused considerable concern on Sunday. A woman, who lives near the garage became excited and called the fire department when she thought she saw smoke pouring out of the building. The fire bell was sounded and the pumper raced to the scene. Investigation revealed the broken gauge and great quantities of steam belching from the furnace room. There was no sign of fire anywhere. The garage is at the corner of Richard and Sidney Streets.

Obituary

JAMES LOGUE

TRENTON (Special) — Solemn requiem mass was sung for James Logue, 90, at St. Peter's Catholic Church here at 9 a.m. yesterday with Rev. W. H. Carty officiating. A nonagenarian resident, ill only one week, Mr. Logue lived in Trenton for 19 years. Earlier he had resided at Read. He was a retired farmer.

His wife, the former Jane Rogers, died some years ago. No children survive. He died last Saturday at the home of his niece, Mrs Alex LaMorre, 33 Bay Street, He was born in Ireland.

Mourning his loss are two nieces, Mrs. James Dillon and Mrs Alex LaMorre of Trenton, and two nephews, Fred Logue, Trenton and William Donahue, Gaspe The late Mr. Logue rested at the Weaver Funeral Home until the service.

Entombment was in Mount Calvary cemetery and burial will be later at Read.

The bearers were: Don McHenry, Fred Logue, Alex LaMorre Robert LaMorre, Allan LaMorre and Joff LaFleur.

ARTHUR H. PECK

TRENTON (Special) — A respected citizen of Sidney and Murray townships, Arthur H. Peck died at the family residence, R. R. 3 Trenton, Thursday, January 29. He was 70.

Mr. Peck was born in England, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Peck who predeceased him.

His widow, the former Nellie May Pollard, remains to mourn his loss. Mr. Peck had been in poor health for some time.

He also leaves four daughters, Mabel and Grace Peck of Trenton; Mrs. Alec (Tilly) Nivison, Glen Miller; Mrs. Neil (Ruby) Nelson, Wooler; four sons, Edward, Percy, Victor and Jack, of R. R. 3 Trenton; one sister, Mrs James Gower, England; two brothers, Victor and Jack Peck, England.

A retired farmer, Mr. Peck belonged to Christ Church at Glen Miller.

The funeral was held from the family residence at 2 p.m. on Saturday with the Rev. H. C. Secker conducting the ceremony. Interment was in St. George's cemetery.

The bearers included Ernest Thompson, Dan Parks, Kenneth Crews, Fred Meyers, Clayton Stickle and Harry Crews.

LATE WILLIAM SIMMONS

The funeral of William Simmons, late residence, 10 Bridge Street East, was held from the Pinkston Funeral Home, 60 Victoria Avenue, at Church Street, Saturday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. G. Hornsby, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Harry Rollins, Harry Smith, Keith McCoy, James Fluke, Lyle Fluke and Ray Brown.

Planning Committee Asked To Deal With Application For Service Station Permit

The city planning and housing committee has been asked to deal with an application from the Imperial Oil Company asking for permission to place pumps and gas tanks at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Lingham St. The matter was referred for two weeks awaiting a report from the committee.

Some time ago the local firm of Moxam and Wood was granted a building permit to erect a service station at the above corner. The permit was rescinded before construction commenced.

The matter of pumps was considered by the public works committee and was referred to yesterday's council meeting for action. Mayor A. M. Haig felt, however, some recommendation should come from the planning and housing committee.

Wait for Board Claim

But, according to Alderman Tice, this committee does not care to deal with the application of the permit until after the public meeting to be held on February 12th. by the Ontario Municipal Board regarding the proposed city zoning by-law. Mr. Tice said the permit for the service station had been granted by the building inspector on direction of the city solicitor and was later rescinded.

This prompted a question from Alderman Smith, who wanted to know what the actual situation was.

"As I understand it, if they already have a building permit there is nothing to stop construction going ahead," he said. "But it seems to be debatable question. I can't see any point in laying the matter over."

Other Views Expressed

The mayor wanted to know if the proposed service station would fit in with the new zoning by-law. If it was in conformity with the by-law, he said he would support the application.

Ald. Countryman said he had been informed there was no objection by residents to the service station, but he would like to see the matter tabled to give residents the opportunity of stating their minds.

He pointed out that the proposed new zoning by-law did not apply to past usage of land and in his opinion it should not apply to any pending use.

"The point seems to be whether or not the applicants have a right to build," noted Ald. Bradford.

Ald. Temple said the permit had been issued and then rescinded before construction commenced. "In my opinion the applicants now have no permit."

Legal Opinion Necessary

"Legal opinion is necessary on the matter," declared Ald. Don Thomas. "But in my opinion each lawyer asked would give a different answer."

Service station operators in the city are seeking a closing by-law calling for pumps to be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. However, each week there will be four "duty stations", which will operate from 7 a.m. until 12 midnight on Sundays, the same four stations to remain open until midnight for the following week. Operators would rotate for 'duty' service.

Operators presenting their petition said it was signed by three-quarters of the station owners in the city. It was referred to the city clerk for checking.

Must Use Tarpaulin

Open trucks hauling refuse in the city will in the future be required to use a tarpaulin, it has been decided by council.

Ald. Thomas noted that private trucks hauling refuse to the city garbage dump at Zwick's Island were losing some of their loads by action of the wind. "The regular city garbage trucks were not responsible for the debris being left along the road," he said.

The city by-law which bars mink from being kept within the corporation will be enforced.

"I don't see why we have to tell the police to enforce a city by-law," objected Ald. Argue. "If the police are not enforcing the by-laws, get someone else to do it. If the law is foolish, then let us get rid of it. If it isn't let's enforce it."

Particularly to One By-law

The alderman said he was referring particularly to the smoke by-law. Ald. Clarke noted the police were supposed to enforce all by-laws.

Close co-operation between the city industrial committee and the Chamber of Commerce was suggested by Mayor Haig, who said it might be worth while if the Chamber president and manager were invited to sit in on industrial committee meetings.

Ald. Argue, as chairman of the industrial committee, noted that the secretary of the Chamber last year had also acted as secretary for the industrial committee. Since January, Mr. Argue said he had looked after the correspondence himself.

Request for Information

He noted that much of the work of the committee was merely a request for information and he could see the value of continuity as a person new to the job could not be expected to have all the answers.

Referring to the local industrial area Mr. Argue said some consideration should be given to levelling the property so as to fill in a large hollow which otherwise would be useless. There was about 30 acres of the industrial area left after sale of 7½ acres to Dussek Brothers who would shortly construct a plant there.

Alderman Tice agreed there should be close liaison between the industrial committee and the Chamber as the majority of requests for industrial information came to the Chamber of Commerce.

New maximum salary schedules and salary increases for city hall officials were approved by councillors on recommendation of a special committee appointed to consider the matter. All annual salary increase for city hall officials will be approved by council each year, it was decided.

Decide on Basis

The committee will go into the matter of car allowances for city officials and decide whether these will be paid on a per mile basis or on a flat rate per year.

Aldermen Keegan and Thomas were appointed as council representatives on a special committee for the rejuvenation of Victoria Park. It was pointed out there was an opportunity to purchase a quantity of fill for use in the park but no committee had been appointed, which could officially make the purchase.

Ireland Appliances Receive Award

At the annual Kelvinator meeting held in Belleville on Friday, January 23rd, Mr. Jack Ireland, manager of Ireland Appliances, Belleville, was awarded the "Merit of Honor" by Mr. C. H. Henderson, District Manager of the Kelvinator Company. Ireland Appliances held the distinctive achievement of leading all dealers in Canada with the most sales of Kelvinator Refrigerators during the four weeks prior to Christmas. Mr. Ireland is shown seated above handing over a contract to Mr. Henderson for another 108 Kelvinators. Also shown in the picture are Mr. Roy Kilbank and Mr. Ken Sharpe of the sales staff of Ireland Appliances. Mr. Ireland wishes it known that as Canada's No. 1 dealer he will continue to bring you Canada's No. 1 refrigerator, Kelvinator for '53, at his usual low prices. Watch Ireland Appliances' advertisements for outstanding values soon to appear. — (Advt.)

Hastings County Girls' Team Winners in Debate

Miss Marilyn Parks and Miss Kathleen Homan, representing the Hastings County Junior Farmers' Association, were winners in a debate with Carleton county representatives at the Eastern Ontario Junior Farmers' conference held at the Kemptville Agricultural School.

The debate was one of a second round and the two Hastings county girls will now enter the third round of debating in connection with the competition.

Subject of the debate won by Miss Parks and Miss Homan was "Resolved that our present educational system fails to meet the needs of young farm people." The Hastings team took the affirmative with Orville Mussell and Miss Beverley Hunt of Carleton county taking the negative.

Twenty-eight junior farmers from Hastings attended the conference which is an annual event and had the largest enrolment to date. They travelled by chartered bus along with Northumberland and Prince Edward juniors.

Highlights of the conference were addresses by David Pelletterio, Ontario Junior Farmers' president, and T. R. Hilliard. Hydro's expansion program was explained by Ron Cooksley of the hydro public relations department, with G. A. Lindsay, Department of Transport, speaking on the St. Lawrence seaway project.

Slightly over $3,000 in equipment, furniture and fixtures for the new firehall, Dundas street, east, was purchased. Cost to date for the new fire hall, exclusive of yesterday's purchases, is $79,000, according to city treasurer Denyes. This included the general contract, $74,000 and work done by the public works department on the grounds.

Under inquiries Alderman Argue wanted to know what the city had saved this year in snow removal. He was told by Alderman Thomas that actually nothing had been saved as certain monies were allocated for this purpose from January until December. A couple of heavy snowfalls late in the year could wipe the whole fund out.

Ald. Thomas said the average heavy snowfal would cost the city anywhere from $4,000 to $6,000.

George A. Whitman is now full time welfare officer, according to Alderman Bruce Smith in answer to a question from Alderman Tice. It was noted that the board of health would be expected to hire a sanitary inspector.

No New Coins Follwell Told

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott said in the Commons Monday the government does not plan to mint coins to commemorate the Coronation of the Queen.

He said in reply to Frank Follwell (L-Hastings South) that new coins with the Queen's effigy have been issued by the mint. The government does not plan designing new ones for the June 2 Coronation.

Retiring Employees Honored By Corby Distillery Staff

Guests of honor at a "retirement party" held in the H. Corby Distillery Ltd. recreation rooms last Friday were Messrs. George Sharp and George Hansey. Both were recipients of handsome gifts from their staff associates. Mr. Sharp is the oldest man, with 47 years to his credit, in point of service to be retired from active life with the distillery. From left to right are Mr. Robert Farquharson, mechanical superintendent, Mr. Sharp, Mr. Hansey and Mr. Robert Eves, rack warehouse superintendent.

Forty-seven years in a distillery — and still on his feet, going strong.

That is the record of Mr. George Sharp, Corbyville, veteran employee of the H. Corby Distillery, Ltd., who last Friday was given honorable retirement from the job he has known since early manhood.

Mr. Sharp said a reluctant farewell to the environment he has known for nearly half a century, and to fellow employees he has been associated with for varying periods of time at a party given in honor of himself and Mr. George Hansey, another retiring employee in the distillery recreation rooms last Friday night.

Here, visibly affected, he was the recipient, as was Mr. Hansey, of a handsome electric lamp, tangible tributes t oyears of efficiency and enjoyed associations with the plant and fellow workers.

Made Presentation

Mr. Bob Farquharson, mechanical superintendent with whom Mr. Sharp worked, made the presentation to him, while rack warehouse superintendent Robert Eves did similar honors for Mr. Hansey.

Mr. Hansey completed twenty-seven years employment with the distillery on the same evening.

Laudatory tributes were also paid to the retiring employees by Mr. Wilfred Laporte, distillery manager and Mr. Fred Sprague, retired excise officer, who served 37 years during Mr. Sharps tenure of employment.

Motion pictures, cribbage, euchre, reminiscence and refreshment rounded out an enjoyable evening albeit was tinged with regret at the severance of association.

Forty-seven years ago, George Sharp then a budding youngster of 18 years, secured his first job under the late Harry Corby.

Recalled Old Days

At that time the lumberjacks were rolling logs down the Moira. There were some 21 hotels along Front Street and to these, young Sharp piloted horse-drawn drays loaded with 45-gallon barrels of whisky. He worked in the hopfields owned by the Corbys and tended cattle sometimes as many as 1,250 head which were owned by packing houses and brought here to fatten on grain mash.

He hauled the company's product to the warehouse which was located on the site of the present offices of Mr. Jamieson Bone.

He has seen drastic changes in production and construction phases of the distillery. He was groom to the splendid horseflesh that hauled the Corby products.

He has had innumerable jobs in the plant but of late has been with the mechanical department.

Mr. Sharp is the oldest in point of service to be retired from the Corby Distillery. Up until a few years ago, he resided in a company house near the plant. Now he lives in a house of his own near Cannifton.

Mr. Sharp married the former Emily Dickson of England, and had four children by the union, three sons and a daughter. One son, Dale, was killed overseas in action. The other two, Ken and Bill, reside in Roslin and Oakville respectively. The daughter, Mrs. Bert Bleekman, lives in Cannifton.

Asked what he was going to do on retirement, Mr. Sharp smiled and said "Jes go fishing, I guess."

Four Admitted

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—One child and three women were admitted to hospital Monday night and two others were treated for injuries after a two-car smash a mile west of Lambeth on No. 2 Highway.

Admitted to War Memorial Children's Hospital was Karen Markham, 2, of Victoria Harbor, near Midland, with a broken leg and forehead cuts.

Admitted to Victoria Hospital were Mrs. Sarah Noble, Miss Dorothy St. John, and Mrs. Gordon Prentice, all of Uxbridge.

VICTIMS OF THE STORM

It has been a long time since newspapers carried such a list of world tragedies as was published in Monday's editions. Chief among these, however, was the high death toll as a result of the violent storms which swept the British Isles, The Netherlands and Beligum.

The count up until late Monday afternoon of 850 people drowned in all kinds of mishaps brings home to us the fact that when the weather goes on a rampage it can cause a tremendous amount of human misery in a short time.

We read about these events, but most of us in Ontario have little conception of what it is to be flooded out of homes or to have houses suddenly destroyed by hurricanes or tornadoes. A few years ago the Coe Hill district was swept by a tornado which killed one girl and smashed a number of houses and barns. That seemed like a catastrophe, as perhaps it was to those who went through it, but when the storm reaches the magnitude of the one in Europe then anything we experience is a pretty minor affair.

It is to be expected world-wide sympathy will take the form of substantial assistance both in money and material. The Red Cross, as always, will come to the aid of these stricken people. We in Canada, who have so much, should lend every assistance, in food, money and clothing, but action should be initiated at the earliest opportunity.

And so as we sit in our comfortable homes tonight and read about the aftermath of storm, we can conjecture the grief, the tragedy and the huge financial losses suffered by those victims of the storm. We can be thankful, too, that this province of ours is comparatively free from such violent moods of nature. Perhaps we can even stop grumbling for a while about the weather as we have it. It could be a lot worse.

MEAFORD SHEEP-RANCHER HAS THE ANSWER

To shoot or not to shoot? is a ticklish question for sheep farmers when their flocks are chased by dogs. Some farmers make no bones about shooting the dogs. Dick White of Meaford, for example, a rancher with 600 sheep in St. Vincent Township, told the Ontario Sheep Breeders' Association in Toronto Wednesday that he shoots every dog he sees on his land and buries it. A neighboring sheep farmer does the same, but in his case a court action followed his drastic method of protecting his sheep.

The Ontario Association was divided on the solution and eventually passed a motion asking municipalities to increase dog taxes so that there would be enough money to pay for losses in sheep flocks. We doubt if anything will come from such a motion, admirable as the scheme might be, comments the Owen Sound Sun-Times.

The dog is a particular menace to sheep. Whereas the wolf stalks a flock and strikes at an animal separated from the remainder, a dog runs haphazardly among them, killing here and there. Its nuisance is increased a hundredfold at lambing time and many a farmer has had still-born lambs after a dog has been among his flock.

It is doubtful if any farmer wants to shoot anyone's pet dog. But does a dog remain a pet when it is allowed to roam miles over the countryside without control? Surely then it becomes merely an appendage in the home, no longer man's best friend and an enemy to ranchers.

WHAT'S IN A NAME!

One of the subtler quirks of human nature is the one which lets you address one man as Bill the first time you meet him, but keeps you calling another Mr. Smith through 10 years of acquaintance, states the Hamilton Spectator.

This strange process of discrimination seems to work collectively as well as individually — whole nations call one man by a nickname, address another one in full.

Why, for instance, is Dwight David Eisenhower Ike to the whole civilized world, but John Foster Dulles strictly John Foster Dulles and never Jack? Why is Mrs. Eisenhower Mamie, but Oveta Culp Hobby always the three names in full? Why is Lester Bowles Pearson Mike to everybody, but Louis St. Laurent Uncle Louis only to a few and never to his face? Why is Attlee Clem, but Eden never Tony? For that matter, why was William Lyon Mackenzie King formally called Mackenzie King and not William King, but informally nicknamed Willie and not Mac?

In a few cases, the thing is the result of typographical necessity. Roosevelt, for instance, was unhandy in a headline; F.D.R. fitted easily.

For the most part, what a man comes to be called seems to be a subtle reflection of his personality. Abbott is definitely the Doug type; Howe does not at all have the air of Clarence.

"We cannot tell the precise moment when friendship is formed. As in filling a vessel drop by drop, there is a last drop which makes it run over; so in a series of kindnesses there is at last one which makes the heart run over."—Daniel Bliss.

"Be wiser than other people if you can, but do not tell them so."—Chesterfield.

PA ON TELEVISION

Ma tied his tie and brushed his hair.
His Sunday suit she made him wear.
His handkerchief she folded so
Four points upon his breast would show.
She had Pa looking nice, since he
On television was to be.

Ma straightened out his coat a bit,
A white carnation pinned on it.
She took away his pipe and pouch.
She sternly bade him not to slouch,
Since nation-wide he would be seen
Upon the television screen.

At nine the program would begin.
At seven we called the neighbors in,
A merry and expectant crowd,
Of Pa all eager to be proud,
So Ma could tell him how they cheered
When on the screen his face appeared.

In vain the tie and suit of blue!
In vain the white carnation, too.
The moment came for Pa to start,
Camera and cable fell apart.
And all we saw of Pa that night
Was two grim streaks of black and white.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 3, 1933.

Mrs. Joseph Legault has returned home from Montreal where she visited friends.

Mr.R. E. Colling has returned home after spending a short time in York, Nebraska.

Winter touched this city and district with a swirl of snow, miniature gales which prevailed nearly all night and a drop in the temperature which was a decided contrast to the balmy spring weather we have experienced for the past week or so.

At the annual congregational meeting of Holloway Street United Church, the pastor the Rev. Harold B. Neal, presided and the reports submitted showed that much progress had been made in all departments during the year. The following officers were elected: Board of Trustees, elected for three years: Garn Dobbs, Charles A. Ostrom, E. Hubbs, F. McMaster and G. Peterson; Board of Session, elected for three years: James Cordes, A. C. Campbell, G. Hall and H. Spafford; Trustees to fill vacancies: A. Greatrix, Garn Dobbs, G. Lloyd, L. Reid and J. Shaw. The total givings of the members during the year amounted to $5,600.00.

Feb. 3, 1923.

The Argyll Light Infantry Rifle Association marksmen are fast getting into trim for the Dominion competition. The scores made last night out of a possible 100 were as follows: Sergt. A. J. Stewart 97; Lieut. W. E. Elliott 96; Major D. McManus 95; Sergt. H. Stanley 95; Corp. G. W. Elliott 90.

Mrs. Will Luscombe of Trenton rendered a solo at the morning service in the Baptist Church here on Sunday morning. She has a very fine voice and sang with much expression.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. J. E. Rothwell and wife of Toronto are visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson Ireland of Wellington, spent the weekend here with his brother-in-law Mr. F. Snider.

Mrs. R. B. Watt has left for her home in Edmonton, Alberta, after visiting her brother, Mr. W. H. Phillips, Commercial Street.

Mr. Charles Weese of Thurlow township, left his horse and sleigh in a shed back of Front Street yesterday and when he returned he found that some one had stolen the lines from the harness.

Mr. James Woodley while hunting yesterday west of the city limits shot a red fox which was a fine specimen.

50 YEARS AGO

Dr. McKeown's horse ranaway yesterday on Everett Street. The cutter was badly damaged.

The amateur minstrels will hold a rehearsal in the C.O.F. hall this evening. The boys will put on a great show in the near future.

Large shipments of live hogs are being made from here.

The hockey team of No. 2 school defeated the Britannias at the rink last evening. The score was 5 to 2.

Mr. J. McDougall of Calgary was in town today.

These are the days for the public works department to show that it has sand on hand and use it generously on the slippery walks.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

HAMMER AND ANVIL

Voltaire once remarked that every man is either a hammer or an anvil.

Which are you? Are you letting the events of life pound you day by day as the hammer pounds the anvil? or are you the hammer fashioning the events of life in accordance with what you believe to be right and desirable? you may be wrong, of course, in your judgment; but what is your basic attitude toward life's events? Are you being pommeled by them as you lie on your back supinely, or are you handling the events of life courageously, gallantly, peremptorily, with a sense of inner power?

You have that inner power. It is not of yourself, it is the gift of God. If you think that alone you can stand up against the events of life and cope with them successfully, you will some day be shrieking in despair, as these events sweep you down outside your own, by a sense of comforting, divine presence at your side, you can avoid catastrophe and achieve triumph.

Don't falter. Choose which you will be—the anvil or the hammer. And in all remember that the most powerful factor you can enlist on your side is religious faith.

He Is Breeding Extinct Animals

(From the Providence, R.I., Bulletin)

Herr Heinz Heck's astonishingly successful experiments at the Hellabrunn zoological gardens in Munich will shock all true progressives. For Herr Heck has gone backward and succeeded in breeding two extinct kinds of animals. The first is the aurochs, a European wild ox, which disappeared over 300 years ago, and the second is the tarpan, a wild horse, which has been gone scarcely a century.

No museum had preserved hide nor hair of these animals—just pictures, descriptions and a few bones. But out of the scraps of knowledge and by carefully selecting domesticated animals, which had retained characteristics of these vanished ancestors, the indefatigable and scholarly Heck has bred them back into existence.

It took him 11 years of unnatural selection and crossbreeding to produce two authoritative aurochs, a bull and a cow, from whom a herd of 40 living specimens have now sprung. There stands the aurochs as it stood 400 years ago.

To re-create the tarpan Herr Heck chose Iceland and Gotland mares and crossed them with the only living wild horse—Przewalski's horses—now living tamely enough in a few zoos. And there stands the mouse gray, slender boned ancestor of the swift riding horse.

Now then one cannot help wondering what Herr Heck will be up to next. The London Times suggests restoring the wild boar. Personally we should like to see him restore little blue hippopotamus. I fact, we should be quite content with anything along the early ancestral line except our own. That would be carrying retrogression too far.

The Eskimo--A Skilled Engineer

(Resources Minister Winters discusses the ingenious Eskimo in a Montreal speech)

One characteristic of the Eskimo which has perhaps contributed more than anything else to his survival in such trying conditions has been his innate ability as an engineer — and particularly as a construction engineer.

Take the case of the snow house, the igloo. Architects and engineers have given a great deal of study to this and have found it impossible to devise, with the materials that are available, a better shelter against the Arctic climate than the igloo.

Remember that, when the igloo, is completed, it represents a perfect dome, proof against all local stress and strain. By the simple expedient of using a spiral method of construction, the Eskimo fashions his dome without any interior support. An igloo can be built by one man and, if only a small shelter is required, in the space of half an hour.

The arch of the Romans and the dome of the Byzantines have been regarded as miracles of architectural design. So they were, but the design of the igloo can be considered just as great an achievement.

Another example of the Eskimo's engineering ingenuity is the development of his sled. The flexibility of structure given by fixing the cross bars to the runners by thongs instead of pegs permits the sled to ride easily over the rough ice; but most important of all, the use of mud as a coating for the runners producers the lowest co-efficient of friction on the snow that it is possible to obtain. Here again, modern science cannot improve on the methods developed by the Eskimo hundreds of years ago.

You may be curious to know, as I was, where the Eskimos get the mud for this purpose. I'm told that they get it during the warm weather from swampy grounds and let it dry. Then in the cold weather they make it into a paste with water from melted snow, coat their runners with it, and let it freeze. They then smooth the runners off.

An Eskimo going on a long trip always carries some of this dry "powdered mud" with him, just as we carry a spare tire. If part of the mud coating chips off the runner he unloads his sled, turns it upside down, mixes up some mud paste and repairs the damaged coating of the runner.

Then take the traditional walrus harpoon. The head is detachable and comes loose from the shaft when the walrus is hit, thus saving the spear from being broken as the animal thrashes around. The head, however, is tied to the shaft by thongs, which prevents the shaft from getting lost, and it is also tied to a large inflated bladder. This bladder, as well as serving as a marker, tires the walrus out when he tries to pull it through the water as he dives.

The engineering instinct of the Eskimo is not by any means limited to the evolution of devices necessary for his existence. He has a mechanical ability engrained in him.

General Young, the Deputy Minister of Resources and Development, told me a story of what happened to him when he was a young subaltern in the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, stationed at Aklavik, in 1924. His alarm clock stopped and he did what the white man usually does when faced by such an emergency. If it had been merely the alarm I'm sure there would be nothing more to this story, but it was the clock itself, so he shook it violently, thumped it on the table, and then, when this "immediate action" failed, gave up.

A young Eskimo boy who was watching said he could fix it. General Young, feeling that the clock was useless anyway, gave it to the Eskimo. I think that any of us faced with the clock would have quickly undone two or three screws, a spring would then have flown loose and half a dozen small wheels would have jumped all over the place. Not so with the Eskimo. He studied the clock very carefully, then took his screw?driver and removed one screw. This he examined slowly and thoroughly, looking both at the screw and the place it came from. He then put it down neatly so that he would know exactly where it was to go.

He followed this slow methodical procedure with each screw he took out. It took him six hours to dismantle the clock and to put it together again, but when he was finished every piece was in its right place, and above all — the clock was running.

People who have lived with Eskimos can tell you numerous stories like this of incidents where Eskimos, without any technical training, successfully repair motor boat engines or delicate instruments such as chronometers.

Notes on Gracious Living

The ad writing boys and the folks who edit the magazines on houses and how to live in them have come up with a new one. Today the clinching argument is "graciousness." "This antique snake-legged coffee table with pull-out roulette wheel makes for gracious living," they proclaim. Or, "A midnight buffet in aspic is what today's gracious hostess serves." It's all so gracious; some new muss to smear on potato chips at a cocktail party, a new combination bar-rotisserie-baby's pen, or a new hostess coat of Algerian burlap hung with ermine tails. It's also unusually expensive, but that may be just a coincidence.

Unhappily, resources won't always guarantee graciousness. A Hollywood hostess once gave an illustration of a certain lavish of grace. She was entertaining at a lavish dinner and was complimented on it by one of the guests. "It's simple," she said. "I have twelve separate dinners with all arrangements, depending on the importance of the guests. Even down to the proper dinner service. All I need to say to the butler is 'Important people tonight, Featherstonehaugh. Dinner number one!'"

As one of the guests picked up the solid gold plate in front of him and held it over his head to see that it was marked "six carats," he asked: "And which number dinner is this?"

"Oh," said the hostess gracelously. "This is dinner number eleven."

But real graciousness has a fault. It is a quality that people see in a person, not that he can see in himself. To that degree it's something like a halo. It rarely happens in South Norwalk that a tired husband comes back from a day's labor in the city and dines on pork chops laved in anchovy butter ("anchovy butter on pork chops is a gracious touch!") As he stretches out in his elongated care-remover chair-with-built-in-massager ("a care-remover adds a piquant definite note to gracious living") he says: "Goodness I feel gracious tonight."

His wife, dressed in a lounge-around of zebra hair ("lounge-arounds appeal not to the many but to the few who choose the gracious by instinct!") nods. Then she says: "I feel sort of gracious tonight, myself. But I'd feel a hell of a lot more gracious if you'd buy me that blonde chestnut living room suite which I just read was the latest grace note to gracious living."

Faithful Unto Death

(Windsor Star)

When an aged farmer died of a heart seizure near Welland, police had to shoot his dog before they could get to the body. The dog for three and one-half hours had defied attempts to lure him away.

Such incidents aren't unusual. There was a similar case in Windsor in the 1930's when a police dog would not permit police, or even relatives, near the body of his dead master. The Humane Society officers finally tried to get him with a net, but he escaped by jumping off a second storey landing.

This but proves the loyalty of a dog to his master. The canine knows something is wrong; that people have come to take his master away. Loyal unto death, (literally in the Welland case) the dog wants to protect the one he loves.

Canada Buys More Bagpipes

(U.K. Information)

An Edinburgh Scotsman whose somewhat specialized one-man business consists of making bags for bagpipes in his basement shop says Canada is his best market. Douglas Kewley's product was introduced to Canadians by a friend on a visit to Vancouver. Now Mr. Kewley gets many inquiries and one Canadian firm has given him an "open order" for as many bags as he cares to send at any time. In business only four years, he has supplied the Seaforth Highlanders in Korea and customers in India, Ceylon, Kenya, Switzerland and South Africa, as well as in the U.K.

MIRACLE IN MINIATURE

BUSINESS FIRM OR BONA FIDE CLINIC?

There are two kinds of clinics, and every doctor who is not employed by, or financially interested in the wrong kind knows it.

Doctors throughout the country will be happy to know that I was recently thrown out of a newspaper in the deep south to assuage the ire of doctors in the community who insist that this column is against all clinics.

If that were so, I should be thrown out on my ear.

In an article released for Jan 4, I explain clearly when a "clinic" is not a clinic. Albough I can't cite Webster in support of my teaching, because Webster sidesteps the issue, or did so in the latest edition I have seen (1935), I call attention to the fact that Webster recognizes only the bona fide clinic, an institution, often connected with a hospital or a medical school, where patients are examined and treated in the presence of students.

A real clinic is an educational, charitable, benevolent institution, never a corporation, partnership, business or racket set up for profit.

Patients in a real clinic pay only nominal fees or charges if any. Customers of a phony kli-nick generally pay more for the service or treatment they get than a physician or specialist who practices under his own name would charge. You understand, suckers, somebody has to pay for the imposing environment, the uniformed attendants and the Rube Goldberg machines on display at the kli-nick.

Show me a place where the doctors complain loudly about Brandy telling the truth about the kli-nick racket and I'll show you a place where the profession of medicine is in process of conversion or has been converted into a business, where the principles of medical ethics have been remodelled to permit doctors to use the methods formerly regarded as quackery, such as practicing under a trade name other than the doctor's own.

Patients who are unable to pay for medical care may get the best available advice, care or treatment from the leading physicians in the community without cost, at the clinic, the clinic attached to or conducted by medical school or hospital.

Mind you I think a doctor should charge whatever he or she and his or her patients think his or her services are worth. That is not the point, although kli-nick racketeers usually charge what they think the sucker will pay, say two or three times what an honest doctor would charge.

Has any doctor in the kli-nick racket the temerity to deny that the use of the name "clinic" by a group, clique or comapny of practitioners for profit is a wretched appeal to popular credulity? Can any such racketeer give any other reason for using the title "clinic" to give his business an air of respectability?

When I say bona fide I mean clinic.

When I say kli-nick I mean racket.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Honey is Sugar

Ben Told any one with diabetes can eat honey. Is it true (B. A.)

Answer—Composition of honey varies but usually it contains considerable cane sugar along with dextrose and levulose (sugars from fruits and flowers.) So far as the diet of diabetic is concerned, it makes no difference whether cane sugar, beet sugar, milk sugar, glucose, levulose, dextrose, maltose, corn syrup, honey, molasses, candy, cake, sweet beverage or sweet fruit be preferred, the patient's carbohydrate tolerance determines how much sugar and/or starch he or she may eat.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

When two cars get into a small collision or a side-swipe or a fender-bumper such as are commonplace occurrences in modern traffic, you will note that in the ensuing argument, out beside the two stalled cars, one of the parties is loud, assertive, masterful and accusatory, while the other is mild, modest, quiet and placatory.

This does not mean that the loud one is the injured party and the quiet one the guilty party. As often as not it is the other way round.All it means is that the loud type and the calm type are about evenly divided amongst us. Sometimes two loud ones get into a collision and then there is quite a good show. Sometimes it is two of the mild and reasonable type, and then you see an exhibition of good maners and common sense that is most flattering to the human species.

The loud, aggressive breed often gain some advantage by their assertiveness. But sometimes it doesn't work. One of my aggressive friends is now involved in a very desperate job of crawling; and these masterful types don't crawl at all well, or gracefully. He got ino a small collision with a car the other day, and on bailing out to face his adversary, he found him to be one of those calm, quiet characters, polite and soothing. My friend at once launched into a most abusive tirade, a tactical manoeuvre that had always paid off in the past, whenever he was in the wrong. And he was in the wrong this time.

When the argument was over, and the calm and collected adversary had more or less won the debate by persisting, in the most unruffled fashion, to state the circumstances as he saw them, the business of exchanging names and addresses was begun. And my argumentative friend discovered to his horror that he was talking to his brother's boss.

And it was no secret in the family that the brother has not been standing in too well with his boss in recent months.

My friend, who is one of those fierce, cigar-chewing characters demanded of me:

"So what do I do?"

"Give your brother a job," I supposed.

It is not as simple as you might think to be masterful.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THERE IS A TIDE

Those familiar words—do it now—have confronted most of us since birth. How we have acted upon them is what has contributed to what success or failure has been ours. That Kansas U.S. Senator J. J. Ingalls, made himself famous by a single poem, called "Opportunity." But he contended that opportunity knocked but once.

Opportunity knocks time and time again, but not the same opportunity, and inasmuch as we never know the comparative value of each knock, we ought to immediately open the door, without waste of time, and welcome the stranger!

There are always rewards awaiting that one who acts at once on what he believes to be an opportunity. Shakespeare put it very realistically, in his Julius Caesar, where he said: "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, leads on to fortune." It is this tide that should apepal to the alert and open eye! All success is founded upon action.

Opportunities are forever knocking and even displaying themselves at every turn in our lives. Franklin was intrigued by the flashes of lightning in the sky and so experimented to see if that power of electricity might be used to benefit mankind. He was forever acting upon the "tide" which prompted him to start the first fire department in a city in furthering knowledge through the printing press, and many another activity that carried on long after he was gone.

People who have had a feel, or sudden impulse, to do a certain thing have proved to be the pioneers and initiators who have given us our greatest progress and civilization. How many of us have witnessed our own unacted upon ideas crried to success by another! And what a lesson it has been to us!

There is a world of meaning in that familiar line—"He who hesitates is lost." The time to grasp at an idea, impulse or good intention is "at its flood." Opportunities wither away when they get cold, or when they leave us unacknowledged or unfed.

HOW TO AVERT AN ACCIDENT

(Collier's Magazine)

Nebraska lady's car inflicted minor fender damage to parked car as she parked her own. On the accident report she came to the most controversial question: "What could the operator of the other car have done to avoid the accident" But it didn't stump her. She wrote: "Well, he could have parked somewhere else."

Delegate Says Parts of Ontario Loaded With Deer

NORTH BAY (CP)—Walter Wilson of Kitchener, a delegate to the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, said Sunday that sections of southern Ontario are "loaded with deer" and farmers are slaughtering them for fox feed.

He suggested that the closed seasons on deer in southern Ontario were responsible for the increase in the number of animals and that "political pressure" on the part of county councils had been used to keep the seasons closed.

Other delegates at the organization's silver anniversary convention here told of illegal deer shooting and the sale of meat to American visitors.

The meeting left the question up to the resolutions committee to bring it to the attention of provincial authorities.

Reserves Stand

The convention reserved its stand in relation to the deer population in Northern Ontario. A motion was passed seeking a ban on the shooting of bucks and a shortening of the present deer season by 15 days.

Dr. A B. James of Toronto, chairman of the resolutions committee, said the suggestions will be held over until a province-wide deer census has been completed by the department of lands and forests.

The meeting approved a motion recommending keeping the daily limits of fish to their present levels, reducing possession limits from two day's limit to one day's limit, limiting export of a day's catch of any type of fish and abolishing the no-resident family licence.

Awarded Plaque

William Maloney of Hamilton was awarded a plaque for contributing the most to practical conservation during 1952. Mr. Maloney has organized a group of junior conservationists in his city.

The Oshawa Game and Fish Protective Association received a trophy for its work during the last year in the conservation field. The winning club adopted a number of streams, planted trees to prevent erosion and restocked them with fish.

David Wilson, 59, of Toronto was elected president, succeeding K.S. Clarke of Kingston.

CRIPPLE SAVES BROTHER

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Pat Marshall, a 13-year-old Girl Guide who walks with the aid of a polio brace, dived into icy creek water Sunday to rescue her younger brother. The children were sledding down a golf course hill. Pat's brother, nine-year-old Bobbie, went into the creek when the ice gave way. He is a non-swimmer.

His sister dived in and grabbed him. Gail Marshall, 11, held out a stick and Pat pulled herself and her brother to safety.

Amateur Builders Erect Hospital Much Below Cost

EXETER, Ont. (CP)—A group of amateur builders have constructed a $380,000 hospital here for $270,000.

South Huron District Hospital opened its door Feb. 2 in this community 35 miles northwest of London on a sound financial footing.

Part of the money used to erect the hospital was donated by 15,000 citizens who contributed $114,000. This is approximately $8 for every man, woman and child within a 20-mile radius of the community. County, provincial and federal government grants also were provided.

While funds were being raised the chairman of the hospital committee, Ulric Snell, asked for tenders on the new building. The lowest figure was $320,000 not including $60,000 for equipment.

"We couldn't afford that," he said, "so we went to Queen's Park in Toronto and told them we would erect it ourselves."

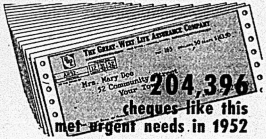
Thrifty Planners

Mr. Snell hired a builder to supervise the construction at a straight salary of $10,000. Exeter officials weren't content with buying cement and lumber wholesale They went direct to the manufacturers, thus saving approximately 25 per cent.

To help meet expenses, the Lions Club built a cottage and rafled it off, making $10,000. The Legion made $3,000 through a giant bingo and the Ladies' Auxiliary of nearby Centralia donated $1,100.

One of the first steps involved in the construction was the purchase of an old 14-room house which formerly belonged to Sir John Carling. This had been converted into a reception room, offices and nurses' quarters.

Next to the Carling mansion, stretching almost a block, is the new one-storey structure. The rooms have flower-tinted drapes and a public address system connected to the corridor.



204,396 cheques like this met urgent needs in 1952

During 1952, The Great-West Life made 204,396 separate benefit payments to policyholders and beneficiaries—amounting to over $38,000,000. Sharing this huge sum were elderly people who had saved for an independent retirement; widows and children to whom the payments were of vital importance; and many others whose share, often coming in an emergency, was of special significance.

In addition to benefits paid out, a further $28 million was added to the funds held for the future benefit of policyholders.

In every other phase of Company operations, progressive achievement was apparent. Great-West Life representatives carefully planned and arranged new protection amounting to $327 million for more than 45,000 people. Great-West Life policyholders now own more than $2 billion of life insurance and annuities in the Company. Assets, which are soundly invested in productive enterprise, grew to $446 million.

Shoppers Even Series With Area In N.E. Finals

Machine Shop evened the best-of-five series for the Northern Electric Interdepartmental Hockey League championship over the week-end, defeating Area "G" by a 13-5 score. Areas won the first game 8-6.

It was practically all "Wardhaugh" as far as the Shoppers' scoring goes. Harry hit the hemp for six goals while brother Jack connected for five and two assists. Rosetti and Clark contributed the remaining pair.

The "Jones Boys" Peter and Davey carried the scoring brunt for the losers, each scoring a pair with Dent getting the odd one.

Machine Shop struck hard in the first period ramming home three goals with nary a return. Both teams turned it on in the second heat, with the Shoppers accounting for six markers and the Areas striking for five.

The Shoppers added four more in the third heat while holding the opposition scoreless.

The game was cleanly played with no penalties handed out by Referee Hurst.

The third game will be played next week-end.

In an exhibition game a composite Northern team defeated a Bakelite squad by a 7-4 score. Salter with three, James and Wallbridge with two each were the Northern goalgetters with Cousins (3) and Mandeville scoring for the losers.

Senior: Joan Moore, 17, Wellington, 94.

Many fine papers, 61 in all, were sent in, making the competition quite keen. The lessons are held under the auspices of the Board of Christian Education and the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Many schools study the lessons but do not send papers in to try for awards.

It is interesting to know that during the last few years more public schools take part than Sunday schools, hence the course is now known as the National Temperance Study Course.

Women's Activities

BOWERMAN'S W.A.

ALLISONVILLE —Bowerman's W.A. January meeting was held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Fred Maxwell and Mrs. Claude Maxwell. Mrs. George Hendry kindly played the piano for the hymns, the president, Mrs. Robert Wood, presided, with 17 members and eight visitors present.

Mrs. S. Weir took charge of the devotional period.

Collection and back dues amounted to $7.99. An invitation from Wellington W.A. was accepted. Mrs. Hubbs gave two readings on the program. It was decided to hold a pot luck supper at the Orange Hall, February 17.

Mrs. B. Wilson handed in $5 to the W. A. which she had made selling Christmas cards.

Bridge St. W.A. Installs Officers

The Women's Association of Bridge St. Church held its annual potluck luncheon in the Sunday School auditorium on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. J. M. Woods presided over the business meeting following the luncheon. The annual reports showed that the association had had a most active and profitable year.

Miss M. Onley Tells of Visit To Holy Land

Monday evening the Evening Branch W.A., of Christ Church met for monthly business meeting, with the president, Mrs. E. Smith, presiding.

Reports were given by Mrs. H. Stevens, Miss Frances Reid and Mrs. J. Spencer.

It was decided to hold a spring tea, also a rummage sale, and a World Day of Prayer service for the branch.

Miss Margaret Onley, of London, England, guest speaker, was introduced by Mrs. L. Watson. Miss Onley, who was a nurse with the army during the war, is on an extended visit to Canada.

She told of her visit to Palestine, Jerusalem, and of going down to Jericho and Bethlehem. She also showed some fine snapshots of churches, tombs, and of Mount Olivet, as well as samples of handmade Nazarene lace.

Mrs. J. Cooke tendered appreciative thanks to Miss Onley for her most interesting talk and pictures.

Refreshments brought the evening to a close. These were served by Mrs. G. O'Brien, Mrs. F. Portlock and Mrs. F. O'Connor.

WILL ADDRESS CLUB

TORONTO. (CP) — Bill Boss, Canadian Press staff writer with the Canadian forces in Korea, will address the Toronto branch of the Canadian Women's Press Club, Tuesday evening.

Mr. Boss is in Canada on leave and soon will go to Germany to report an activities there of the Canadian 27th brigade and R.C.A.F.

Next Friday he will speak to the Canadian Managing Editors Conference at London, Ont.

Mistress of Robes Dark-Haired, Classic Beauty

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's choice as Mistress of the Robes is a dark-haired, classic beauty, the dowager Duchess of Devonshire.

Daughter of the fourth Marquis of Salisbury, the duchess is the widow of the 10th Duke of Devonshire, who died in 1950. Her job can loosely be described as "supervising the duties of the ladies of the household." She will be at the Queen's side on most important ceremonial occasions.

The women serving a sovereign, largely descendants of ancient families, receive no special training. The duchess, whose late husband was a trainbearer at the coronation of George V, will however have plenty of family experience to draw on for guidance. Her mother-in-law, also a dowager Duchess of Devonshire, has been Mistress of the Robes to Queen Mary since 1910.

Until 1893, Mistress of the Robes was a political office with a salary of £500 a year. Holders changed office with the government until, during the last period of office of Prime Minister Gladstone, the post was made non-political. Appointments then became the personal business of the sovereign—a fact welcomed by Queen Victoria.

For the first 11 months of her reign, the present Queen borrowed the services of the Duchess of Northumberland, Mistress of the Robes to the Queen Mother.

'Religious Education' Topic at Foxboro H-S Meeting

The regular meeting of Foxboro Home and School Association was held in the school on Wednesday evening with the president, Mrs. William Rombough in the chair and 14 members present.

Rev. H. Giffin, minister at Foxboro United Church, was guest speaker, his subject "Religious Education". Mr. Giffin said in effect, that "our children are our most precious earthly possessions, and 'just as the twig is bent the tree inclines', so parents and teachers are building the nation of tomorrow depending on what we are teaching our children today." Mr. Giffin teaches seven classrooms of children every week and he demonstrated to the parents how he explains Bible stories with flannelgraph.

The next meeting will be held in February the subject "Parent Education".

St. John Ambulance Brigade Entertains Homemakers Service

The St. John Ambulance Brigade entertained last evening in their club room the Red Cross Homemakers' Service.

Educational films dealing with child training and health were shown including "He Acts His Age"; "The Terrible Twos and Threes;" "Date of Birth"—an attribute to older workers showing the development and productivity and a plea to remove age barriers in hiring a working staff. "The Outlaw With", which dealt with the scourge of cancer, and a "Trip to North Bay", a travel film depicting the scenery of the north country.

Mrs. A. C. Ketcheson, convener of the R.C.H.S., attended the recent meeting of the Ontario Divisional committee of the Service, in Toronto, to consider a part-time service for older people.

Mrs. Milligan, a Homemaker, who has been seriously ill following a recent operation, is making a remarkable recovery.

Following the close of the meeting, refreshments were served.

COSTLY KISS

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—A girl friend's kiss cost a St. Catharines youth $29.50 Monday when he was fined for careless driving. Police said the girl kissed him while the couple was driving in nearby Grimsby. Magistrate H. D. Hallett, a bachelor, said kissing "may be a pleasant occupation—but it is not meant for the front seat of an auto on the highway."

Fellowship Club Elects Officers

The Fellowship Club of Holloway Street United Church, held its meeting of the month on Wednesday evening last with Mrs. Earle White, president, presiding and the usual business being transacted.

The pastor, Rev. Sidney Larman installed the new officers for 1953. He also gave an informative address, which was much enjoyed by members and visitors.

Mrs. J. A. Hitchon and Mrs. T. A. Tucker took charge of the devotional period.

Appreciation of the club was extended to Jacqueline and Bobbie Avery for a lovely duet. Mrs. T. A. Tucker gave readings.

Officers are, Mrs. Earle White, president; Mrs. John McFarlane, secretary; Mrs. Everett Fitzgibbon, treasurer; Mrs. G. Wrightmyer, press reporter.

A social half hour was enjoyed.

Julia Works Wonders For Four on $15.00 Per Week

By MARY MOORE AND JULIA

Because Julia's letter is full of little nuggets of wisdom I am giving you this second instalment—continued from last week. As you will remember Julia is doing all of this clever managing on $15.00 per week for four people, her two girls being of school age.

Julia, continues: "Today for lunch by way of variation we had soup and homemade bread and pancakes with honey butter (made by melting sugared honey over hot water with a good-sized piece of margarine added to it.) Served hot over pancakes it is delicious. We also had salad. The pancakes were made from a packaged mix bought last Fall when there were specials on. I add buttermilk instead of plain milk. They are much more feathery.

Here is my week's supply of meat bought today: 2 lbs. riblets, cheaper than spareribs but delicious barbecued, 15c per lb.; 1 lb. bologna at 33c; 2 lbs. pork liver at 29c per lb.; 1-2 lb. bacon at 25c 1-2 lb.; 1 soup bone 10c, 1 roast $2.51 at 55c lb. (blade). This last I shall cut in two. It was large but lovely, so I will keep half in freezer for next week as we don't like a lot of cold beef or pork. We'll have bacon and eggs one meal. The liver will do two meals, riblets 1 meal, bologna 1 meal (sometimes I steam it to heat it and serve with fluffy mashed potatoes), beef 2 meals and maybe the soup made very hearty with perhaps the roast end or ground up bits of liver if any left; soup mix will be added, lentils and bits of celery and carrots. . . the meats I have mentioned were all specials for this week-end and that's why prices are quoted. . . I must close now Mary—I've followed your column as long as I've been married. Then I could only bake scalloped potatoes, cake, macaroons, so you've turned out another good cook to your credit as I can make Fluffy Hot Biscuits and the bread every one loves from your column—Julia T."

Isn't she a whiz? Isn't her husband lucky? It's people like you Julia that keep this country ticking. Thanks for sharing your ideas with us.

My five cents worth comes now.

Years ago I concocted a dish that without my intention has become sort of famous. It was made out of what might be termed "nuthin' much". The day was Thursday (refrigerator clean-up day in our house) and the cupboard was bare—except for three eggs, about two cups ground leftover veal and about 1 1-2 cups cooked rice. I pondered the possibilities and came up with a sort of Chinese Omelette, topped with the veal, made into a cream sauce. I'm sure all of you have been in the same kind of a fix, so, sparked by Julia and her ideas, I'm going to give it to you.

EMEM'S "ANYTHING GOES" OMELETTE

One and one-half cups cooked rice, 4 tablespoons each butter or margarine, and flour, 2 cups milk (or 1-2 cup skim milk powder and 1 3-4 cups water), 3 eggs, yolks and whites separated, 1-4 teaspoon each dry mustard and paprika, 1 1-4 teaspoons salt, about 1-4 or 1-2 cup dry grated cheese. Make a sauce by melting the butter or margarine, stirring in flour until smooth, then milk until thick. Pour this over the beaten yolks, then add the rice, seasonings and cheese. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour into greased shallow dish and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 35 minutes or cook in large frying pan as you would an omelette, drying off the top in the oven. This amount serves 6. When ready to serve turn out on hot platter and pour over it

CREAMED MEAT

Make another white sauce just as the one in omelette is made. Add 2 cups chopped or ground meat (ham, veal, beef or chicken or even salmon), and some celery salt. Heat through. One cup chopped cooked vegetables may be substituted for 1 cup of the meat—peas, celery, carrots, asparagus have all been used by me.

If readers have "make-do" ideas that will match these of Julia's and mine send 'em in to the paper "attention Mary Moore'.

RESCUED BY SISTER

SUTTON (CP)—Mrs. Isobel Hall was dragged unconscious to safety from a burning house at Udora, 12 miles southeast of here, by her sister, Mrs. Ernest Rowland Saturday night. Their brother-in-law, Glen G. Bagshaw, owner of the house, jumped 20 feet to safety from an upstairs window. The house was destroyed.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. C. BEECKMAN

For morning wedding groom's mother shouldn't wear dress of too-light shade

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

Please advise me about the costume to wear to my son's wedding next month. Church wedding, 11 o'clock Mass. No reception; just the two families will go to the bride's house. The bride's mother is to wear a navy-blue dress, with pink hat. I would like to get a light-blue dress, to wear with my finger-tip seal cape. Do you approve? If so, what color and what length gloves, and what color hat, shoes, purse? I am 50, have blue eyes, and brown hair with some gray.—Groom's Mother.

For such an early-in-the day wedding I'd advise you not to wear a light shade of blue. . . this shade can look stark, inappropriately "dressed up" for a mid-morning wedding. With your blue eyes, blue is, I imagine, a very becoming shade for you, and I suggest you choose a medium blue which will harmonize with the bride's mother's dress. But it wouldn't be fitting for the bride's mother, the hostess, to wear such a conspicuously lighter shade. With your medium-blue shade, which can be a deep, rich shade, you might wear a matching hat, short or medium-length gloves of soft beige doeskin, black pumps or shoes the shade of your dress, and a small afternoon purse, perhaps blue-beaded or of blue faille or damask.

Hostess' high-hearted plan to entertain for the bride-to-be

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband's brother is marrying a very sweet girl in three months. Would it be proper for me to give this girl a small, intimate bridal shower in my home? I would like to invite both mothers, of course, and also about ten of our close friends, both hers and mine. Since our apartment is small and I have small children, I'm wondering if the following plan for serving in the living room would be correct, and if this simple menu would be ample: To serve soft drinks until all the guests arrive; with the drinks, salted nuts, potato chips, candy, etc. Then, on a tray, to serve small sandwiches of various kinds, with olives; and then cake and coffee. (Having a table set for buffet service would be most inconvenient for me.)—L.

Your plans seem so thoughtful and high-hearted that I hate to have to tell you that it isn't considered correct for a relative of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be to give a bridal shower. However, perhaps, since you're an in-law and since you're inviting so very few guests, and apparently are not featuring the shower presents very much, it will be permissible. However, whether your afternoon party is a shower or just a gathering of "the mothers" with friends, your procedure-plans are quite all right (to serve the guests as you would be at a tea-party rather than at a buffet-party) and your menu plans can be too, with a change or two.

(1) With the soft drinks, don't serve candy. And do have the potato chips well heated.

(2) Serve coffee with the sandwiches, and repeat this coffee service with the cake.

(3) You may like to serve tea as an alternative, if some of the guests prefer tea. (You might ask one of your guests to take charge of the coffee-serving, and one to take charge of the tea-serving.

Is it proper to give shower for widow remarrying?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to give a shower for a widow who is marrying again? I'm invited to the shower, and I don't think it's correct. M. J.

It isn't customary to give a shower for the bride-for-a-second-time. . . but there is really nothing incorrect about it if to the shower only a small group of the most intimate friends of the guest of honor are invited. However, if you feel strongly that this shower is not in good taste, I see no reason why you should accept the invitation.

MANSION GUTTED

DELHI, N, Y. (AP) — A million-dollar fire Sunday gutted "Aknusti," the 65-room colonial mansion of New York City financier Robert L. Gerry. Origin of the fire was not determined. Many valuable art objects were lost. Designed to be fire-proof, the dwelling was constructed of concrete, tile, slate and structural steel.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His sister is mentally ill—should she marry him?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My folks disapprove of the boy with whom I am in love because he has a sister who is mentally ill, and they say that if I marry him my children will be the same way. He has three married sisters, however, who all have children and all the children are all right.

Do you think I should drop this boy just because of that one thing I am 16 years old.— G.B.

Dear G.B.:

If nobody ever married people who happened to have some mentally ill relatives, there would be a sharp drop in the marriage rate. For, unfortunately, mental illness is a widespread affliction which hits a great many families, but it by no means necessarily affects brothers and sisters of those so afflicted. So I certainly do not think you should arbitrarily give up your friendship with this boy for this reason alone. I do think, however, that, since you are only 16, it would be unwise for you to promise to marry anyone at all at this time.

My advice would be that you wait at least two years before taking any such important step. Then, if, at the end of that time, you find you still want to marry this boy, you would not be doing anything without having given it plenty thoughtful consideration. You would also have time to familiarize yourselves with the principles of mental health, so that, with a good understanding of these, you would have the added assurance that you knew both how to conduct yourselves, and to bring up your children, in such a way that everybody concerned would be well-poised, happy and able to meet life with maturity and courage. If everyone realized the importance of this, and did something about it, it would be a big help in decreasing mental illness in the country.

I hope both you and this boy will see the good sense of waiting until you are older to think seriously of marriage.

Don't worry about past decisions

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Six years ago my husband and I were separated, and he later married again. His wife was a widow with a large family. My husband and I had three children, who were left in my custody.

Last month my former husband died. I didn't go to his funeral, but allowed our children to go. Do you think I should have gone with the children, or did I do the right thing by sending them and staying away myself.—Mrs. W.

Dear Mrs. W.:

First let me say that, since this episode is over and done with, it is foolish for you to waste any time thinking about what you might have done. Let the past alone and stop worrying about it.

All that any of us can ever do when making a decision about anything is to follow out what at the moment seems to us to be the right and best plan. I am sure you did just that, and since you evidently felt it better to have the children go to the funeral without you, then that was the right decision. So put the whole thing out of your mind immediately.

FIRE HITS NEW SCHOOL

TORONTO (CP) — Spontaneous combustion in a pair of oil-smeared overalls was blamed for a $50,000 fire which Saturday swept through the main corridor of a suburban Etobicoke township school, scheduled to open today. Repairs to the 10-room public school, which cost $250,000, will take six weeks.

BUDGET COMING

An extended debate developed on the government's proposal to appoint an associate defence minister. A Progressive Conservative amendment calling for a closer definition of his responsibilities was defeated by a vote of 111 to 52

Mr. Abbott's choice of an early budget date appeared to have two possible explanations. It fits into the drive to end this session of Parliament by May 1 so members can attend the Queen's coronation June 2. Past sessions have run into June and July. It also supports persons who forecast a snap election this spring.

However, Prime Minister St. Laurent said during the week-end in Brantford, Ont., that any election this year likely will be in the fall. One must be called by August, 1954.

Oct. 5 and Oct. 12, both dates a Monday, have been mentioned as the likeliest times for a fall election.

Financial Needs Known

The government's financial needs already have been made known. The estimates tabled last week showed that the government expects to spend a record $4,404,976,-236 in the fiscal year starting April 1.

This is an increase of 29,239.052 over the $4,375,737,184 the government expects to spend by the end of the present fiscal year. However, the government has two more months to add supplementary estimates to that figure.

The budget outlines the government's method of raising money for these expenditures. Taxes, duties and other sources of revenue are raised, lowered or kept pat depending on what portion of the gross national production Mr. Abbott thinks the government should get to meet estimated expenditures.

Last year Mr. Abbott estimated gross national product between $22,600,000,000 and $22,750,000,000 during 1952-53. For the 1953-54 fiscal year there are signs it may total $23,000,000,000.

Compare With Budget

In addition, revenues may exceed expenditures during the present fiscal year by between $100,-000,000 and $125,000,000. This compares with Mr. Abbott's estimate of a surplus of $9,000,000 in the last budget.

During the debate on the plan for an associate defence minister, the Progressive Conservatives, CCF and Social Credit members supported George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, in an unsuccessful attempt to amend the government's bill.

Mr. Drew moved a similar amendment while the Commons was considering the government's plan in committee. He urged appointment of an air minister, but the Commons adjourned before any action was taken.

During the debate Prime Minister St. Laurent said the world is in a "twilight zone" between peace and war, but the government feels it should not yet use emergency action without parliamentary approval.

He made the remark in reply to previous arguments by Mr. Drew that the government did not need to change the Defence Act to appoint an associate defence minister. The power already existed to make the appointment under the Emergency Powers Act.

Would Be Costly

Mr. St. Laurent said the proposal for an air minister would be costly and cause overlapping. The new minister would concentrate on administration and Defence Minister Claxton on international defence relationships.

(The government has designated Solicitor-General Campney as associate defence minister.)

Mr. Drew said the government plan does not clearly define the responsibilities of the new minister. The result would be continuation of the present "inadequacies" in defence administration.

Percy Wright (CCF-Melfort) and Solon Low, Social Credit leader, supported Mr. Drew. Both said Canada needs an air minister.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC, (PC-Nanaimo) said an air minister is a necessity with half the defence budget going to the air force. The situation in the defence department was the result of one minister with powers too wide to handle efficiently. An air minister could administer the development of air power essential to defence.

Mr. Claxton said sweeping assertions of a breakdown in his department weren't borne out by facts. The Currie report concerned itself only with the army works services — a branch of the army engineers.

Attempt Unsuccessful

TORONTO (CP) — Prisoners made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from a downtown police station during Friday night, police said Saturday.

A heavy screen was pried from a window in Court street station where 41 prisoners were held. Bars had been loosened.

"All that was needed for an escape was one good kick to the bars," an officer said.

MOBILIZE TO AID

Nearly 1,000 Missing

Estimates placed the total British missing at between 600 and 1,000. Britain counted about 35,000 homeless and 250,000 acres of land flooded.

British rescue efforts were slowed by a frantic fight to shore up the breached English dikes against the possibility of new onslaughts from the sea. The once-hurricane winds were still moderating, with eight to 18 miles an hour predicted today, but seasonal high tides due again in about two weeks could bring fresh disaster.

Many sections of Holland still were isolated, with as-yet-unrecorded dead. Early today, 48 hours after the disaster struck, word finally reached Amsterdam that 200 persons had drowned in the tiny village of Stavenisse.

Piled High in Shed

An exhausted messenger from the burgomaster of Oude Tonge staggered to safety telling of 180 corpses piled high in a shed on the twin islands of Goeree and Over Flakkee. The same messenger said 1,500 persons spent their third night on an open dike, in sleet and snow, without water or medicine.

Another 70 persons are missing them hungry, all of them home-the same island.

From dozens of stricken towns and villages in England and Holland refugees flowed into hastily set up camps and centres. Many of them were ill, most of them hungry, all of htem homeless.

With communications still widely disrupted, Dutch officials as yet could make no accurate estimate of the missing or homeless. Up to 1,500 square miles were estimated flooded — most of the 23 islands off Zeeland and south Holland and some of the world's richest soil. More than 50 Dutch cities, towns and villages reported deaths.

Offers of help and sympathy came from all parts of the world. Canada will start mobilizing aid as soon as the stricken countries can say what would be best. It probably will be handled through the Canadian Red Cross.

Officials in Britain and Holland met to assess the damage and make plans.

Prime Minister Churchill termed Britain's flood a "national responsibility." Queen Mother Elizabeth broadcast an appeal for help for the sufferers. Dutch Premier Willem Drees called the floods a "national catastrophe" but recalled the motto of battered Zeeland province: "I struggle and emerge."

The two countries' monarchs — Elizabeth II in England and Juliana in Holland — toured the flooded areas and comforted the sufferers.

New reports continued to come in of misery and danger in troubled spots of both England and led spots of both England and Holland.

The English island of Canvey in the Thames estuary was the grave of an unknown number — perhaps as many as 300. About 100 were known dead and several hundred were reported missing there. More than 7,000 had been evacuated but some 3,800 persons remained.

On another Thames island — Sheppey — 28,000 persons were isolated. The RAF dropped 27,000 sand bags on the bit of land so that an effort could be made to repair the dikes before the next high tides.

From the submerged Dutch island of Schouwen-Duiveland an official radioed early today that the "number of deaths is not estimated." The town of Zierikzee there was reported under five feet of water and a tug and oil tanker left to evacuate survivors.

The fate of some 8,000 people on the island of North Beveland, in the lee of Walcheren, was unknown. One report said the island was completely under water; a further report said evacuation was under way.

Allied armed forces in Europe rushed construction and relief supplies and personnel to The Netherlands. Lt.-Gen. Manton S. Eddy, U. S. commander in chief in Europe, ordered in 300,000 sandbags, 30,000 spades, six helicopters, 15 slow planes, 200 amphibious "ducks," landing craft, and numerous specialists. Many other units were on the alert to move in when needed.

Canadian Army engineers in the Hannover area of Germany stood by, ready to go to the Netherlands, should the Dutch require their help.

EDEN PLANS

He has said that unless these countries do get together on the plan—a possible keystone of future European federation—the U. S. might give its policies a "little rethinking."

From Prime Minister Churchill down, British leaders have been documenting arguments on three other main problems to be discussed during Dulles' visit. These are:

1. Britain's desire for early talks with the U. S. on a new program of economic co-operation among Europe, the Commonwealth and North and South America.

2. The uneasy situation in the Middle East. Britain is anxious to have firm U. S. support in her disputes with Iran over oil and with Egypt over military bases in the vital Suez canal area.

3. The rearmament programs of the 14 Atlantic Pact allies. Foreign ministers of these countries are scheduled to set new arms targets for 1953 and 1954 at a May meeting in Paris.

British newspapers took a dim view of Eisenhower's decision on Formosa.

The independent Times said Chiang's nuisance value for harrying the Chinese Communists "is small and fleeting at best when compared with the wider political and strategic dangers that are being run."

The pro-Labor Daily Herald asserted: "The just cause of the United Nations all over the Far East will be injured if it now appears that the discredited Chiang Kai-shek is to be resurrected as a valued ally."

514 DEAD IN

Plugged by Bags

The town council of Great Yarmouth, almost in the centre of the stricken area, ordered emergency measures "on a full wartime basis" as the four-mile tidal basin threatened to burst its walls. Many small breaks already had been plugged by 20,000 sandbags.

At Great Wakering in Essex, 250 engineers ordered to "work until you are told to stop" sandbagged all night to repair the 20-foot-high, two-mile-long seawall.

The receding waters along London's Thames banks were suspected by police of carrying 10 missing cans of poison hydrogen cyanide gas out to sea. One could kill anyone who might open it. Ten other cans were found lodged under windows in east London.

At the army's experiment station in Foulness, another flooded Thames island, work went on to save huge quantities of flooded secret equipment. No official would say what the equipment was.

New Tales of Horror

The survivors — many of them badly injured and gravely ill from exposure — brought from the flooded areas new stories of horrors unmatched since the war.

One woman, trapped in her house in Felixstowe, heard a mother screaming all night, begging someone to "open the window and take my baby." Later she saw the bodies of children floating in the streets.

Damages to two Royal Navy ships at Sheerness, in the Thames estuary, were estimated officially at £1,000,000. They were the frigate Berkeley Castle and the submarine Sirdar, both battered and knocked on their sides.

The 16,000 people of Sheerness were without electricity. They suffered, too, from an acute water shortage and the sewer system was blocked.

Huge damages were suffered at two oil refineries on the Thames estuary. One will be out of commission for several weeks.

The Queen and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, visited Norfolk and talked with the homeless refugees. At one rest centre, a child not knowing who the lady in the fur coat was, chanted cheerfully: "Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been? I've been to London to see the queen."

The government's special flood relief co-ordinating committee already was in action. One big question was how the seawalls in stricken East Anglia would be rebuilt and where the money would come from.

Churchill has promised the government will help on the distress fund opened by London's lord mayor "on a scale to be announced when the magnitude of the disaster has been assessed."

Agriculture Minister Sir Thomas Dugdale told the House of Commons Monday that rebuilding the sea defences "will present one of the greatest civil engineering problems we have ever had to face."

He said there were 280 breaches in the seawalls in Essex alone.

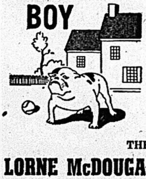
Road Block Set Up

HAMILTON (CP)—Ralph Grubisich, wanted by police in connection with the Dec. 9 murder of a Buffalo, N.Y., jeweller, was the object of an intensive search throughout the area between here and Kitchener Monday night.

Road blocks were set by provincial police at several points following tips that the wanted man had been seen.

The hunt was touched off by the discovery Saturday of Grubisich's car near New Hamburg. Since then he has been reported seen in several municipalities throughout Southwestern Ontario.

DOG BITES BOY



The milkman slips on your icy walk. Your dog bites someone or knocks a child over. A week-end guest slips on a scatter rug. You may hit another player with a golf ball. Everyone knows how easy it is to have an accident and in the eyes of the law, the person responsible for the accident is going to pay.

The injured person cannot only claim for medical treatment and loss of income but for compensation for pain and suffering and it is not unusual to find claims being awarded by the courts for amounts like $10,000 and $50,000.

If you have never inquired about the cost of liability insurance you will be surprised how low the premiums are and your estate will be much more secure with our insurance to protect you.

St. Mark's W. A. Appoints Officers

Deseronto — The annual meeting of St. Mark's W.A. was held recently at the home of Mrs. E. Robinson when 17 members answered the roll call.

Following are the officers elected for 1953: Mrs. J. Lyons, honorary president; Mrs. N. Thomas president; Mrs. E. Robinson, vice president; secretary, Mrs. William Crabbe; treasurer, Mrs. H. Provins; Mrs. Tucker, Dorcas secretary; Mrs. Chalmers, delegate to annual convention. A collection was taken to be sent to the Canadian March of Dimes. Money was also collected to be sent to help defray expenses of Miss Jessie McArthur, the chosen representative from the Girls' Auxiliary in Ontario to attend the coronation.

A letter of thanks was read from Rev. A. Shepherd, Birmingham, England, for the Christmas parcel sent by the W.A. Plans were made for taking part in the World Day of Prayer.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the hostess.

Order Rescinded

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia imbibers returned Friday to the "two-beers-at-a-time" routine.

Atorney-General Robert Bonner said a recent order banning sale of more than one glass of beer at a time to a beer parlor patron has been rescinded.

At the same time, he ordered all beer parlors to make available to their customers cheese straws, potato chips, pretzels, soft drinks and fruit and vegetable juices.

This is in line with a recommendation of the B.C. liquor inquiry commission that food be made available wherever beer is sold.

For years, beer has usually been sold in B.C. two glasses at a time per customer. But the liquor act said only one at a time and Mr. Bonner decided to enforce the order two weeks ago after the liquor commission reported some tavern patrons were being sold five glasses at once. This, said the commission, was "sheer debauchery."

Beer parlor waiters protested the order, saying they were being rushed off their feet.

WE WONDER how much finer you can get than the aluminum wire used in delicate apparatus which records the earth's tremors. Drawn out almost to the vanishing point, it is about one-twelfth the diameter of a human hair. One pound of aluminum would make enough of this unbelievably fine wire to stretch 20,000 miles!

We know no more striking example of the way people make use of the lightness and strength of aluminum for all sorts of jobs. Our research and technical men are constantly tackling new questions brought to them by Canadian manufacturers who look to aluminum in developing new products, or better products, or products that cost less. Toronto Visited With Heavy Snow, Traffic Slowed

TORONTO. (CP)—Five inches of snow fell in the Toronto area Monday—the heaviest in the province—and slowed traffic. Several minor accidents were reported.

Described by the weatherman as a "minor disturbance", the storm moved across Southwestern Ontario, dumped three inches on St. Catherines and blanketed the Hamilton district.

The department of highways described the main area of snowfall as running south from Peterborough and Kingston regions.

Light snow was reported at Ottawa.

There was a rash of accidents in Oshawa and many cars pulled off the highways to wait for better visibility.

A dozen accidents were reported in Hamilton and one boy was injured. Police said district roads are heavy with snow, but passable. Snowplows are working to clear highways.

A steady snowfall slowed traffic at St. Catharines and a few minor traffic mishaps were reported. Temperatures were mild.

London had 2.2 inches, Trenton 1.6 and Muskoka less than an inch.

The edge of the storm reached to Kirkland Lake. North of there, the weather was clear and cold.

ENGINEER TO CAPTAIN

HALIFAX (CP)—An engineering officer became a ship's captain for the first time in the Canadian navy's 2-year history at the commissioning Saturday of the 10,-000-ton technical training ship Cape Breton. He is Cmdr. E. N. Clarke of Vancouver.

Goalkeepers Acclaimed As NHL Celebrates Another 'Horse-Collar' Week

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The Oshawa Truckers — Glen Roys' much-discussed game is definitely on for next Friday night, at least as far as the Ontario Hockey Association and the Glen Roys are concerned. Bill Hanley, OHA business manager wired Glen manager Don McNevin to the effect that the game has been ordered played for that night and McNevin confirmed the wire with a telephone call.

The Truckers have a tough week-end in store for them. On Thursday night they entertain the Orillia Pontiacs, who handed them a 12-4 shellacking the other night, tangle with Belleville here on Friday and on Saturday go to Orillia for another joust with the high-flying Pontiacs. Stouffville is in Orillia Wednesday in an important group section fixture. The Petes travel to Kingston next Friday night and much depends on the outcome of that game.

THEY DOOD IT

While the Peterborough Petes are not yet out of the play-off running, their chances were cut last night when hockey-lightning refused to strike in the same place a second time.

The set-up in Peterborough was practically the same as that of last Friday night here. The Glens had powered a 2-0 lead, at the end of the first period, led 3-2 going into the third and were in front 4-3 when the clock read a minute and a half to go.

The Petes' Jim Ellis remembered last Friday. He promptly yanked Harding from the Petes' nets and the power was on. But this time it was different. Sammy Mulholland tore a hole in the Petes' offensive platoon and streaked in for the insurance marker and it was all over but the post-mortems. The win put the Glens all-even with Kingston Goodyears at the top of the eastern section heap with 22 points while the Petes lag behind by five.

The Petes have five games to play, three with Kingston, one with Stouffville and the other with Belleville. The Glens have six to play, one with Oshawa, one with Orillia, one with Stouffville, all toughies, two with Kingston and one with the Petes.

COBOURG HERE TONIGHT!

Tonight the junior Hawks should chalk up a 4-pointer when they play hosts to the Cobourg Jays in Memorial Arena. The lakeside kids are a plucky, hard-fighting crew and scared the bejabers out of the up-and-coming Oshawa Buzzers the other night, extending the Motor City youngsters to the limit before bowing to a 5-3 score. The Hawks, hot after their fine exhibition against the St. Michael's Buzzers, are in fine fettle and should take this one. But you never can tell.

The Hawks lead the group by seven points over the second place Kingston crew following the Vics' 9-2 victory over the Lindsay Warriors in Kingston last night. The Vics have 31 points with the Scugog crew next with 26. The Peterborough Links are fourth with 24 and the dangerous Oshawa Buzzers next with 21.

It was a rough-and-tumble jamboree in Kingston last night with the game not getting under way until ten o'clock. Bad roads between Lindsay and Peterborough caused the delay.

Nineteen penalties were handed out in the rugged fray with Lindsay getting thirteen. In the boisterous third period Lindsay collected four misconducts and two match misconducts as the Scugoggers came up with a weird brand of hockey. The Vics led going into the third 4-0, then came the penalty deluge and the Vics rammed home five against a pair. 'Twas quite a party.

BASKETBALL TONIGHT

Bill Spafford's Belleville Moiras tangle with the Trenton RCAF Flyers here tonight in the first of a best-of-three play-off series for the Bay of Quinte Intermediate "B" Basketball League Championship. The second game will be played on Thursday night on the Flyers' court. The game here, which gets under way at eight o'clock in the Collegiate gymnasium, should be a thriller for despite the fact the Moiras have only tasted defeat once and that at the hands of the Flyers, that is now all water under the bridge, and the boys start all over again tonight. It should be a thriller as these clubs have staged some brilliant exhibitions during schedule play. Basketball fans should not miss this one.

PLAY BOY!

Taking note of a couple of stories which appeared in Detroit papers following the week-end series of a week ago between the Wings and Canadiens in which the label of "hatchet man" had been hung on his star for his efforts in belting out a couple of Marcel Pronovost's teeth and breaking Glen Skov's nose, the impish Dick Irvin thought he'd have some fun.

When the Canadiens skated out for their pre-game warm up, Richard wasn't among those to appear. Instead there was a character wearing a bright red toque, a false black beard, a red plaid jacket, knickers and carrying over his shoulder a hockey stick to which was attached the cutting blade of a hatchet.

On the back of red plaid jacket was a big, white No. 9—Richard's number.

The individual, who later was identified as one Gasto Bettez, assistant trainer of the Canadians, skated pompously around the rink several times then joined the legitimate Montreal players in their warm-up. The fans got quite a kick out of his show.

LEON BAKER WINS PACE

TORONTO (CP)—Leon Baker, owned by the Smith Bros. of Ottawa and driven by Bud Gilmour, paced his way through a snow storm Monday to score a double-heat victory in the class A pace, featured harness event at Dufferin Park. Hazel Grattan, owned and handled by Bill Habkirk of Lucknow, Ont., and Lucy's Prince, owned by William Jones of Oswego N.Y., split heats in the secondary attraction.

DAVIS DEFEATS DUNN

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Lightweight Henry Davis, 135¾, Los Angeles, pounded out a unanimous 10-round decision over George Dunn, 136, Edmonton, Monday night in their feature boxing bout at the Auditorium. Davis, a Detroit-born Hawaiian now campaigning out of the west coast, dropped Dunn for a nine-count in the final round with a stiff right uppercut to the chin.

Al Rollins Only Custodian To Fail to Blank Opposition; Howe Stretches Scoring Lead

MONTREAL (CP)—The association of harassed goalkeepers has just come through shutout week with merited acclaim but elsewhere in the National Hockey League's newest official statistics the seven-day span takes on the appearance of shakeup week.

Detroit Red Wings, idle when Montreal Canadiens brashly took over first place, shook off a minor slump by walloping the opposition in three games and moved back on top with 59 points. Canadiens had two wins and a tie in four starts and trail the Red Wings with 57 points.

Toronto Maple Leafs, with a win and a tie in three games, snatched third place from the faltering Chicago Black Hawks who dropped three in a row. The Leafs have 50 points; the Hawks 48.

Boston Bruins, with recovered cripples back in action, came out of three games with a win and two ties as a start in recovering lost ground. They now trail the Hawks by only two points. The cellar-dwelling New York Rangers, with one victory and three losses, are 12 points behind the Bruins.

The individual point-scoring standing also underwent sharp revisions. Detroit's brilliant Gordie Howe, collecting six goals and four assists for a 37-30 count, is far in front with his 67 points. His nearest rival is teammate Ted Lindsay with 50 points. Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Canadiens now has third place to himself with 47.

Every goalie except Al Rollins of Chicago helped himself to a piece of shutout cake. Gerry McNeil of Canadiens and Jim Henry of the Bruins grabbed theirs at the same time when the teams played a scoreless draw.

Five shutouts in a week's play cropped up once before this season—in mid-January — but four goalies figured in that display compared with five this time.

McNeil leads in shutouts with eight but is second in goals-against average with 2.14. Sawchuk leads with 2.02. All the goalies except Rollins shaved thin slices off their averages during the week. Jim Henry has 2.46, Harry Lumley of the Leafs 2.48, Rollins 2.70 and Lorne Worsley of New York 3.14. The figures include games in which other goalies have appeared.

Bernie Geoffrion of Canadiens moved into the "Big 10." His one goal and two assists lifted him from a 13th-place tie into a deadlock for 10th with Jim McFadden of Chicago and Ted Kennedy of Toronto, each with 31 points. Kennedy is out of action with injuries.

Ted Lindsay still sets the pace as the league's bad man, with an even 100 minutes in the cooler. Toronto is the most penalized team, with a total of 630 minutes.

Lorne Ferguson Clings to AHL Scoring Lead

NEW YORK (CP)—Lorne Ferguson of Hershey Bears, though he managed to score only two points during the last week, was still at the top of the American Hockey League scoring list today with a total of 52 points. Moving up into second place with 49 was Guyle Fielder of St. Louis.

Ike Hildebrand of Cleveland Barons and Zellio Toppazzini of Providence shared the goal-scoring lead with 26 each. Hildebrand, out in front last week, hasn't scored a goal in his last five games. Hershey's George Sullivan maintained the assist lead with 36.

Gil Mayer of Pittsburgh continued his sparkling goaltending and lowered his average to 2.37 on 102 goals permitted in 43 games. John Bower of Cleveland was his closest rival with an average of 2.60. Bower and Gordie Bell of Syracuse were tied for shutouts with five each.

Jockey Points For $12,000,000 Earnings Mark

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Jockey Ted Atkinson looked for more winners today and pointed for the $12,000,000-mark in his all-time mount earnings.

The Toronto-born rider boosted his winnings to $11,004,077 Monday at Hialeah Park when he scored on Big Perry in the $3,500 third race and on Straight Face in the $5,000 seventh event.

That gave him 2,684 winners, dating back to May 18, 1938 at Beulah Park when he scored aboard a horse named Musical Jack.

Ted explained the money was what his mounts had earned and not his share. Riders receive 10 per cent of the winnings in stakes races and lesser amounts in cheaper races.

Atkinson, now 37, began riding when he was 20. Only two other jockeys, Eddie Arcaro and Johnny Longden, have ridden more winners in the United States than Ted, and both started several years before he did.

Que. International Bonspiel Swings Into Action With 124 Rinks Ready

By KEN STEWART

QUEBEC (CP)—The 40th Quebec international bonspiel swings into full operation today with draws starting at 9 a.m. and continuing every two hours until 11 p.m. A total of 120 rinks are competing for 13 trophies as well as the grand aggregate award.

In Monday's draws, 60 rinks were knocked out of the two top competitions, the Chateau International and the Omega International. They now play in the "C" section for the Francois Jobin International Trophy.

Rinks in each of these three sections reaching the quarter-finals will qualify for competition in the blue ribbon event of the 'spiel, for the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy.

In the opening draws, eight rinks started with byes. Four of these rinks will remain in the Chateau International and Omega International competitions, while the others dropped into the section competing for the Francois Jobin Trophy.

Mel Stonehouse, winner last year of the blue ribbon event, skipped his Ottawa Glebe quartet to a 12-6 victory over Verne Andrews' Quebec Curling Club foursome in the opening round of the Chateau International.

Eight other Ontario rinks scored first-round victories.

V. A. Selkirk's Peterborough foursome scored a 9-6 victory over East Malartic, skipped by A. Bourcier.

Lindsay, Ont., skipped by H. Wood, smashed Gavin MacWilliams's Quebec Winter Club quartet 12-3, while A. Hartman's Midland, Ont., team defeated J. S. Moffat's Montreal Caledonia foursome 9-5.

In the Omega International first draw, Smiths Falls, Ont., No. 1, skipped by D. Aboud, defeated St. Johns, Que., No. 2, M. Trahan, 11-9.

In the Chateau International second draw, Quebec Victoria No. 4 defeated a North Bay rink skipped by A. Lafrance, 9-6.

In the Omega International second draw, F. T. Julian's Woodstock, Ont., four defeated Quebec Jacques Cartier No. 5, 8-5.

In the Chateau international third draw, Quebec Victoria No. 7 defeated Sudbury No. 1 rink, skipped by G. Von Zuban, 13-3. In the fourth draw for the same trophy, J. P. Ellwood, Smiths Falls, defeated Bathurst, N.B., 9-4. Westport, Ont., skipped by O. Bigford, downed Latuque, Que., 14-6.

In the Omega International fourth draw, S. Wilson's Sudbury quartet defeated Quebec Victoria 9-8.

REAL "BIRDIE"

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, Eng. (CP)—Driving off at the sixth hole at Westerhope golf course Fred Prior scored a genuine "birdie." His ball killed a pigeon in flight. The bird will be stuffed and placed on the clubhouse trophy shelf.

Hot Race In Eight-Team Western League

EDMONTON (CP)—The eight-team Western Hockey League has reached the 50-game point of its 70-game schedule and it's still anybody's guess who will finish on top. Only 10 points separate the first five teams, 15 the first seven and 20 the top and bottom.

Six teams make the playoffs so nobody has given up yet, not even young Eddie Dorohoy's lowly Victoria Cougars.

Art Chapman's Vancouver Canucks and Saskatoon Quakers coached by Doug Bentley have shown the most to date. Canucks, mostly because they have the best road record in a league notorious for home supremacy, now lead the defending champion Quakers by a single point.

Calgary Stampeders, hit by injuries, are third, four points behind Quakers.

The circuit's "old seabiscuit," centre Alex Kaleta of Quakers, continues to hold the scoring leadership with 62 points. But he is being pressed by two Flyers—Butch Reibel, the AHL rookie-of-the-year last season, and big Vic Stasiuk, farmed out by the parent Detroit Red Wings. They have 59 and 56 points, respectively.

Only two points behind Stasiuk is Jackie McLeod of Saskatoon, former New York Ranger who has been setting a blistering pace lately. Line-mate George Senick, the early-season leader who now toils for the Rangers, is a single point behind McLeod.

Edmonton Juniors Favored for Top

EDMONTON (CP)—As the Western Junior Hockey League enters the last two weeks of its 36-game regular schedule, Edmonton Oil Kings are a good bet to finish atop both the team and individual scoring standings.

Rookie Norm Ullman of Edmonton has taken over the scoring leadership with 60 points, two more than Gordie Vejprava, who left the tail-end Crow's Nest Coalers for professional hockey in mid-season after piling up a big lead in his bid for a second straight league scoring title.

Trailing Vejprava by a single point is Jery Prince, who teams with Ullman and Ray Kinasewich as the WJHL's most potent scoring trio. The other scoring leaders are Regina Pat's Bev Bell and Gordie Cowan with 55 and 54 points, and Calgary Buffaloes', Pete McMahon and Dave Duke with 53 and 52.

Edmonton and Regina are tied for top spot but the scales are heavily weighted towards Ken McAuley's big, fast-stepping Oil Kings. They have six games left to play, Pats only two.

Oil Kings are undefeated in their last 13 games, rolling up 11 wins and two ties.

Sudbury Rink Wins Openers

SUDBURY (CP)—Sudbury Granite Club entries dominated Monday's opening rounds of the 66th annual Northern Ontario Curling Association bonspiel.

Five Granite rinks advanced into the second round of the President's Cup while five moved into the second round of the secondary event.

Copper Cliff is close behind with five rinks still in each event while the Sudbury Club had two unbeaten entries in each draw.

Play for the third and fourth rounds continues today.

Out-of-town rinks also did well in both ends of play. Dr. A. W. Irwin, Wingham; W. G. Hardy, Hamilton; H. G. Broham, North Bay, and Lance Wabon of Sault Ste. Marie are still in the President's Cup competition.

Visiting foursomes moving up in the secondary round event were F. L. Sims, Little Current; L. Mackey, Lindsay; E. B. Fleming, Sault Ste. Marie; C. Hussey, Haliburton; R. E. Sturgeon, McIntyre, Dr. R. E. Hambley, North Bay and W. Gauley of Kirkland Lake.

BROOKLYN (AP)—Three young outfielders, all candidates for the left field job vacated by Andy Pafko, have signed their contracts, Brooklyn Dodgers announced Monday. They include Carmen Mauro, formerly of Chicago Cubs, who hit .327 last year with Montreal Royals of the International League.

PEI SCHOOLBOY ENTRY

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Barry MacDonald rink of Charlottetown will represent Prince Edward Island at the Dominion schoolboy curling championships to be played in Saskatoon later this month. The rink won the provincial title during the week-end by defeating another Charlottetown rink, skipped by George Dillon, 11-4.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

Russian publicists claim everything was invented in that country, from the electric toaster to baseball, and most other sports, for that matter. And one which they haven't yet boasted of devising, but one to which they're entirely welcome, is the "fire the coach" system which, at that, does sound like a Russian conceit.

Not long ago there filtered through the Iron Curtain, via Berlin, where the curtain must be thin in spots, stories of a series of "investigations" that followed the Olympic Games, and a series of dismissals of trainers and athletes.

Students of the decadent democratic version of this fire-the-coach process will be struck by the more stringent, Muscovite variations. For the more drastic Russian regulations likewise carry more drastic penalties, because in Soviet Russia, sports are tied directly into the scheme of Russian defence and Russian propaganda; they are affairs of State, and as such, are directly under the supervision, not of a graduate manager or hired coaching expert, but of the Russian Secret Police.

It may see a trifle drastic, and in poor sporting spirit to even the most biased anti-coach groups on this continent to complain of a hockey or football coach whose team fails to win all the time, or [illegible] coach whose athletes don't capture every event. But the Russian system allows no such weaknesses. Either you're a winner, to the greater glory of the invincible state; or if a loser, you're just a low-down traitor who is disgracing his country, and should be shot at sunrise in the Red Square, as a lesson to all who can't go out and beat the rest of the world.

'Soviet sportsmen' said a recent official critique "are proving the superiority of their country's government by their achievements." So when the cry of the comrades echoes out on the night air, "Fire the coach," it's really the cry of the Secret Police, backed by a state where "win or else" is the sinister policy. No use the coach and his proteges trying to still such voices by promises to do better at the next Olympics, or European championships. There is no next time. The coach, and probably the losing athletes just go out of that business. Next stop, the salt mines. Or, if Uncle Joe happens to be in a merciful mood, the firing-squad.

So let's give Russia a monopoly on the fire-the-coach system. It's a silly and unfair and non-sporting idea to start with, and as such should fit smoothly into the Russian ideology.

Glen Roys Break Losing Streak With 5-3 Win Over Peterborough Petes

Petes Yank Goalie in Effort To Snatch Another Victory; Last-Minute Strategy Misses

PETERBOROUGH Feb. 3 (Special) — Belleville Glens downed the Petes 5-3 here last night before about 1,100 fans to climb into a third-place OHA senior "B" group tie with Kingston, leaving the locals in the cellar.

In a speedy, clean contest — just three penalties a side — Red Doran's bunch started strong to lead 2-0 in the first period. They were outplayed by 2-1 in the second but outscored the Ellis crew 2-1 in the third, the final goal being tallied on an empty net with Ray Harding pulled out of the cage toward the end to permit another forward on the ice.

The win improved the Glens' chances considerably of making a playoff berth and put the Petes pretty much in the position or depending on the old mathematical chance of reaching the dough blows.

JERRY DEJARDINS
....Good For Two

Jerry Desjardins led the visitors' attack with two neat goals, and he also helped on one in a good showing. Jud Semark, Peter Jones and Sammy Mulholland each lit the lamp once, an assist apiece going to J. Green, Jack Wardhaugh, Keith McDonald and Ted DeGray. Wardhaugh had his wrist hurt in the second period but remained in the game. Tony Parisi turned in a staunch chore in the Quinte cage, as the Petes outshot the Glens in the first two frames.

Chum Fryia of the Petes continued his hot pace to tally two goals, Freddy Mortimer getting the other one. An assist apiece was counted to Keith Montgomery, Gus Leonard, Toodie Greenlaw, Ted Collins and Don Floyd. The best home defenceman was Roy Armstrong. Goalie Ray Harding pulled off a flock of fine saves, especially late in the fray.

Fryia tested Parisi early but Glens scored first when Semark hit the hemp with a hard angle drive, partly screened, on a pass from Desjardins. A Mortimer-Floyd thrust was thwarted and then McDonald was gated for charging, followed by Mason for hooking, a penalty that drew hefty boos from the fans. Both were back, with no damage done, and play was quite fast and generally clean the rest of the route. The Petes pressed for a spell, but Belleville made it 2-0 late in the heat as Jones skirted defence a mile a minute with Green's pass to hoist a sizzling high one by Harding. Mason and Mulholland roughed it up to draw sentences near the close of the chapter.

Had Margin

The Ellis squad hustled more in the second and had a big margin on play but only outscored their rivals 2-1. The Leonard and the Hill lines in particular kept Parisi busy. Fryia scored the Petes first marker in close on a rebound after a play built up by Montgomery and Leonard.

McDonald was thefted by Harding, and the Leonard trio again came close. Fryia tied it up halfway through from Greenlaw with some hard battling around the net. The Petes slapped repeatedly at the rubber before it was cooked. Desjardins got that one back shortly as he stickhandled in fast from the side with Wardhaugh's pass and pulled Harding out of position at the short end. Armstrong drew a laugh later when he thought he had a penalty on a check and skated off, only to be called back. Goyer did get the finger toward the finish for hooking, and the Petes pressed hotly but in vain.

Parisi Good

Desjardins cuffed home a rebound early in the third on a goalmouth scramble with DeGray and McDonald in on it after a corner passout. Play was hot and even for a spell, and then Mortimer got in close with Collins and Floyd to whip the cookie into the oven, Freddy building up the play from the start. The Hill line peppered Parisi then but he turned everything aside. Later, Gus Leonard and his mates threw the works at the Quinte cage custodian and it was all Petes play for a time but they couldn't sink one With a minute and a half left, they pulled Harding and stormed the fort with five forwards and a defenceman, but Mulholland broke away at 19.55 to put in the clincher. Montgomery got a penalty for throwing his stick at Sammy.

SAMMY MULHOLLAND
....Locked The Door

Teams:

Belleville: goal, Parisi; defence, Goyer and Green; centre, Doran; wings, Jones and Mulholland; alternates, Day, Wardhaugh, McDonald, Desjardins, DeGray, Bastedo, Semark and Reeves.

Petes: goal, Harding; defence, Montgomery and Armstrong: centre, Leonard; wings, Greenlaw and Fryia; alternates, Collins, Mortimer, Floyd, Hill, Crowley. Mason, Legrow and Wasson.

Referee, J. Combie; linesman, B. Kingdon.

Tireless Tabbies Lose 40th Game In Senior Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sarnia Sailors, striving hard to make a playoff spot in the rough-and-tough Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, moved into a fifth-place tie with Chatham Maroons Monday night on a convincing 9-3 victory over the lowly Hamilton Tigers.

Now only five points behind Brantford Redmen in fourth spot, the Sailors had a litte trouble with the tail-end Tabbies who have won only one game in 41 outings.

In a North Bay exhibition game, Pembroke Lumber Kings of the Eastern Canada Hockey League played to a 7-7 tie with the Trappers of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group.

However, the Trappers were forced to score four third-period goals to gain their deadlock with Cully Simons high-flying club.

Jim Wilson and Bill McFarland led Sarnias attack with a pair of goals apiece while singletons went to Rollie Beauchamp, Skip Frezell, Alf Lewsey, Clark Horner and Chuck Glaab. Gord Peebles tallied twice for the Tigers. Bill Hammond collected the other.

Brantford plays at first-place Owen Sound in tonight's only OHA Senior A action while Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians move into Sudbury for a game with the league-leading Wolves, the lone NOHA Senior A clash.

Makes Comeback For 'Family Sake'

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Piet Strydom, who quit the ring when he was South African heavyweight champion because he said boxing didn't agree with his religion, is going to make a comeback to "regain the title for my family."

Strydom said he made his decision after listening to a broadcast Saturday night of a South African title fight between his younger brother, Lou, and Johnny Arthur.

Although ahead on points Lou Strydom was forced to quit after nine mauling rounds because of a badly cut eye.

Piet said he would fight Arthur for the title without any warmup bouts if the boxing board of control will agree.

Piet Strydom won the South African heavyweight title in 1950 and retired in July, 1951.

Mickey Mantle Wants $25,000 Salary, But Talbot Figures There's Angles

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — Let's play Yankees and try to figure out what we're going to do about this boy Mickey Mantle who blatted to the press up in Boston the other day that he expects to be paid $25,000 for playing centrefield for us this coming season.

That's an awful lot of money for a kid like Mickey to be talking about. Two years ago he didn't even have enough dough to pay his way to our training camp until we sent it to him. He wouldn't believe us at first when we told him he'd get $25 a week just to spend on malted milks and movies while we were in camp.

Now he's tossing around figures like $25,000 while he's up there learning to cast with a fly rod the way Ted Williams did in the sportsman's show. We hear he's even getting paid while he learns it. That' pretty good for a kid who never saw anything but perch and catfish until he was old enough to vote.

Great Player, But

For the sake of argument we'll say Mickey was worth more to us than the $8,000 we paid him last season. He's a great young ball player, all right. That's why we've got to do some thinking about his future now and convince him what will be best for him in the long run.

He's got a brilliant future ahead of him and shouldn't chance spoiling it by becoming impatient and talking in boxcar figures.

There's one angle some folks seem to think we ought to consider. It's about that bad leg of his, the one that caused the army's medical examiners to turn him down.

It's supposed to be incurable and they say there's a chance it will get worse at any time and cut short his baseball career. Because of that they feel we should make Mickey a sort of special case and begin paying him what he's worth right off.

The other side of it is that the kid was getting around mighty well on that leg the last time we saw him, as you can prove by Dodgers.

So what happens to us if we put him up in the high brackets now and that leg just gets stronger with the years? It wouldn't be long before there wasn't enough money in our treasury to pay him off. We'd have a juvenile Babe Ruth or Joe Dimaggio on our hands. They're bad enough when they grow up.

What we'll have to do is tell Mickey all this so he'll understand it when he comes down here with that fly rod. Maybe we'll even find out he was misquoted about that $25,000.

Clubs' Demise Blamed on TV

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. (AP)—Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring Magazine, said Monday night that 42 per cent of the small boxing clubs in the United States have folded in the last year. He blamed television.

In New York state alone during the last two years the small clubs dwindled from 22 to seven, Fleischer told a sports dinner.

Aussies Seek Approval For Games Site

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The Melbourne conference decided unanimously Monday to seek international approval for the Melbourne cricket ground to be the site for the 1956 Olympic Games.

At Melbourne, Premier Cain of Victoria sent a cable to Avery Brundage of Chicago, international Olympic committee President, inviting him to Melbourne to inspect the grounds.

There had been much discussion as to determining the Olympic site. Brundage, irked by Australia's uncertain preparations, had hinted that the games might be transferred to some other city.

Brundage mentioned Rome and Los Angeles as "practically ready" to handle the games.

The Melbourne conference had to decide whether to hold the games at the Melbourne cricket ground or the Carlton football ground, the original site.

Sedgman Leads Kramer 12-8

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Australian Frank Sedgman snapped his two-match losing streak by whipping Jack Kramer 6-2, 1-6, 6-4 Monday night in their international pro tennis series.

The victory gives Sedgman a 12-8 lead over his American opponent.

Ken McGregor and Pancho Segura took 2 hours to decide their match, Segura finally winning 9-7, 20-18. It gave Segura an 18-3 lead in the series.

Not always do the best bridge players win the championships. But where it is nip and tuck between the top pairs, no chance for an extra trick is overlooked. So was it in this deal:

Most of the best were in a contract of six clubs with south as declarer. Opening lead from west was the heart jack. Despite a bid in hearts by north, leading from heart sequence seemed safest.

Usually a lead in a suit that opponent has bid is avoided if possible. Especially against a slam contract. Because the timing in establishing suit is often an important asset.

The main advantage of the defence is that they have the first lead. To give this up fast is advisable only if no better lead is present. Anyway the heart jack was led and north dummy hopped on it with the ace. South started right in with his plans from there.

A small trump was led. South played the queen for a finesse. But it lost to the club king in west and a quick return of a diamond came from there. South won this with the ace.

A spade was cashed with dummy ace. A heart was ruffed in south. A spade was ruffed in north. Another heart was ruffed in south. This told declarer that the hearts would break.

So, he could afford to lead another trump round which dummy won. Another heart was ruffed in south. Cashing of spade king permitted dummy to sluff his last diamond. Dummy then has only winners left.

The safest play to cinch six clubs was to take the first trump round with the ace. Then it could not be defeated even if a heart was overruffed. So, why not play it that way?

The reason is that if east has the club king the finesse will make seven. In duplicate the extra trick could be the deciding factor for the title. It is usually that close.

ESCAPE WITH $45

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Two young men, one armed, held up a nut shop clerk and escaped with $45 Monday night. Arthur Stevenson said he was in the back of the shop when he heard the cash register being opened. He went into the store to find the two men, both masked. One pointed a gun at Stevenson and told him to stay where he was. The other emptied the cash register of $34. They also took Stevenson's wallet which contained $11.

Patricias Quickly Adjusted To Static Defence at Front

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (By Mail)-(CP)—War in Korea, say the Patricias, isn't quite what they expected.

But the 3rd battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, quickly got "clued up" during its first tour in the static line the United Nations are holding here.

The battalion learned a little about the Chinese, too.

Says Lt.-Col. Herb Wood, the commanding officer:

"The troops have met the Chinese and kept them at arm's length for a month. They've learned the Chinese are no better than they are if they remember their lessons."

In The Line

The battalion relieved the 1st Patricias early in November. It had a brief period in the line a fortnight later when, in discharging a counter-attack role, it occupied a position the Black Watch had briefly lost.

The Patricias returned to the line Nov. 28 as part of Brig. M. P. Bogert's 25th Canadian infantry brigade and stayed in until Dec. 28. Their share of the front included the famous "Hook" position, a 150-foot-high horseshoe ridge about 15 miles north of Munsan and under enemy observation.

The forward platoon there was under Lieut. Peter Worthington of Ottawa. The position formerly had been held by the United States Marines and then the Black Watch.

The Patricias had Christmas in their bunkers, communications trenches and outposts, were relieved Dec. 28 by the 1st battalion the Royal Canadian Regiment, and rolled New Year's and Christmas into one bang-up day Jan. 1.

Well-Trained Unit

Wood says: "The battalion had been well trained in the more conventional methods of war, drills we used in the Second World War. It had been exercised in the attack and in the defence, and had had the usual road and wireless schemes.

"But we got here to find we had a lot to learn that was special to this theatre. The war here now is built around the static defence.

"It means a lot of digging and, having dug, keeping the hole intact against shelling through revetting and sandbagging. It means, too, constructing strong bunkers.

"We've done more digging in the last month than the average soldier does in his entire career."

The Patricias, Wood said, learned to work by night and rest by day.

Speed Big Factor

They learned how to build barbed-wire fences rapidly, developing their own "blitzkrieg wiring" technique. Military school methods were abandoned for speed so that ticklish areas under enemy observation could be wired off quickly.

They learned how to keep their weapons in fighting condition in zero weather.

The battalion developed its own patrolling technique so effectively that the Chinese gave it a wide berth most of the time. It had between seven and 12 Patricia-type patrols covering its own front every night and never a casualty on one of them.

The men got two hot meals daily. Four of the five rifle companies (the Patricias had a company from the 1st battalion, the Royal Canadian Regiment, under command throughout the month) had their kitchens bunkered into the company areas like the rest.

They learned water discipline, and got along well on the gallon a day a man that could be carried into the hills for drinking, cooking and washing.

Quick to Learn

Brigade headquarters gives the "new boys" full marks for application. Said one senior officer: "They were modest and ready and willing to learn. In no way is that an admission of inefficiency, quite the contrary."

"The Patricias have learned a lot," he said, "but they'll be learning new lessons all the time. We all do. The great thing is to keep that enthusiasm to learn and not get blase about it."

Among the several hundred routine patrols performed three were considered outstanding. They were led by Lieut. Russ Campbell of Saskatoon, Lieut. Maurice Barnett of Vancouver, and Cpl. Peter Freund of Finchley, London, England, and now in the Canadian Army.

Freund's reconnaissance patrol on Christmas Eve has been described as a classic.

Enemy shelling and mortar fire accounted for most of the battalion's casualties during the period —10 killed, 13 wounded and 12 battle accidents.

Thieves Escape With $12,000

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP) — Thieves who entered by a rear door early Monday escaped with about $12,000 from a beverage room at nearby International Falls.

Julius Koch and Magnus Carlson, owners of the establishment, said the thieves gained entry to a wall safe. They said $250 in the safe and a large amount of silver in the cash register was untouched.

Fort Frances is 200 miles west of Port Arthur.

FERRY CAUGHT IN ICE

KINGSTON (CP)—The motorship Wolfe Islander was stranded for some time in ice Monday, a couple of hundred yards from the dock here The boat, a ferry plying the three-mile harbor trip between Kingston and Wolfe Island, encountered heavy ice during her regular run and was stuck near her destination. Workmen were able to free the ship and she managed to make her way back to Kingston.

Sport in Brief

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Bobby Shantz signed a two-year contract Monday to pitch for Philadelphia Athletics in 1953 and 1954 for a total of more than $50,000.

The tiny five-foot-six-inch southpaw, most valuable player in the American League last season, thus becomes the highest-paid pitcher in the history of the Philadelphia American League baseball club. That includes Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, long since voted into baseball's Hall of Fame.

The 27-year-old Shantz, smallest pitcher in major league baseball, signed the pact with club general manager Arthur Ehlers.

"Now I can stop worrying about money and concentrate on baseball," commented the little southpaw.

Asked about his left wrist, the one broken by a pitched ball last September, Shantz said: "I've forgotten all about that. It feels fine."

Shants is confident that he can equal or better his 24-7 record of 1952.

SEATTLE (AP)—Hockey players Larry Zeidel of Edmonton and Jack Evans of Saskatoon have each been fined $100 and suspended for one game for their stick-swinging duel at Edmonton last Friday, president G. A. Leader of the Western Hockey League announced Monday. Both players were cut on the head in their clash during the Edmonton-Saskatoon game. The one-game suspension applied to the clubs' Saturday night game at Saskatoon.

DIES OF LEUKEMIA

TORONTO (CP)—An eight-year-old girl, whose last foods were peaches and plums from South America, died Monday of leukemia. Ronda Marie Haworth, in hospital since last May, experienced a progressive lessening of appetite. About a month ago she asked for peaches and plums, and a crate of each fruit was flown from Chile. That was the last food she touched.

DOGS KILL 18 SHEEP

GALT (CP)—Three roving dogs fatally wounded 18 sheep and mauled 16 others on the farm of W. C. Barrie near here Sunday. Loss was estimated at $1,500. Barrie's collie drove the marauders off and injured two. Then Jim and George Barrie followed the dogs' trail for 15 miles across fields. They killed all three with rifle bullets.

START CLEARING RIVER

MONTREAL (CP)—Department of transport officials said Monday the icebreaker Ernest Lapointe will leave Three Rivers early next week for Montreal and the month-long job of opening the St. Lawrence River between those points will begin. The N. B. McLean is expected to join the Lapointe shortly after.

Whittock Leads 'Bluenose' Snipers

HALIFAX (CP)—Charlottetown Islanders, pressing hard on the heels of Halifax Atlantics for the top spot in the Maritime Major Hockey League, have two big assets in forward Buck Whitlock and goalie Al Millar.

Whitlock is still well out in front of the scoring race. Official league statistics covering games up to Jan. 30 show Whitlock, with 92 points, holding a 13-point edge over Atlantics' Billy Watson.

Millar leads netminders with a goals against average of 2.73 a game.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROS ..

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Amenable day for conferring, checking past work, stock-taking. You in trades, professions, home duties favored.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Not exciting or confusing, but a steady, purposeful gait should bring you home with better results at day's close. Worry, needless doubt tabu.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Don't skip from one thing to another if you would advance or gather all the benefits possible this friendly but slightly demanding day. Essential matters first.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—If you start on right track first thing you should have no trouble with problems, or even added duties. Benefits to be had for proper management generally.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Tricky matters, difficult tasks that may require extra courage and endurance are sponsored. On whole agreeable day for romance, children's interests.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—You may feel unusually creative; literary ability high now. Caution is not to overreach or worry to get too much done in limited time. Fine rays mostly.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—May have to follow rigid rules, specified plans in work before reaching harmonious agreement with superiors, etc. Do so cheerfully though you may wish another way.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Not easy for all things, but clever and intelligent management of usual activities and obligations can bring good returns.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Your Jupiter urges attention to home matters, investments and the like. Don't be overconfident or foolish.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Heed Scorpio, your indications similar. Day will be amenable for hard and earnest effort, for clever investigations, study, co-operation.

January 22 to February 20 Aquarius)—Your biggest problem may well be in getting started and with vim. If you urge yourself, you will be gratified at what you will gain.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Just the time to promote personal attributes, talents often submerged because of demands of everyday necessities. "Cash in" on new, improved ideas.

YOU BORN TODAY: Brainy, quick of thought yet often meditative, mild-tempered. Guard temptation to overindulge pleasures, to idle precious time with wrong associates or with nonproductive enterprises. Pray daily for God's help.

Birthdate: Mark Hopkins, educator; George Brandes, Danish critic.

Man Sang Hymn As He Was Led To Gallows

HAMILTON (CP) — Harry Lee, 37-year-old synagogue caretaker, was hanged early today for the fatal shooting last June 2 of Mrs. Mary Rosenblatt.

Lee sang hymns as he was led from the cells to the gallows. The last one was "Wonderful Words of Life."

He mounted the 13 steps to the gallows and the trap was sprung at 12:04 a. m. He was pronounced dead eight minutes later.

The traditional notice that the execution had been carried out was posted on the door of the Barton street jail by deputy sheriff Frank Dingham and jail governor J. D. Heddle at 12:30 a. m.

Several hundred persons waited outside the jail, waiting for the notice to be put up.

Reports from the jail said Lee was calm as he walked up the gallows steps. The trap was sprung by the official black-hooded hangman.

Rev. John Blair, who spent the last day with Lee worshipping and reading the Bible, said in an interview Lee told him and Rev. Sydney Kerr: "I am not guilty. They are hanging an innocent man."

Had Courage

Mr. Blair said he had never seen anyone with such courage. Lee held no bitterness or malice towards anyone.

The last execution in Hamilton was July 8, 1930.

Lee's last hope for a reprieve went when a telegram was received by his lawyers saying federal authorities would not intervene.

The jail governor said Lee took the news calmly. Lee saw his mother, Mrs. Isaac Lee, for the last time Sunday.

Lee was convicted of shooting Mrs. Rosenblatt, 38 - year - old wife of a steelworker, with a .22-calibre rifle. He drove into a service station at Sheffield, 15 miles west of here, with the body of Mrs. Rosenblatt in the front seat. He was severely wounded in the chest. A rifle was lying across the back seat.

A note in the woman's purse and in her handwriting said: "I wanted to go with Harry tonight for this ride, and I am as much to blame as he is. We're both crazy in love with each other. Mary Rosenblatt."

SHOPBREAKING SPREE

EDMONTON (CP)—One night last month John Bitker, 25, went on a shopbreaking spree. He entered a shoe shop, photography studio, cycle shop, doctor's office, a bakery, a cleaning plant and a hardware store. All he got for his trouble was 27 cents in cash, a pair of trousers, a knife, two watches and three cigaret lighters. Bitker Saturday admitted entering the seven premises and was jailed for two years.

CAR IN LAKE, 1 DROWNS

WHITNEY (CP)—Frances Lozinski, 25, was drowned and four others escaped Sunday when a car broke through the ice on Long lake near here and sunk in 27 feet of water. Whitney is about 45 miles east of Huntsville. The other four managed to get out of the car before it plunged to the bottom.

SAFE YIELDS $10,000

VANCOUVER (CP)—Safe-crackers escaped with $10,000 early Monday after blowing a safe in a super-market in Kitsilano district. Explosives used to crack the safe blew a hole in the second-storey office. The strong-box plunged to the main floor, to be carted away by the burglars.

APPROVE LAND SALE

BRANTFORD (CP)—By a vote of 90 to 35, a handful of Six Nations Indian voters Saturday approved a proposal to sell 100 acres of Glebe lands to the city of Brantford for $160,000. The board of education is awaiting completion of the purchase to use a portion of the site for a new million-dollar secondary school.

RECALLED FENIAN RAID

FORT ERIE (CP)—The Niagara frontier's oldest resident, Mrs. Rhoda Bowen, 99, died in hospital Sunday. She had been active and in good health until a few weeks ago when she fractured a hip. She spent all her life in this area and raid of 1866, an event she often was 12 years old during the Fenian recalled.

MARMORA

1952 Executive Returned As Officers of Fair Board

MARMORA. —At the annual meeting of Marmora Agricultural Society held in the town hall on Saturday evening, the membership returned its 1952 executive to office in a session marked with enthusiasm even though poorly attended.

Carl Heath will be president aided by Gordon Jones and George Fox, 1st and 2nd vice-presidents respectively and by Thomas J. Bateman, secretary-treasurer. Slightly revised is the board of directors which consists of Joseph Hulsman, Carl Heath, Howard W. Sabine, Charles Lajoie, William McComb, Irwin McCoy, Louis Hulsman, John Wilkes, Harry Neal, Thomas J. Bateman, John McAvoy, William Kelly, Vincent Lynch, Gordon Jones, George Fox, William Coe, Alex. Fraser and William Lavender.

The meeting was called to order by President Heath and after minutes of the last annual meeting had been confirmed, the president gave his address. He said he had been sustained throughout the past prosperous year by the support given by the directors, who had as much to do as himself with the result of the 1952 fair. He referred to the recent convention of the Central Ontario Fairs Association held in the Kiwanis Centre, Belleville.

Dates of Fair Granted

He sensed the value of the innovation of the dinner in that building to which all delegates could sit down together in the spirit of fellowship. He announced that the dates which had been applied for the holding of the 1953 Marmora Fair, namely September 5 and 7, had been graciously granted.

Correspondence relating to the annual Field Crop Competition, which Marmora did not enter last year, received keen discussion which led to the passing of a motion that the competition be re-entered this year.

Mrs. T. J. Bateman, who also was a delegate to the recent Belleville Convention was asked to report on the same.

In a neat speech, she referred to the increased number of lady delegates in attendance offering the opinion, that it augured well for the welfare of the Association.

55 Women Present

She mentioned that no less than 55 lady delegates were present and that they held their own session in one part of the building, while the men convened in another. Gratifying indeed was the financial statement presented by the secretary-treasurer. Total receipts were disclosed as $3712.36 and expenses as $3,067.27 leaving a balance of $645.14. The value of the annual street dance and other supplementals to the fair was indicated in this survey of the financial situation.

With regard to expenditures two of the chief items were noted with gratification. The sum of $467.97 was expended on the serviceable and imposing wire fence that was erected on the west side of the grounds with an additional $486.79 going to ground improvements.

Following appointment of directors and election of officers, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Bateman and Carl were appointed delegates to the convention of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies to be held in Toronto, February 4-6, inclusive, with the strong probability of a fourth delegate accompanying them.

Offers Home For Meeting

The president offered the use of his home for the next meeting which will be on February 26 and invited those present, all the directors and others interested in agriculture to be present since there are various matters of welfare to the society to come before the meeting and to be acted upon.

Joseph Hulsman is this year's recipient of the Good Service diploma.

Dept. Appeals Sentence Given Harry Seguin

VICTORIA (CP)—The attorney-general's department Monday appealed the five-year prison sentence imposed on Henry Seguin at Williams Lake, B. C.

Seguin, also wanted for murder in the gun slaying of a taxi driver Leonard Hurd of Maxville, Ont., made an abortive attempt to hold up the Williams Lake branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce Dec. 16. He shot bank manager Leonard Hellier in the hip and then was felled by an RCMP bullet in the chest after a posse cornered him in the Cariboo badlands.

Deputy attorney - general Eric Pepler said the appeal will be heard at the March sitting of the Court of Appeals at Vancouver.

Seguin was first charged with attempted murder. The charge was later reduced to intent.

Pepler said the department felt the five-year sentence was too light and added that he had not approved reduction of the charge.

The appeal order means that Ontario provincial police will not be able to return Seguin east until the British Columbia charge has been disposed of.

Premier Naguib Plans to Give Egypt Senate

CAIRO (Reuters) — Gen. Mohamed Naguib plans to give Egypt a Senate, it was learned Monday night.

It will be a Supreme State Council with powers to pass decree laws, and Premier Naguib's cabinet will be responsible to it.

This is the first clue to what Naguib intends to do with the three years of one-man rule he proclaimed last month when he abolished all political parties.

It suggests that he meant it when he said he didn't want to be a dictator, he wanted to see Egypt on the high road to democracy.

The council will be a one-house body and will also pass on budget demands. The government is expected to announce its official creation soon.

Egypt has had no parliament since Naguib seized power a little more than six months ago. However, he has a 50-man committee drafting a new constitution—which some observers say may usher in a republic.

The nature of the new Senate and how it will be set up were not disclosed.

Endless Lines Flood Survivors Leave Homes

By JOHN DUDMAN

CANVEY ISLAND, England (Reuters)—Endless lines of flood survivors trudged wearily Monday from their water-logged homes on this little island in the mouth of the River Thames.

They were the hardest hit in the great salt floods which swamped Britain's east coast during the week-end. As they walked listlessly to the reception centres on the mainland at Benfleet their grey, mud-streaked faces showed the strain of two nights and a day of horror.

The women, wearing whatever they had been able to grab before the waters rushed in, held close their bewildered children.

The men, grim and silent, stared around them at the water that sloshed over the homes they had worked years to build and then lost in a few hours.

The island had a population of about 13,000 and most of the living have been evacuated. One hundred bodies have been found and from 400 to 500 are believed missing.

Grimy rescue workers, eyes red-rimmed after working 36 hours almost non-stop, Monday night went out again in rowboats to search for victims in the few buildings still above water.

Many on the island refuse to go, particularly elderly folk.

White-haired Mrs. Martha Bird told the rescue workers who waded knee-deep water to reach her: "Oh, I'm not going along with you. But won't you stay to dinner?"

After an hour they persuaded her. "What an awful shame to leave that lovely dinner," she said.

MARMORA

MARMORA — Marmora chapter I.O.D.E. joined the Marmora High School Literary Society in the sponsoring of a card party in the auditorium of the high school on Friday evening, the proceeds being for the purchase of stage curtains for the school.

The winners were: bridge: Mrs. R. E. Bonter; Mrs. James Keeley; euchre: Mrs. Hector Auger, playin as man, Mrs. K. Stubbs. Consolation prizes were also awarded. Refreshments were served at the close of play.

Flowers on the communion table and in the chancel of St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday were in loving memory of Thomas E. Potts, Wilbert Bedore and Thomas Gray.

Mr. John Davidson has been confined to his home through illness.

Messrs. H. D. Wrightman and Henry Wrightman of the Napanee Post-Express, were visitors at the Herald Office on Saturday.

Young People Convene To Form Y.P.U. Branch

Wesley District — A meeting of the Young People from Wesley and White's churches was held in the home of Mrs. Fairbrother, Trent Road, on Thursday evening, to form a local branch of the Y.P.U. United Church of Canada, with Mr. John Toll in the chair. John explained the purposes and methods followed in a Y.P.U. group.

The following officers were elected for the year 1953: President, Rev. R. W. T. Middleton; chairman and leader, John Toll; vice-chairman Mrs. Hockaday; secretary, Mary Burnett; treasurer, Joan Shoemaker.

Other members were elected to serve on the following committees: Faith and evangelism, missions, and World Outreach, citizenship and social service, stewardship, training and recreation. The next meeting will be held February 12 at the home of Mrs. Hockaday, Bayside. All young people from this district are welcome to attend.

The January meeting of the Wesley W.A. was held on Thursday, at the home of Mrs. E. Windover, Trent Road. Mrs. F. Denyes, president, gave a reading appropriate to the new year.

Mrs. H. Rutter was in charge of the devotional. After responsive reading of Isaiah 9: 1, she read an interesting article, "The Powers of Women," taken from a Missionary paper, "Light in the Darkness." Mrs. Middleton closed the devotional period.

Mrs. E. Windover kindly offered to make a bouquet of flowers for the communion table at the church. Arrangements were made for a potluck supper to be held early in February. A novel contest was won by Mrs. Charles Wesley and Mrs. Rush.

Refreshments were served.

To Form Club

A meeting was recently held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Windover to form a "Keen Age Club" at Wesley United church. It was decided to meet on the first Tuesday of each month. The purpose of the club is for a social evening for the adult members of the congregation.

Officers Elected

The election of officers was held and, the following elected: President, Mr. B. Burnett; vice-president, E. Windover; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Bulmer; program convener, Mrs. Wallis, Edwina Seger, Mr. H. Gooding, Mr. W. Drews; social conveners, Mrs. E. Windover and Mrs. F. Denyes.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Denyes, February 3 at 8 p.m.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Windover.

Mrs. H. Gooding is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. E. Potter is confined to her home under the doctor's care.

MADOC

Madoc — Mr. Charles Noble, of Toronto, spent a day with Mr. and Mrs. N. Whytock and Mrs. Walter Whytock.

Miss F. Blue, of Peterborough, spent the week-end at her home in Madoc.

Miss Erma Burris, who is attending Normal School at Peterborough, spent the week-end at her home in Madoc.

P.S.B. Elects Officers

Madoc Public School Board held its annual meeting for the purpose of electing the officers for the year. George Duffin was elected chairman of the board and the following committees appointed: Teaching and recreational supplies, Ray Binch; school education, Mrs. T. H. Rupert; building and ground maintenance, Ed. Armstrong and C. R. Johnston; management, L. C. Blue.

H. & S. Assoc. Elects Officers

A large attendance attended the meeting of the Home and School Association held in the Madoc Public School and were privileged to hear Mr. A. W. Sparks, C.N.I.B. supervisor. Introduced by Kel Kincaid the speaker gave a very interesting and informative address on the work of the C.N.I.B. and the intention of the society to build a home at Kingston, Ont. Thanks were extended to Mr. Sparks for his address by J. Rankin.

Following Mr. Sparks' address, a meeting of representatives of the various organizations was held and officers for the local fund campaign were appointed as follows: Chairman, Kel Kincaid; pro-chairman, Earl Sager; chairman, John Bristol; chairman, Dorian Stewart; treasurer, Gregor Murray; publicity, Carl Howse. The objective for Madoc village and township is $2,000.

Bridge -Euchre Prizes

The bridge and euchre party held at the high school on Friday evening was a successful event. Following refreshments, served by the ladies of the teaching staff, Principal C. Howse presented the prizes: Bridge—ladies, Mrs. C. Moon; men, C. I. Ross. Euchre—ladies, Mrs. W. Blakely; men, Walter Foley; lucky number, Mrs. Arnold Gaebel.

Miss Lamoine West, of Niagara Falls, Ont., spent the week-end with her father, George West.

MINERAL WEALTH?

NEW DELHI (CP)—A new mineral rich in the radioactive elements, uranium and thorium, has been found in Trancore-Cochin. A specimen of the mineral, named "cheralite" from Chera, the ancient name of Travancore, was sent to the London geological museum.

Second Man On The Ticket

By Edwin Lanham

CHAPTER V

I went to the reception, in a room of blue draperies and plaster cupids called the Tullerles Ballroom. I stood against the wall near the Governor. Photographers made pictures and the men and women of Milltown important enough make the "distinguished guests" listing in next edition of the local papers filed by to shake the Governor's hand. The Governor carried that sort of thing off well. His hand had flesh enough to withstand the punishment, and he could put his smile on and leave it there hour after hour when he had to. On occasions such as this it was obligatory.

The reception lasted until ten minutes to six, and afterward there was a rush. The cars were waiting in front of the hotel, with a police escort, and there was a desperate scramble as reporters and photographers found places, carrying their portables and cameras. Bill and I squeezed into the Governor's car with the Governor and the state chairman of the party.

There was a crowd at the station, with a police line holding it back and we were hurried through to the train. Bill Evers pried the state chairman loose at the steps and the Governor escaped into his car. When we followed him a moment later he showed a tired grin and said, "Bill, tear another day off the calendar. Then you can order me some hot soup and crackers. I'm going to go straight to bed."

"That's a good thought, Governor," Bill said. "Everything went okay?"

"Of course it did," the Governor said.

"A guy at the press conference wanted to know why your wife wasn't along," Bill said. "He's from the opposition paper. I told him she was joining us at Hydetown. Governor, she's sure to be there, isn't she?"

"Now you know she is, Bill," he said.

"Yes, sure," Bill said. "I knew that. I was just—"

"Just worrying," the Governor said. "As usual. Now how about—"

"Soup and crackers," Bill broke in. "Coming right up."

As we left the car, Bill said, "I hope that's not a bad sign, just eating soup and crackers. I hope he's not sick."

"He never looked better," I said.

"Still," said Bill, "I'll have the chef put a couple of chops on the tray."

But before we reached the dining room we met Lucy Strawn, weaving toward us through the office car. There was a light in her eyes and a quiet, smug smile on her face.

"Gentlemen," she said, and her voice was fuzzy. "I got the papers."

"I've seen the papers," Bill said impatiently. "Lucy, are you all right?"

"Not newspapers," Lucy said. "I mean the papers."

"What papers?"

"THE papers," she said importantly. "Don't you ever go to the hteatre. The papers, man, the papers!"

"You mean from Clyde McDonald?"

"From none other." said Lucy.

"Where are they?" Bill said.

"Honey," Lucy said, "I wasn't so stupid as to filch them, but I have them by heart." She pressed a hand dramatically at her bosom. "It was a telegram."

"Well?" Bill said.

"He had it in his inside pocket, along with a bill from the National Press Club and the summons and complaint of his latest libel suit and the various other memorabilia such characters pack about with them. When he took them out of his pocket, I got a look."

"Congratulations," I said, unable to conceal my disapproval. "You don't look a bit disheveled,"

Lucy gave me a level look.

"Pay no attention to him Lucy," Bill said.

Lucy didn't. She went on talking, looking only at Bill. "He's one of those men who keeps his wallet well tamped down," Lucy said. "To get his wallet out he had to take out a wad of papers. When he paid for his lunch I knocked the papers onto the floor and had a look at the telegram. This is what it said, Bill: 'Come to Hydetown with Governor Warburton and you'll have a juicy item for your column.'"

"So that's why he's here," Bill said, "Who sent the telegram?"

"The name signed to it was Melvin Fisher, whoever he is."

"I know who he is," I said. "Meathead Fisher. He's the mayor of Hydetown."

"Come on," Bill said.

He started with loping strides toward the Governor's car. Lucy gave me a look, and followed. I was not sure what the look meant, but I did not like it.

Governor Warburton was sitting in darkness, with his legs stretched out. Bill turned on a wall light and said, "Sorry to disturb you, Governor, but we've got the dope on Clyde McDonald. Lucy, tell him about the telegram."

Lucy fold him, and the Governor listened with no change of expression. He made no comment.

"Governor," said Bill, "what do you think?"

"I don't think there's much juice for an item in Hydetown," the Governor said. "I wouldn't worry, Bill."

"Do you have any enemies there?"

"I suppose so," the Governor said. "Melvin Fisher, the fellow who sent the telegram, is no friend of mine. But he's got nothing on me, Bill."

CHAPTER VI

Bill Evers moved his hands uneasily and said: "I don't suppose there was any g-girl trouble — anything like that?"

"Young man, I haven't lived in Hydetown for 30 years," the Governor said, and smiled. "The only girl I had any trouble with was Ruth, and that trouble ended when I married her."

"I don't like it," Bill said. "I don't like it at all. What could it be?"

"There couldn't be anything," the Governor said. "Nothing important, anyhow."

"Can you think of anything unimportant, then, Governor?" Bill asked. "It doesn't take much for McDonald to go to work on."

"Not even anything unimportant, Bill."

Bill dropped into a chair. "Frankly, this worries me. You can't think of anything, Governor But why should the guy send a telegram like that?" He looked up. "Governor you got any friends in Hydetown?"

"I think so," the Governor said. "Johnny Mills, the present county chairman, was my friend. I know of nothing to change him."

"I'll send him a wire," said Bill,

The Governor sat up straighter. "You'll do nothing of the sort," he said sharply. "You'd only stir up trouble, doing that, when there isn't any trouble to begin with. Just let it ride, Bill."

Bill was on his feet again walking up and down shaking his head. "No," he said. "We've got to find out, Governor. I'll take a plane to Hydetown."

"I can't do without you, Bill," the Governor said.

"Somebody has to go," Bill said. "We can't just let it ride." He looked at me, considered, then gave his head a decided shake. "No, Roy's not tough enough for the job."

Lucy Strawn smiled. "Maybe that's why he's just the man to do it," she said.

I didn't like her characterization of me, nor the cozy tone she used, but before I could protest her smile widened and she said, "On the surface, that is, Roy. You are actually a stinker underneath She turned to the Governor. "Don't you think he'd be good?"

The Governor grinned. "Yes, Lucy, I do think so. How about it Roy? Do you want to run over to Hydetown and talk to Johnny Mills?"

"But Governor, how about your speeches?" I said. We've got to get those speeches lined up."

"Roy, before you came along, I made quite a few speeches on my own," the Governor said.

"Now, Governor, I didn't mean ——"

"I know what you meant, Roy." he said softly. "You've been a tremendous help to me and I'm grateful right down to my bones. But maybe Bill is right. Maybe you can be more help to me in Hydetown right now than here."

"Well, naturally, I'll go, Governor," I said. "If that's what you want."

"I wish you would, Roy."

"All right, then," Bill Evers said dubiously. "But, Roy, you've got to play 'em close to your chest. Don't let on why you're there, except to Mr. Mills."

"Of course not," I said.

"Also," the Governor put in. "Roy's our man because he's been to Hydetown. He knows the place."

"Why, I've never been to Hydetown, Governor," I said.

He looked at me. His eyes were tired. "Oh, I thought maybe you went there when you were writing me up, Roy."

"There wasn't time," I said. "It was a rush job, you know, and Bill and I just talked to everyone we could and looked up the newspaper files."

"Oh," said the Governor.

The plane set down at an airport 40 miles from Hydetown at half past four in the morning as a seeping, orange dawn began to outline the low, regular hills of that Southern country. There was no bus for a couple of hours, but I found a taxi to run me over to Hydetown.

Anyone who has driven from New York to Florida by the inland route has passed through Hydetown, but the odds are that not one in 10,000 stopped there, unless the car had a flat. The highway narrows to the main street of the town, and there are two traffic lights, entering and leaving Hydetown. The buildings along the main street are solid, two-storey red brick with flat roofs forming exact planes on opposite sides of the street.

I drove into Hydetown about half past five, and there was not another car parked or moving on the street, nor a door opened yet. I carried my bag into the Fisher Arms Hotel.

The lobby was small, crowded with leather chairs comfortably grouped so that drummers could sit and gaze out huge plate-glass windows at the street. The office was enclosed by a waist-high railing and counter, but the two chairs behind the railing were unoccupied. No one was about.

I put my bag by the window and dropped into one of the big leather chairs. I had not had breakfast and did not light a cigaret, and I had that gloomy depression that comes on a man who has risen much too early and faces a long and unaccustomed day. I had not been to bed at all, and had slept only a little on the plane.

A truck passed through and dropped off a bundle of newspapers at the drugstore across the street, and a pedestrian or so appeared, off to early jobs.

Report Charges Price-Fixing In Rough Paper

136-Page Document Tabled By Combines Investigator

OTTAWA (CP) — Combines investigator T. D. MacDonald in a report made public today, accused 11 West coast coarse paper companies of having participated or assisted in the operation of an illegal price-fixing combine in and around Vancouver.

Two of them also were among the 44 companies named last November by Mr. MacDonald in a report alleging the existence of an illegal combine in Canada's $50,000,000 fine paper industry.

Coarse papers include such commonly used items as wrapping paper, waxed paper, paper bags, napkins and towels.

In a 136-page document tabled in the Commons, Mr. MacDonald charged the companies with keeping down competition, restricting wholesale trade and maintaining prices at high, fixed levels through illegal common agreement.

Ask Legal Advice

Justice Minister Garson, tabling the report which resulted from a four-year investigation, said he will ask for legal advice and announce later whether he will prosecute those named.

The same procedure was followed in the fine-paper investigation but Mr. Garson has still not announced what court action he plans.

The coarse-paper inquiry was launched in 1949 and Mr. MacDonald alleged these six wholesale companies were principal parties to the combine at the time of the investigation:

Columbia Paper Company Ltd.; Kelly, Douglas and Company, Ltd.; Norfolk Paper Company, Ltd.; Smith, Davidson and Wright, Ltd.; Vancouver Pacific Paper Company Ltd., and J. C. Wilson Ltd.

With the exception of J. C. Wilson Ltd., which was a branch of a Montreal company, all the accused had their head offices in Vancouver.

Two other wholesalers, the W. H. Malkin Co. Ltd., and the Vancouver Supply Company Ltd., were named as "knowingly" assisting in the combine operation "from time to time."

Three Firms Named

Three British Columbia manufacturers, also "knowingly" assisting in the operation from time to time, were: Pacific Mills, Ltd., Vancouver; Westminster Paper Co. Ltd., New Westminster, B. C.; and "to a lesser extent" Bartram Paper Products Company Ltd., Vancouver.

Columbia Paper and Smith, Davidson and Wright were named in the November report on the fine paper industry.

Baby Strangled To Death, Caught In Chair Harness

Caught in the harness of her high chair while her mother was hanging out clothes, Debborah Young, nine-months'-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Young, Trent Road, Belleville, was strangled on Tuesday.

The baby girl was rushed to Belleville General Hospital where doctors worked on her for 90 minutes without success. It was thought the baby was dead when it arrived at the hospital.

Mrs. Young had left her baby in the high chair in the kitchen while she went into the back yard to hang clothes. Although gone only for a few minutes, when she returned she found her baby hanging by the harness from the high chair, a strap across its throat.

A neighbor woman raced 200 yards to the highway for assistance and Mac Carson took the child to hospital in his car. Dr. J. H. Bateman and Dr. Russell Bateman worked on the child for one-and-a-half hours and even tried massaging the heart, without success.

Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott said he did not think an inquest would be necessary.

The Young family had lived at Belleville only for a few weeks, coming here from Peterborough. The father works for Booth Radio.

Report of Flares Spurs Hunt For U.K. Plane

HALIFAX (CP)—The reported sighting of a flare and an oil slick spurred air and sea searchers hunting today for a British airliner missing in the North Atlantic off Newfoundland with 39 persons aboard.

Through the plane's operators in London, Skyways, Ltd., gave up hope for it and those aboard Tuesday, the United States Coast Guard cutter Campbell radioed that it observed a brilliant white light shot up from the sea early Tuesday night.

The cutter said it headed in the direction from which the light came, but shortly after heavy snow began falling and visibility was cut to 400 yards.

The Campbell radioed Tuesday morning it had sighted an oil slick, dye markers, a piece of cardboard and what looked like a fire extinguisher in the search area, an estimated 250 to 300 miles east of Argentia, Nfld.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: Although milder air is moving steadily southeastward from the Prairies, there will be only a slight moderation in the temperatures over Ontario today and Thursday. The milder trend will be halted temporarily in all regions by the southeastward motion of a layer of cold Arctic air which is carrying a few snowflurries across Northern Ontario this morning and will bring cold temperatures again tonight in most of Ontario. Isolated snowflurries in off-water flow in the lower lakes Wednesday will not amount to much, but skies will remain mostly cloudy today and Thursday.

A storm developing in Saskatchewan will move rapidly southeastward and will spread cloud and snow across northern and central regions on Thursday and a smaller area of snow, rain or freezing drizzle across southern sections.

Set Up Authority

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government has set up the Stamford township housing authority to operate the housing project built last year. Members are Donald A. Zimmerman, Warren J. Kent, and A. C. Huggins. They are appointed for three year terms with one member retiring each year.

Prisoners Dwindle to Minimum As Korean Stalemate Tightens

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bag of new prisoners is dwindling to virtually nothing in the stalled Korean war, where both sides sit in heavily-fortified positions.

Records made available today by the defence department showed that during December only 29 Red soldiers were captured.

By contrast, the total take of prisoners by United Nations forces when the big Allied offensive was cutting up Red divisions and rolling swiftly northward in October, 1950, was 51,868.

In stockades as of Jan. 16 were 122,658 Red PoWs. By far the greater part, 101,556, were North Koreans, the rest Chinese. To a considerable degree, this reflected the huge groups of North Koreans captured in 1950, before the Chinese entered the war.

No over-all total for United Nations personnel taken by the Reds is available.

The monthly total of Americans captured by the enemy is even lower than enemy prisoners taken—perhaps a dozen or 15 against 30 Reds.

Prisoners are valuable in war, especially on a static front.

Except for air reconnaissance and scraps of information gained from agents, prisoners provide the only intelligence on enemy strength deployment and intentions.

Even though a prisoner gives no information other than the required name, rank and serial number, he can be the source of intelligence. Insignia, identification papers, personal letters, even his dialect can indicate the origin and whereabouts of his unit, how long it has been in the line and whether freshly brought up as replacement. If he chooses to talk, some idea of the plans and intentions of the foe may be gained.

SEN. SUGGESTS US SUPPLY PLANES TO NATIONALISTS

Could be Used To Bomb Red China

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator William Fulbright (Dem. Ark.) suggested today the United States supply planes to Formosa's Chinese Nationalists to bomb Red China, just as Russia is providing aircraft to the Reds in Korea.

Fulbright's proposal was made in an interview as other Congress members defended against British criticism President Eisenhower's order to the U. S. 7th fleet to free the Nationalists for attacks on the China mainland.

Among these, Senator John Cooper, (Rep Ky.), a former representative to the United Nations, said he fears that organization won't do anything effective to end the Korean war.

"The British don't like it, but we have got to act for ourselves in this matter," Cooper said. "President Eisenhower's action is the least dangerous step we could take right now that promises some relief in Korea."

Fulbright said he feels that if the U. S. transferred bombers to the Chinese Nationalist air force and helped train pilots for them, it might be possible to raid Red China's communication lines.

"The Russians are furnishing planes and training pilots for the Communist Chinese in Korea," he said. "We certainly would have a precedent for such action."

Transfer to Chiang

But he said he doesn't want Americans involved in any such venture, adding that the planes should be transferred to Chiang Kai-shek's forces and piloted by his men.

Fulbright said he could see why Britain was disturbed by Eisenhower's action "since they are wondering if this means we're going to extend the war and get sucked into an invasion of the mainland."

He insisted that furnishing planes would be "quite a different matter" from giving support with American-flown planes and American-manned ships to even a commando-type raid on the China coast.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the British House of Commons Tuesday that Eisenhower's fleet order will have "unfortunate political repercussions without compensating military advantages."

Representatives Dewey Short (Rep. Mo.) and James Richards (Dem. S. C) said the House of Representatives was in no mood to be influenced by the British position.

Trying to Save Hong Kong

"The British are only trying to save Hong Kong and their commercial interests in China," said Richards, former chairman of the foreign affairs committee. "The sooner they realize this is a delusion, the better."

Short, chairman of the armed services committee, said he believed the temper of the House was "to ignore what the British say."

He added that "No. 10 Downing street has dicated too long to ou state department."

Dulles Tries to Calm Britain's Outcry Over U.S. Foreign Policy With Regard to Formosa

LONDON (AP)—John Foster Dulles today undertook personally to calm British outcries over United States foreign policy shifts since he took office as U.S. secretary of state two weeks ago.

Dulles arranged to see Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden this morning. President Eisenhower's decision to deneutralize the island of Formosa was high on the list of things to be talked about.

Dulles arrived from Paris Tuesday in the midst of a heated House of Commons argument over the move. Eden disclosed that Britain had been dvised of the decision in advance and had made known to Washington its "concern."

The foreign secretary told a tense Commons that Britain fears the freeing of Chiang Kai-shek's forces for attacks on the Communist mainland will have "unfortunate political repercussions without compensating military advantages." He gave no further explanation.

Press Protest

Touchy sections of the British press also protested today against Dulles' recent remark that the United States may do some "rethinking" on its policy toward Western Europe unless France, Germany and Britain can get together for mutual defence.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express described this as a "slap in the face."

Britain's underlying concern, as stated privately by government officials, is that the decision may touch off new fighting between Chinese Communists and Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists and eventually embroil Allied countries in a spreading war.

Under Eisenhower's order, the U.S. 7th fleet no longer will be used to prevent the Nationalists, operating out of their Formosa bastion, from raiding the Chinese mainland.

Barrage of Questions

In the Commons Eden, faced with a barrage of questions from excited Labor members, said in view of Dulles' visit and the "not inconsiderable delicacy between ourselves and America" on the Formosa issue, he hoped members would show "some reticence in further comment."

At the request of Labor leaders, however, the Conservative government agreed to a full-dress debate on the matter Thursday.

In their talks with Dulles, Eden and Prime Minister Churchill are expected to call for assurances that the United States will take no steps that might explode the Korean war into an Asia-wide conflict.

The conversations are expected to cover the whole range of future relations between the United States and Britain, including economic questions.

Dulles is accompanied by Harold Stassen, the new director of the U.S. mutual security agency—the organization supervising U.S. economic and military aid to its allies. The two men are on a 10-day tour of seven European capitals and leave Thursday for Bonn, Germany.

Invited to Lunch

Among the British leaders selected to help Eden present his arguments were R. A. Butler, chancellor of the exchequer, and Defence Minister Earl Alexander.

Churchill invited Dulles and Stassen to lunch with him at 10 Downing street, during the noontime break in the talks. In the evening, Eden planned a dinner for the visitors at a London hotel.

Commenting on Dulles' statement that European failure to unite might bring a "rethinking" of U.S. policy toward the continent, the Daily Express said:

"Let him understand that Britain already is making tremendous sacrifices to aid European defences—indeed more sacrifices than are consistent with her own Imperial commitments—and she proposes to make no more.

Canadian Bandsmen Credited With Helping Korean Hamlet Avert Destruction by Fire

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (By Mail)—(CP)—A truckload of Canadian bandsmen is credited with helping a Korean hamlet avert destruction by fire recently.

The 19 musicians from the 3rd battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, were returning to the front from a series of engagements in Seoul and Uijongbu.

About 10 miles northwest of Uijongbu they spotted smoke and flames rising above a 30-house cluster of mud-and-wood dwellings. The drum major, Sgt. Lloyd Prest of Vancouver and Calgary, ordered the driver to stop and the men piled out.

Running up to the village they found men and women organized into a bucket brigade and trying in the zero weather to prevent the fire from spreading.

Two-Hour Struggle

Taking over, the Canadians worked for two hours quelling the blaze. They had to rip one building apart in the process.

Pte. E. J. Earles of St. John's, Nfld., slipped at one point while fetching water from a well, injuring his head. He subsequently was taken to hospital.

When the fire was out the Koreans crowded around the truck, thanking the departing soldiers for their trouble. "Canadians number one," they said.

"Very embarrassing," commented Prest.

The Patricia's band of six drummers and 13 buglers "doubles in brass." When not making music, the men form part of the battalion headquarters defence platoon.

On the day of the fire they were returning from a two-day trip during which they played a ceremonial retreat for patients at the Commonwealth Hospital in Seoul, and provided music for a graduation exercise at the Uijongbu NCO school, which the Canadian brigade operates for the division.

Father, Mother, Four Children Burned to Death

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — A father, mother and four of their children were burned to death early today when fire destroyed their farmhouse at Brimley, 13 miles west of here.

The victims were identified as Romauld Compeau, a farmer; his wife, Cecilia; and their children, Jeremiah, 8; Joseph, 6; Anita, four and Rene, 2. A fifth child, Eugene, is married and resides in the Sault.

Sheriff Roy Guest of Chippewa county said the fire was first reported by a neighbor, Mrs. Richard Deuman, whose home is located a mile from the Compeau home. She was awakened by the reflection of flames on her window.

Volunteer firemen arrived just as the roof of the two-storey log-and-frame house collapsed.

Members of a volunteer fire brigade recovered the blackened remains of what they believed were the two oldest boys. They had been sleeping in a bedroom over the kitchen at the rear of the house.

The fire fighters were helpless to make any rescue attempts because of the fierceness of the heat. A snow-blower helped out by shooting a thick spray of snow on the burning ruins.

The fire fighters were hampered considerably after several tons of coal took fire in the basement. The heat crumpled the pipes of the furnace.

Only living things on the fire scene were a six-month-old puppy and a small kitten, pets of the children. The firemen said that they believed the family suffocated from the dense smoke before the blaze was well under way. The fire's origin was undetermined.

Total damage may reach $10,000.

SASK. MEMBERS BLAST REPORT OPPOSING DAM

Diefenbaker Accused Of 'Playing Politics'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prominent Saskatchewan members of three political parties — including a Liberal — Tuesday night criticized a royal commission's recommendation against damming the 1,000-mile - long South Saskatchewan river but split over the formal expression of their indignation.

John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) followed up a strong and at times bitter onslaught with a want-of-confidence motion "regretting" that the government's estimates of expenditures for the next fiscal year don't provide for the irrigation and power project.

Dr. E. A. McCusker (L-Regina), parliamentary assistant to Health Minister Martin, joined in criticisms of the commission report but said he wouldn't vote for the opposition motion because it would involve the life of the government.

Motion on Amendment

He accused Mr. Diefenbaker of "playing politics" by moving a motion which Saskatchewan Liberals could not support because it would mean the fall of the government. Mr. Diefenbaker denied the accusation.

Mr. Diefenbaker's motion came as an amendment to a government motion to study departmental estimates. Percy Wright (CCF-Melfort) followed it with another criticism of the report and with a sub-amendment which embraced the Conservative motion but added the words that the project was "recommended by the government's Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act engineers."

Butt of the attacks was a report by a commission headed by Thomas H. Hogg of Toronto, former head of the Ontario hydro commission, which said the project would cost $250,000,000 and said it would be an uneconomical venture at this time.

Singer Asks $600,000 Damages from Film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Tony Romano asked $600,000 damages on his claim that, without his permission, he was depicted as a murderer, thug, gangster and convicted felon in a movie using his name and likeness. His suit, filed Tuesday, is against United Artists Corp., Associated Players and Producers, Inc., and Edward Small, identified as the producer and distributor of the movie.

CHOSEN AS CANDIDATE

TORONTO (CP)—Jack Longstaffe was nominated Tuesday night Liberal candidate for Toronto Eglinton in the next federal election. He was the party's candidate for the riding in the 1949 election when he was defeated by Donald Fleming, Progressive Conservative.

Battered Britain, Holland, Belgium Face New Danger

Air Ministry Warns UK Violent Winds Due Tonight

AMSTERDAM (CP) — Battered Britain, The Netherlands and Belgium today faced the new danger of another violent storm as the unofficial death toll in the most terrible floods since the 13th century neared 1,800. Reliable reports indicated that the toll actually exceeded 2,700.

The official figure for The Netherlands alone reached 1,223 today. This figure included 240 dead at Oude Tonge, in the island of Goeree-Overflakkee, and 75 persons drowned in the sister town of Nieuw Tonge.

It did not take into account, however, reports from the burgomaster of Zierikzee that upwards of 1,000 persons have lost their lives on the big island of Schouwen-Duiveland.

This would boost the Dutch toll well beyond 2,000. Together with Britain's more than 500 deaths and 14 in Belgium the toll was rapidly approaching the 3,000 mark.

The latest count from official and best available unofficial sources was:

Holland, 1,223
England, 546 (including 169 lost in ships at sea)
Belgium, 14
Total, 1,773.

The Amsterdam newspaper Het Vrije Volk — which has been extremely conservative in its tabulation of death — reported the large additional Dutch death toll.
MORE

Strong west winds already were hitting Holland. Belgium's weather bureau reported that the storm, too, was threatening the northern areas of that country.

The winds are expected to apply new and critical pressures on the Dutch system of protective dikes which burst in 80 places early Sunday morning, spilling watery death over the prosperous countryside.

4,000 Isolated

At noon 4,000 persons were reported isolated on a stretch of dike five-eighths of a mile long at Strijen on the island of Beijerland.

Another 1,500 are numbly awaiting rescue after four terrifying days and nights on a smaller section of dike at Oude-Tonge, on the island of Goeree-Overflakkee.

The report on the terrible ordeal of the people of Strijen, which has a population of 5,051, was the first news from the island of Beijerland. South of the big port city of Rotterdam, it has been virtually blacked out since Sunday.

The Netherlands was the hardest hit of the three countries, with 1,000 square miles buried under a blanket of soil-killing salt-water.
MORE

As thousands of workers raced against time to shore up shattered sea defences in Britain and The Netherlands, some 2,000 vessels and more than 125 planes rushed the evacuation of thousands numbed by cold and suffering from three days of exposure in isolated villages throughout stricken southwest Holland.

Tragic Ending to a Broken Romance

Nine gun shots in the downtown section of Stratford, Ont., provided a grim climax to a sixth - month romance which brought death to a 17-year-old girl, and a murder charge against a Canadian army paratrooper. Pte. Reuben Norman, 25, stationed at Camp Borden, Ontario, gave himself up to police after shooting Jean Marie Satchell, shown above, in broad daylight. Witnesses said the girl was arguing with the soldier when he drew fire. Broken romance is blamed by police for the fatal quarrel. — Central Press Canadian Photos.

Flood Highlights

CANVEY ISLAND, England (AP) Miss Florence Rudge, 74, was plucked from her flooded cottage Tuesday night after 72 foodless, waterless and sleepless hours on a kitchen table.

"You silly men," was her mild greetings to rescue workers, "I thought you'd forgotten me."

FRANKFURT (AP) — The Communists today blamed Holland's flood disaster on the North Atlantic Pact.

Max Reimann, Communist chief in West Germany, sent a public message of sympathy to Dutch Communists in which he said:

"Your dikes, your protection against catastrophe, would have been more efficient if, through the policy of the Atlantic Pact, public funds had not been wasted for the American war."

NICE, France (AP) — A thousand flood-stricken Dutch children will be lodged in church institutions and with families on the French Riviera.

Funds from churches and the city governments of Nice and Cannes will care for them.

Determined Families of Canvey Refuse to Leave Isle of Death

By SEYMOUR TOPPING

CANVEY ISLAND, England (AP)—Hundreds of defiant families refused Tuesday night to leave their flooded homes on this "isle of death," where dark and angry waters swirl over still uncounted bodies of storm victims.

Sad-faced men, with women and children beside them, turned away pleading rescuers who knocked at their windows. The holdouts were believed to total about 2,000 persons.

This Thames estuary island's 25 square miles suffered the hardest blow of east coast England's weekend flood disaster. Rescuers have hardly begun the job of recovering the dead, of whom 40 have been counted by police in mortuaries. Some island officials estimate the toll may finally total 300.

Not all who were living in the island's isolated bungalows when the storm-whipped waves swept in early Sunday have been interviewed or accounted for. More than 100 submerged bungalows, in which an undetermined number of bodies clad in nightclothes are believed to be floating, remain to be searched in the Sunken Marsh district.

The survivors unwilling to leave their sodden surroundings are in houses without fuel, electricity, or working telephones. Drinking water has become polluted, and food supplies are nearly gone.

About 10,000 grief-burdened, bedraggled refugees already have been ferried, some on stretchers, to an evacuation point in the centre of the island. There trucks have been taking them across the single bridge linking the island with the mainland.

One evacuation convoy was delayed late Tuesday while a frantic mother searched for her daughter. The child suddenly appeared carrying a cat and shouting: "Look, mother, I've found Tiddles!"

TWENTY PERSONNEL TAKING COURSE

Approximately twenty personnel of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, the 9th. Anti-Tank Regiment, RCA (ALI), PWOR, Kingston, and 27th. Technical Squadron, RCEME, are taking a senior non-commissioned officers' course at the Bridge St. Armouries. The course, of six weeks' duration, started last Saturday. Instructors are from Eastern Area Command, Kingston.

COUNCIL ACCEPTS RESIGNATION

Bellevillie city council has accepted the resignation of J. T. Ransom as member of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board. Mr. Ranson had served on the planning board for several years and a letter expressing appreciation for his services will be forwarded from council. No action was taken by council regarding appointment of a replacement member on the board.

CAR SKIDS INTO TRANSPORT'S SIDE

When it skidded into the side of a transport a car driven by Thos. F. Elvins, RCAF, Trenton, yesterday, was damaged to the extent of about $250.

A highway transport, driven by Gordon Hasp, of Kitchener, was proceeding north on Foster Ave. and was crossing Dundas Street when the west-bound car driven by Elvins was unable to stop and slid into the side of the vehicle.

AUTOMOBILE SLIDES INTO ROCKPILE

Arnold Boomhour, Kaladar, suffered facial lacerations Tuesday night when he lost control of his car in the Kaladar area and it went off the highway into a rockpile. Boomhour was taken to Belleville General Hospital where his injuries were treated. Provincial Constable Stout, of Northbrook, investigated.

Pictures of City's Mayors Now Of Uniform Size

The likeness of former Belleville mayors who were chief magistrates in the city as far back as a century ago, have been hung in the city hall council chambers.

All the pictures have been brought to the same size and placed in handsome individual frames and hung in three tiers on the council chamber wall.

Alderman Wilbur Countryman; as chairman of city property, has had difficulty in securing pictures of some of the former mayors and quite a number are missing. But efforts are still continuing and it is expected that ultimately pictures of all former mayors will be procured.

Thus far 24 pictures have been secured and are placed on the walls in sequence. The first picture hung is that of the late B. F. Davey, who was mayor of the city of Belleville back in 1850. The contest for the mayoralty must have been spirited in those days because Mr. Davey came back to grace the mayor's chair again in 1854. In the intervening years W. H. Ponton had been mayor in the years 1851-52-53.

Other mayors, prior to the turn of the century and whose pictures have been secured, were H. Corby, J. J. B. Flint; W. H. Biggar, W. J. Diamond, G. S. Tickell, E. G. Porter and C. Bogart.

Pictures of mayors of more recent years are still to be secured. The last mayor whose picture has been placed is George S. Tice who was first magistrate back in the years 1932-33-34-35.

Family of Four Is Destitute When Fire Destroys Home Twice Within Fifteen Months

A young Foxboro family consisting of father and mother and two small children are destitute today following a fire which Tuesday night destroyed their home, household furnishings and all personal possessions. The family was away at the time of the fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Damon King with their three-year-old girl, and three-months'-old baby had gone to visit relatives at Stockdale, when about an hour after they left a neighbor looked out her window to find the King home afire. By the time the alarm was raised the inside of the home was a mass of flames and nothing could be saved.

It was the second fire loss suffered by the King family in little more than a year. Fifteen months ago the family was burned out at Frankford, losing all their possessions.

"The family have only the clothes they were wearing," Jack Hendricks, a neighbor of the King family said today. He said no insurance had been carried on the household furnishings.

Contributions of clothing, food and other articles were being asked today by Foxboro friends. who have started a fund for the destitute family.

Last night's fire was discovered by a neighbor, Mrs. Clarence LaRue, who happened to look out her window and see the flames. Mr. Hendricks, living across the highway, said they had not noticed the fire.

Belleville firemen were called to the scene but could do nothing to save the home. No other buildings were endangered.

Cars Skids Into Hydro Pole, Flash Fire Caused

Trenton (Special) — Lewis Woodcock, 17, Walter Belnap, 16, and four-year-old Roderick Woodcock came close to serious injury yesterday when the car in which they were riding skidded and crashed into a hydro pole on the south side of Bay street. The car's radiator burst and the Prestone spilled over the hot engine causing a flash fire. The occupants however leaped out on the roadway and stood off a safe distance while the fire department was called. Belnap, the only casualty, suffered a broken finger on the right hand. The fire burned itself out by the time the pumper arrived. Damage to the front of the car was estimated at $350.

Police who investigated reported surface of the street slippery and that skidmarks indicated the driver had cramped his wheels to the right, while the car continued in a straight line. The accident occurred on the curve where Sidney street runs into Bay street.

In Second Place Tie

Carr's Admiral's moved into a second place tie with Frankford by defeating 6 Repair Depot 13-6 in a south division Trent Valley Hockey League fixture here on Monday night. Winger Austin Scott performed the hat trick twice and a little more scoring seven Trenton goals.

The Lyle Carr sponsored Admirals have never beaten league leaders Wellington team in two starts the first they lost 10-4 and the second time 8-3. The TV supporters complain that a penalty gave Wellington an advantage in the first period of the second game when three quick goals placed the Admirals behind the proverbial eight ball. Records show that at full strength in this game Trenton scored goal-for-goal with Wellington.

Regular league schedule ends February 13 and then the playoffs start.

"Give us fast ice and you'll be seeing a lot more of us Admirals" predicted playing coach Bill Turland.

PRESSURE COOKER BLAST

Mrs. O. W. Larry was in the kitchen preparing the evening meal when the telephone rang in the living room. A friend had called her and while she was talking a loud report interrupted the conversation. The pressure cooked filled with stew had blown up and the contents were all over the walls and ceiling. Mrs. Larry, a V.O.N. nurse in town, might have been seriously injured if she had not been in the living room talking on the telephone.

MAY HOLD REUNION

A civic-minded citizen wonders if somebody has slipped up, when Trenton's 100th birthday is less than four months away.

Official preparations were discussed late last fall but no mention has been made of the important anniversary since.

The last time Trentonians went all out in the interest of local people who moved away to other localities was back in the early 20's at the time of the "Old Boys' Reunion".

There was a lot of talk about inviting all the old boys back for a week's celebration this summer.

DID NOT SEE CAR

Leo Auger, the genial Chamber of Commerce dock tender, was involved in an accident with a car yesterday and had to be treated at the Trenton Memorial Hospital for head lacerations. The accident occurred on Byron Street near the corner of Crown Street.

Apparently Auger walking from east to west on Byron Street failed to observe the approaching car driven by Charles Wall of the R.C.A.F., who lives at Clinton, Ontario. Mrs. Alma Deriger was a passenger in the car.

The car was moving down a small grade but at a slow rate of speed.

A passerby who noticed the accident put Auger in his car and took him to the hospital. Dr. J. V. Byrne treated the injured man. Auger has been released from hospital and is apparently well on the road to recovery.

The fire department answered two other calls yesterday.

An oil burner with the carbureter flooding out of control caused trouble for Herb. Fitzgibbon on George Street. No loss resulted from the flare-up.

For the second time in two weeks fire caught in the wall behind the stove in Worden Farley's bungalow on highway No. 2 at the west end of the town. The firemen arrived in time to avert serious loss.

Five to Share

TORONTO (CP) — An estate valued at $1,500,000 was left by John Laughlin and his son, John, Jr., the two recluses who died two weeks ago from accidental gassing in their ramshackle home.

The Guarantee Trust Company, administrator of the estate, said $97,000 of the estate is in cash, including $24,000 found in a barrel in the basement. The rest of the fortune consists of 150 pieces of real estate.

After deduction of succession duties, the remainder of the estate probably will be divided among five brothers and sisters of the elder Laughlin, whose age has been put anywhere between 85 and 104.

Obituary

GEORGE H. HARDY

Campbellford—Funeral services were conducted on Saturday for the late George H. Hardy, Chief of Police of Campbellford for the past 24 years. He was 51.

Chief Hardy had been ill for some time and on leave of absence from the police force. He died at his home in Campbellford on Thursday.

He had been on the town's police force 24 years and was chief constable for most of that time.

He was born in Campbellford, son of Robert Richard Hardy and Mary Sarah Costley, both of whom died some years ago. He was a member of the Loyal Orange Lodge in Campbellford and a member of Christ Anglican Church.

He is survived by his wife, the former Gladys Little and a son, Richard Charles, age 4. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Fred Graham of Newcastle. Ontario, and five brothers, Nelson, Albert, Samuel, Theodore, all of Campbellford and William of Toronto.

The funeral serivce was held from his home at 57 Simpson Street on Saturday, with the Rev. John McKibbin of Christ Church officiating. It was one of the largest funerals seen in Campbellford in recent years, with five provincial cruisers leading the funeral cortege, carrying more than twenty O.P.P. officers, who acted as honorary bearers. The Anglican church was filled to overflowing and scores of persons stood outside the church while the services were being conducted inside.

Officials of Peterborough, Northumberland and Durham counties. police officers from many distant points as well as other government and municipal officials were in attendance to pay their last respects to the late police chief. Dr. Fred Robertson and the Hon. W. A Goodfellow, minister of Welfare also attended the funeral.

The bearers were Mack, Edwin, Eric and Charles Little, brothers-in-law of the deceased, and O.P.P. Constables Donald W. Erskine and James McKenzie.

The services of a score of flower bearers were required to handle the many floral tributes. Burial was in Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

MRS. MABEL C. M. BEASLEY

The funeral of Mrs. Mabel C. M. Beasley was held from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home on Monday morning to Christ Church. The service was conducted by Canon J. B. Creeggan assisted by Rev. Everett Smith. Interment was in Pine Crest cemetery at Ottawa.

The bearers were A. Smith, Richard Goodfellow, R. Reid, E. Buckley, T. Burton and C. Maybee.

MRS. MARY MAUDE REDNER
Herchimer Ave.

Stricken suddenly at her home, Mrs. Mary Maude Redner, died Tuesday evening at her home, South Herchimer Ave. She was in her 81st. year.

Born in Thurlow, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Garbutt, she had lived in the Belleville area all her life. She was a member of St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church and of St. John's Guild.

She is survived by her husband, John William Redner; one daughaer, Miss Jennie Kathleen Redner, at home, and one son, Mr. Robert L. Redner, of this city. A brother, James Garbutt, of this city; three grandchildren and three great grandchildren, also survive.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

Lack of Continuity Co operation Between Council and Planning Committee Kiwanians Are Told

"There is a great lack of continuity and co-operation with city council and the city planning board," Thomas J. Ransom told members of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday. "Although," he added, "there are a number of conscientious, hard workers on each committee, they simply do not seem to get things done due to the fact they are not on these boards long enough."

Speaking at the regular noon luncheon, Mr. Ransom, an Ontario land surveyor, offered his solution to the present congested traffic in the city. "If," he continued, "there were special appointees to these commissions, instead of only aldermen (which is the present arrangement) for a period of several years, much might be accomplished."

"In the matter of co-operation," the speaker said, "we have a glaring example of its non-existence in the zoning by-law presently under discussion. Here again there is a lack of co-operation with the city and the suburban planning board. For instance, the Chamber of Commerce has not been consulted on this matter and who is more concerned about city and city development than the Chamber."

Making reference to the traffic problem, Mr. Ransom criticized traffic diversion. "The cars are still present," he said, "no amount of diverting will eliminate the number of vehicles in the city."

As a solution, the speaker suggested straightening the Moira River to a degree, building a river road on the east side of the river, yet not extending it either to any one of the two vehicle crossings. Any extension would be by footwalk from the end of the river road extending to the bridges but not for motor traffic so as to avoid congestion on Bridge and West Moira Streets. The motor traffic would cross the river from the river road by means of another bridge erected on the location of the present footbridge. The means of arriving on the river road would be by a series of alley ways leading off Front Street.

These alley ways would accommodate one-way traffic only, that moving from Front Street to the river road and planning to cross the proposed Catherine Street bridge. Ultimately another bridge would be erected at Coleman Street, again leading from the river road.

The main blocks in this plan, according to the speaker, hinge around the purchasing of land from present owners to construct the river road. Cost is always a concerning factor, however, Mr. Ransom, roughly quoted a price of some quarter of a million dollars. He estimated it would cost that much to complete the erection of one bridge, building of the river road and the straightening out of the river.

The speaker was introduced by Al Drysdale and thanked by Bud Punchard.

Returns to District After Absence Of Fifty Years

A man who has spent the past 50 years of his life in the Canadian west has been visiting old friends and surroundings in his birthplace of Campbellford.

He is Quinn Lane, a retired sheet metal worker of Calgary. With his wife, the former Marion Hamilton, of Kinistino, Saskatchewan, Mr. Lane is visiting his daughter, Mrs. V. V. Kellar, whose husband is stationed with the R. C. A. F. Trenton.

Mr. Lane has not visited this part of the country since he left half a century ago. He and his wife left Calgary three months ago and are returning next week. On their way back, the Lanes will stop off at Windsor to visit Mr. Lane's sister, Mrs. Grace Peiper.

Despite the growth of Southern Ontario since he last saw it, Mr. Lane says the dampness remains as penetrating as ever, as compared to the dryness of the Calgary area.

Nevertheless, he states, it has been a most gratifying experience to return to the district of his childhood to renew old acquaintances.

'Y' Leaders Hear First Aid Talk

J. W. Hodgson of the St. Johns Ambulance Society spoke to senior leaders' regular meeting at the 'Y' last night. He urged the leaders to take a full first aid course which, he said, would serve them as individuals, as leaders of the Y. M. C. A., and as members of the community.

Part of his talk was a demonstration of the new Holger Nielson "back-pressure, arm-lift" method of artificial respiration, followed by a discussion of the most common athletic injuries which occur in sport activities and how to administer first aid.

The leaders also had training in tumbling and balancing.

HUSBAND SURVIVES

In the obituary report of Mrs. Hettie Carnrike, of the 4th. concession Ameliasburg, which appeared in yesterday's edition, her husband Charles Leslie Carnrike, who survives, was erroneously referred to as the late Mr. Carnrike.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials turned mixed after a firm opening and most other groups weakened in moderate forenoon stock markets trading today.

Heaviest trader of the first hour was Villbona with a turnover of 57,000 shares for a gain of 2½ cents. Gunnar traded actively to add 35 cents and New Larder U and Nubar also rose.

Most industrials groups were mixed but liquors, banks, manufacturing companies and retail stores were firm. Refining oils weakened.

Federated led the list of small gain in western oils, followed by Britalta and Pacific. Anglo-Canadian and Husky slipped.

Higher-priced base metals weakened and most others followed. Leading losers were Cassiar, Cons. Smelters, United Keno and Falconbridge. Western Tungsten and Camp. Chibougamau added pennies.

Senior golds slipped and juniors turned lower as East Malartic and Broulan Reef dropped pennies. Prospects held firm while holding companies were mixed.

British Shipping Fears New Edict Of Eisenhower

HONG KONG (Reuters) —British shipping firms in this crown colony, still carrying on a profitable trade with Communist China, fear they will be the ones to suffer most from U. S. decision to withdraw the 7th fleet from Formosan waters.

The threat of interception by Natonalist Chinese gunboats and armed junks — considerable even when the U.S. fleet was there — now will be sharpened, business men said Tuesday.

These fears were backed up by reports from Taipeh, Formosa, which said the Nationalists will probably order their navy patrols to intercept foreign ships and unload their cargoes if it can be determined that the ships are bound for Chinese mainland ports.

Because the British government officially recognizes China's Communist regime, British firms here have continued to work the profitable trade channels built up during the last century.

The Communist revolution and war in Korea have curtailed this trade, but it is still an important outlet for Britain, both here and at home. Such trade is considered legitimate so long as no goods embargoed by the United Nations fall into Communist hands.

Awarded Medals

TORONTO (CP)—Two Canadian Red Cross girls, Virginia Cook of Calgary and Sheila Douglas of Ottawa, have been awarded the Canadian Army's Korea Medal for service with the UN forces in the Far East. They are the first women civilians to receive the medal.

The Canadian Red Cross Society was notified of the awards Tuesday by the department of national defence.

Miss Cook and Miss Douglas are members of the Red Cross welfare team in the Far East. They were sent to Japan last May and have since spent considerable time in Korea.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged here today.

The egg market was steady and prices were unchanged. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 43; A medium 41; A small 39; grade B 36; grade C 33. Wholesale to retail: A large 48; A medium 46; A small 44; grade B 41; grade C 38.

Butter solids: first grade 62½-62¾; no price established on second or third grade; western 62½ nominal.

Commons Adopts Suggestion By Labor Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons adopted a suggestion by Labor Minister Gregg Tuesday that a committee study the question of putting the voluntary revocable check-off into labor legislation.

Mr. Gregg said members should not take hasty action on a proposal by Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre) that the Industrial Relations and Disputes Act be amended to include the voluntary revocable check-off.

Mr. Gregg said the proposal would make it compulsory for employers to deduct union dues from an employee's pay at the request of the employee.

He said it is open to question whether unions should derive stability from government-imposed measures rather than agreements freely entered into between employers and employees.

Officials of his department now are studying the Disputes Act. Changes should be brought in as a group of amendments, not one by one.

Welcomes Suggestion

Mr. Knowles said he welcomes Mr. Gregg's suggestion that a Commons committee study his suggestion. However, he wanted to make it clear that employers already operate a form of check-off for charitable donations, savings bonds and income tax. Some of this was done under compulsory legislation.

Rene Beaudoin, deputy speaker, ruled out of order an amendment by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader. Mr. Drew asked that the committee review the whole Dispute Act rather than just the check-off.

Mr. Drew said patching the act with amendments might defeat the spirit of the act itself. That sometimes produced an unwieldy and incoherent law. Labor legislation should be under constant review to bring it into line with advances.

The time was past when there was opposition to an employee's right to form a union and bargain collectively.

Strikes and threats of strikes often obscure the overwhelming number of cases where employees and employers have settled their differences amicably.

Managing Editors Meet at London For Conference

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Every province will be represented when more than 70 representatives of Canada's 92 daily newspapers meet here this week at the seventh annual Canadian Managing Editors Conference.

Editors from St. John's, Nfld., to Victoria will hold three days' discussions on improving the news sections of their newspapers.

It is the first time the conference has met in London. R. J. Churchill, executive editor of the London Free Press, is president.

A reception Thursday will open the conference.

Friday morning Basil Walters, executive editor of Knight News Inc. which publishes the Chicago Daily News and Detroit Free Press, will speak on the relation of news to television. During the afternoon there will be a panel discussion on a well-balanced newspaper and Bill Boss, Canadian Press correspondent in Korea, will speak.

Saturday morning's panel discussion will be on plastic engraving for newspaper reproduction of photographs.

Dr. J. J. Dalman, University of Western Ontario librarian, will speak on humor in the press.

Editors will be guests of the Canadian Bankers Association at luncheon Saturday. Kenneth Harris Washington correspondent of the Observer of London, England, will speak on British newspapers.

Panel of Press

The afternoon will be taken up with a panel on press and the law. Speaker will be Chief Justice John C. McRuer of Supreme Court of Ontario.

In the evening, the conference will be entertained by the province of Ontario at a dinner and by the London Free Press at a dance.

Luncheon Sunday will be given by the city of London, with Erwin Canham, Editor of the Christian Science Monitor, as speaker.

Sunday afternoon there will be a reception at the University of Western Ontario.

Believe Vaccine Will Wipe Out Influenza

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United Nations said Tuesday that world health organization scientists believe they have found a preventive vaccine which will wipe out influenza.

The UN said these scientists hope that by 1954 the scourge of influenza will be completely mastered and as rare as bubonic plague

The new serum—not yet available in large quantities — was evolved by scientists working in 55 laboratories in 44 countries under the supervision of W.H.O. in Geneva, and the world influenza centre in London. he UN said it is the first time a specific anti-flu vaccine has been developed which can be used in advance of an attack.

W.H.O. officials here were jubilant at the news. They said that even in the mild form of this winter's epidemic in many countries, flu attacks cause great economic loss and dislocation of essential services.

THE CONSUMER PRICE INDEX

Each month the Dominion Bureau of Statistics publishes an index of living costs in Canada. Up until last October this was known as the Cost of Living Index. Since then the name has been changed to Consumer Price Index. The main purpose of the index is to measure changes in retail prices as they affect urban living costs.

The Bank of Montreal in its latest Business Review stresses the importance of the index as a standard which affects incomes and costs all over the Dominion — pardon —Canada. The Review states that the cost-of-living index has been among the most frequent topics of conversation in recent years. Nor is this interest casual, since a sample of collective bargaining agreements signed in the first eight months of 1951 showed that something like forty per cent of union workers were protected by "escalator" clauses which made mandatory a change in wages with each specified change in the index. Also many employers are influenced by the movement of the index in considering general revisions of wages.

The Consumer Price Index is the result of four years of preparatory work in the most extensive revision of an index of Canadian retail prices ever undertaken. The bureau consulted business, union, welfare and consumer groups and made a study of year-round purchases of 3,600 Canadian households. Next a "target group" of 1,517 families was selected, ranging in size from two adults to two adults with four children with annual incomes ranging from $1650 to $4505 in the year ended August 1948, and living in 27 Canadian cities of over 30,000 population. The detailed expenditures over a year of this "target group" were then analyzed to determine what items should be included in the new index. While most of the commodities and services bought in 1948 were found to be the same as 1938, the previous survey year, over thirty items included in the old cost-of-living index had receded to neglible importance and were dropped, while nearly 100 new items were added.

These deletions and adidtions provide, says the bank Review, an interesting commentary on the changes that have taken place in the Canadian way of life in the short space of ten years. The modern family eats proportionately more pork and less beef, more fresh fruits, vegetables and fruit juices than before. Nylons have replaced rayon or woollen stockings and pyjamas have supplanted the cotton nightgown. In the home, fuel oil has gone a long way toward replacing coal and coke for heating. The costs of soft drinks, beer, liquor and home ownership, as distinct from renting, have been included for the first time.

After examining the great task of keeping the new index up to date, the "weighting" of different purchases and the reasons for the choice of 1949 as the new base year, the Review concludes by emphasizing the importance of "bearing in mind what it is and what it is not." It is not intended to apply to farm households, for which a separate index is compiled, not to single persons or families in the very low or very high income brackets. However, it does apply and apparently with a high degree of validity, "to the average sized, city-dwelling family of moderate means to which so many Canadians belong"

BIGGEST KILLER IN NATION

Diseases of the heart and blood vessels now constitute the largest group of deaths in Canada each year, approximately 50,000 annually reports the Canadian Heart Association. Nearly half of the deaths in people over 50 years of age fall into this group. Diseases of the heart and blood vessels caused three times as many deaths as cancer, five times as many as from violence and accidents, and eight times as many as tuberculosis.

Hardening of the arteries is the chief offender in causing heart disease in people over the age of 40. Amongst children rheumatic fever is still in a prominent position, although it has fallen somewhat in the last 10 years. In 1942 it was the second leading cause of death from disease among school children, now it is fourth. Each year in Canada there are approximately 700 infants who die in the first year of life from congenital heart disease.

The medical profession has made some progress in recent years in treating disease of the heart and blood vessels. These advances include: the treatment of bacterial infection of the heart valves; the surgical treatment of blue babies and other congenital heart defects; the use of sulfa drugs and pencillin in cutting down recurrence of attacks of rheumatic fever. Much progress has been made in the treatment of thyroid heart disease.

"In problems of heart disease many questions are as yet unanswered and present a remarkable challenge today," says the Canadian Heart Association in a special National Health Week statement. "For example, we do not know as yet the cause of high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, rheumatic fever or congenital heart disease. This is a challenge to the doctors who carry out research in all these fields and to the public to support investigation and aid in the care and treatment of people suffering from this group of diseases.

"It is estimated that there are over half a million people in Canada suffering from some form of disease of the heart and blood vessels. Whenever possible these individuals should be encouraged to take part in jobs that suit their capabilities."

The Canadian Heart Association was organized in 1947 "to encourage the development and dissemination of knowledge related to the prevention and relief of cardiovascular disease."

THE CHANGING VIEWPOINT

What's most important? To a boy
The games he plays and all his dreams,
The pride of victory to enjoy
To every lad important seems.

At college with high marks to pass
Urges ambitious youth to try,
And as a leader of his class
Be honored as the years go by.

Material success appears
His greatest goal when he's a man,
And for his few declining years
Win every comfort if he can.

But most important (grayed of hair)
Is pride of loved ones, he'll decide.
If this at last is his share,
He will not miss what's been denied.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 4, 1933.

Prepared from the sap obtained from 117 maple trees on the farm of Mr. Ben Morton of Moira, maple syrup of excellent quality was offered for sale on the city market today by Mr. Joseph Williams. The quantity offered was four and one half cans. The present weather will put a stop to operations for a time. The syrup today was sold at 55 cents per quart or $2.25 per gallon.

Several wild black ducks were seen this morning enjoying themselves in the open waters of the Moira river near the railway bridge in the vicinity of the park. They were observed by firemen at No. 1 station and also by several citizens. According to Mr. Joseph Goyer the incident is not unusual; he states that black ducks have wintered in the open waters of the bay during the greater part of this season.

Fully 400 boys and girls availed themselves of the hospitality of the Belleville Arena this morning when free skating was permitted by Manager Jacobi.

Belleville Market Prices: Butter 22 cents to 23 cents per pound; eggs (pullets) 14 cents to 15 cents per dozen; eggs (hens) 16 cents to 18 cents per dozen; chickens 50 cents to $1 per pair; ducks 75 cents each; one turkey weighing about twelve pounds, sold for $2.35.

30 YEARS AGO

Feb. 4, 1923.

This morning the thermometer registered 22 degrees below zero. It was a dip of 54 degrees from melting point yesterday. It is still cold this afternoon, being 10 degrees below. Plumbers are very busy thawing water pipes.

There is no truth in the report that the Board of Trade came out on Candlemas Day and saw its shadow; the Board of Trade does not cast a shadow anymore.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dolan have left to visit their daughter, Mrs. Edward McHugh in Sioux City, Iowa.

Mr. W. A. Daly, Napanee, was in town today.

Dr. Gibson's fine team of horses ran away yesterday from near his residence on Pinnacle Street. They ran up Front Street, crossed the upper bridge, continued along North Front Street and along the Foxboro Road and were not caught until they reached Ross' Corners, which point is about four miles beyond the city limits. One horse was seriously injured and the sleigh was slightly damaged.

STATESMEN AND POLITICIANS

We hear a great deal these days about statesmen and politicians. In the public mind, a strict differentiation must be made between the two. Yet this is unrealistic, for certainly every statesman must in a measure be a politician, although it is not true that every politician is a statesman.

A statesman is a man who serves the state. Probably the best definition ever given is that a statesman is one who believes that he is owned by the state, whereas a politician is one who believes that he owns the state. A statesman is a servant; a politician—if he is nothing more—is a time-server and a parasite. One is a blessing the other a public nuisance.

In ancient times it was hard indeed to find rulers at any level who were anything other than bandits fighting hard to retain their loot. But with the coming of Christ the word "servant" came into fashion. Jesus was proud to consider Himself a servant, and the command he laid upon his followers was that they were to be servants.

If there be any young man reading these words, why not make a decision right now that whatever you do you will in the doing of it be a servant? If you put this into operation in the field of politics, you will also be a statesman.

AN IDEA FOR BUS-LOADING

(St. Paul Pioneer Press)

A new system of loading sardines from the ocean onto fishing boats is reported. A rubber hose, eight inches in diameter, is let down into the nets containing the fish, and these are pulled up by vacuum suction into the ship's hold where they are kept. Later the process, which will load or unload 65 tons of fish an hour, is repeated in transferring the catch to the cannery containers. Sounds like a clever idea that might be employed in loading and unloading street-car and bus passengers these days.

A BREAK FOR THE CAREFUL DRIVER

(Calgary Herald)

Insurance rates are high now and when people find that, because of their bad accident record, their rates jump greatly each year, they may be forced to revise their driving habits, or at least act with a little more caution when handling a motor vehicle. Any change of this nature in habitually careless driving attitudes would be welcome. To do this while at the same time offering the careful folks a small financial reward for good behavior is in our opinion sound and smart business.

The Potato and the Fate of Nations

(From The Scientific American, New York)

Scarcely anyone greets his neighbor with "nice potatoes this morning," though everybody talks about the weather. Why should this be? For millions of persons the cultural influence of one is just about as great as the other. The reason, according to Redcliffe N. Salaman, an authority on the lowly tuber, probably rests on the fact that you can generally count on potatoes. But not always.

"The potato," says Salaman, "has had much to do with shaping society. Two cultures in particular, each in its own way, offer striking examples of its influence. One is Ireland, whose history has been bound up with the potato for more than 300 years. The other is ancient Peru, where for more than 2,000 years the potato was not only the staple of life but a spiritual symbol as well. It was from Peru, in fact, that the tuber came to Europe; investigation in recent years have left little doubt that the first European potatoes reached the old world from South America near the end of the 16th century. It has since been enormously improved. The tuber today is a triumph of breeding and selection; it differs from its Peruvian ancestor as much as does the race horse from its wild progenitor."

Although man has thus greatly improved the potato as a source of food, his program of domesticating the tuber has met with blank failure in one important particular. He has made no progress against the disease which periodically threatens the potato with extinction. Toward the middle of the 18th century, when the potato had enabled many sections of Europe to attain a cultural level, previously unmatched in history, a disturbing sign appeared; here and there the potato crop began to fail. Sometimes the cause was excessive rainfall, sometimes drought. And then in 1809 a virus disease struck the crop. By 1817 the disease had brought famine and typhus to the people. Governments issued warnings against placing too much reliance on the tuber—but it was too late. The expanded population was, in effect, a product of the potato—a product whose very existence depended on the tuber's continued health.

Then in 1845 and 1846 came the total destruction of the potato by a previous unknown fungus. The tale of this fatal mold and the great famine that followed in Ireland needs no repetition. Notwithstanding help from England, death and emigration reduced the population of Ireland from 9 million to 6.5 million within six years, and in a couple of decades it had fallen to four million.

What was the nature of the fungus and how will the farmer combat it, should the malady strike again? Unfortunately, science can give no encouraging answer to this question. Says Mr. Salaman, "The danger has not disappeared. Before World War II potato economy was being created in rural Poland, and today one exists along part of the Chilean coast of South America and west of it on the Pacific island of Chiloe. In other parts of the world, the potato maintains the safe margin of economies based on wheat or rice. But, as in Ireland 100 years ago, the Chilean crops were destroyed in 1950 suddenly and unexpectedly—and by the same agent!

Insured Against Everything

(By W. C. Heine in the London Free Press)

One afternoon last fall Charles W. Hadden, a prominent London industrialist now retired, listened to a group of friends praising his contribution to the commuity, climbed to his feet, looked quizzically down the table and delivered himself of a brilliant and brief address.

In the course of his remarks, he wondered what had happened to Canada's youth. Not that they weren't capable, but they were far too concerned with security. When young men asked him for a job, their first questions were about the firm's pension plan.

"Pension plans for a boy of 20?" snorted "Charlie" Hadden, "when I was that age I was going to live forever."

A century, half a century ago, men did not hesitate to risk their all "on one turn of pitch and toss, and lose and never say a word about their loss." That was what Charlie Hadden did a few decades ago. Secure in a teaching berth, he tossed it overboard, entered the business world, and became the mainspring behind development of one of Canada's big industries.

We live in a changing world, and one of the greatest changes is the overwhelming desire of countless men and women for security. From birth society spreads a rapidly-thickening cocoon around them, swathing each in so many layers of security that none has an opportunity to see a goal beyond the risk.

All too often today the only risk a man wil take is when he gets everything he or his wife wants in material things—then he'll toss into the stock market some of the surplus fruits of his labor and rend the air with piteous screams when his favorite drops a point.

The average citizen today shouldn't know what worry means. Any worry he dreams up for himself is likely his own fault, or the result of a guilty conscience.

There's insurance against fires, robbers, aircraft falling on the roof, flood, acts of war, and even acts of God. Mother is insured against dying and leaving three helpless children to fend for themselves. Her engagement ring is insured against loss, and her fur coat against being moth-eaten in winter storage. The children are insured again dying suddenly and making things a little tough for Father with a heavy funeral bill, and in case Father isn't around to pay the fraternity dues, there's insurance to provide the necessary capital for that, too.

Father is insured, oh, brother, is he ever! He's insured against dying now, tomorrow, and every day until he's 65—then the whole structure converts an insurance which will keep him happily twiddling his thumbs until the death which long ago petrified his brain catches up with his body. Drunk or sober, he's insured against killing some hapless pedestrian or motorist; some one will pay the bill if he knocks down a telephone poles; a check will arrive in due course to pay for the smoothly-worked stitches he acquires when windshields shatter his face; and if the children's tonsils go on the fritz, there's help to bear that cross, too.

Is a turned-over car a loss? Pouff, no. There's a little thing called $25 deductible, but that's getting to be only a fair day's wages.

He's insured the mortgage so if he dies about the only change Mother's got to make around the house is remember to set one less place at table.

Finally, because he's getting more and more addle-pated every year, he's even got himself insurance to end all insurance, a floater. That covers anything not covered anywhere else—from a new fishing rod lost out the back of a boat because he was too drunk to grab it, to losing his shoes in a mud hole the night he was chased by an irate husband.

No wonder the poor fellow does not take a risk on anything. His equivalent in pioneer days would have demanded insurance against a wagon axle breaking on a river ford. If we waited for the average man today to settle a new land, we'd wait until this time next century.

The insurance he heaps upon himself is not the ony thread in his cocoon. A paternal government spins a few. Nicking him every week, the nation's great white fathers make sure he has something to defend himself with, and that he'll never starve if his boss fires him.

The irony is that the boss does not dare fire him. Digging up sufficient cash to pay back pension, sick fund, hospitalization, Christmas cheer, overtime, statutory holiday, and credit union contributions would probably break the firm.

You get all that stuff piled on one man's shoulder's and it takes a startling percentage of his pay check. It's not at all unusual for a man to add up his payments for taxes, pensions, unemployment insurance, hospitaization, surgical and medical insurance, as well as that all-important floater policy, and find himself with a good percentage of his pay check gone.

So far we've only mentioned two threads in the security cocoon. There are other threads, far more insidious, which begin to form soon after birth. Man has to conform. The rest of the world lays down a set of rules, and if he doesn't follow them, may the Lord have mercy on his soul. The nagging whispers follow him all his days, branding him a rebel. "That's the Jones chap, you know the one, he likes to do things his own way." Men with brilliant minds are marked queer because they don't join clubs, because they develop intense interests in international affairs, because they do things most people don't do.

HOW LONG WILL $28 HOG REMAIN?

(Clinton News-Record)

Surely farmers did not expect their good friend of January, 1952, to return this winter, but it is a general welcome he is receiving. When his skinny brother hog, the $23 one, threatened to pay an extended visit, there was a deep throated groan from the pocket books of all hog-marketers. How long Mr. $28 hog will remain is a matter for conjecture—and who will get the blame for his ultimate disappearance is another good question.

MIRACLE IN MINIATURE

SOURCES OF C-O ASPHYXIA IN EVERYDAY LIFE

Asphyxia means literally absence of pulse or heart beat, but by usage it signifies suspended animation or death from deprivation of oxygen.

Asphyxia occurs from various causes, such as submersion or drowning, suffocation from imprisonment in a small enclosure from which air supply is excluded, throttling etc., but carbon monoxide gassing is the most important if not the most frequent cause of asphyxia in America today. Everyone should know the common sources of carbon monoxide asphyxia (anoxia, not poisoning) as well as the signs or symptoms it produces and the safety precautions and first aid measures against it.

Natural gas contains no carbon monoxide—it is composed principally of menthane, also called marsh gas, fire damp and light carburated hydrogen. Arificial gas made from coal contains chiefly hydrogen, less than half as much methane as natural gas and 6 to 7 per cent of carbon monoxide. Artificial gas made by blowing steam through incandescent coal or coke—"water gas"—contains nearly 30 per cent carbon monoxide and is therefore the most dangerous of the three kinds of gas used in domestic life. Methane, of which natural gas contains about 88 per cent, coal gas 39 per cent and water gas 24 per cent, is virtually without harmful effect, as odorless as arbon monoxide, but may form an explosive mixture when it amounts to 1/18th of the volume of air in room, pit, mine, cave or cellar.

Not only gas, but coal, coke, wood, oil, gasoline, coal oil, cloth, paper or any other fuel burning with damper or draft closed or with a restricted air supply may produce dangerous quantities of carbon monoxide, and such "fumes" may overcome or kill without warning, that is, without odor such as is popularly associated with "fumes."

Any type of gas, oil, kerosene or gasoline burner which becomes sooted is likely to generate considerable carbon monoxide. Basement tank automatic water heaters should be regularly cleaned to prevent accumulation of soot on the burners.

A flame impining on a cold metal surface produces carbon monoxide. So it is well to warm up a cold cooking utensil over the flame before setting it on the burner. Remember, as little as two parts of C-O in a thousand of air may knock off a few million red corpuscles while you are codddling the star boarder.

Dangerous amounts of C-O are present in the exhaust from a gasoline engine. This makes it imperative to keep garage doors wide open when warming up the automobile engine in cold weather. It is foolhardy to try to gauge the degree of pollution of the air by the sense of smell, because carbon monoxide is odorless.

Every one who drives or rides in bus, truck or private automobile in cold weather should be aware of the closed car hazard.

Grate, open coal, coke or brickette fires; radiant heaters and in fact any type of heater without stovepipe connection with chimney flue or the outdoors; charcoal braziers or similar heaters (salamanders) used either for heating or for drying out newly plastered rooms; unvented type founders in printing establishments; gas-heated irons in steaming and pressing shops; living in rooms over a garage; working in an office connecting with a garage; these are some of the sources of carbon monoxide asphyxia or chronic anoxia in everyday life.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PROGRESS?

I am a lover of books, as any reader of this brief column may have suspected. I get many books and always with a thrill. Many come to me as gifts, and so such ones create excitement and anticipation on my part. But—why are these books sent cased, hermetically sealed, double wrapped, stapled in bags that spread their substance when finally the actual book appears?

For years and years a book arrived through the mail in a simple case,—or easily broken paper or cardboard, and ready for immediate reading. Some literate gentlemen wrote to Bennett Cerf, thinking that he could give a reason for all this fuss and fume about embalming a book so securely, but he replied: "I'm darned if I know an adequate answer."

I recently received a book that came in an elaborate heavy carded box. Then I unwrapped four more coverings, and then in tissue paper was the book itself! Not long before I received a book from London which took me but a few seconds to break its wrap and there the book was, as immaculate as if it had just been handed to me from a bookshop counter.

Ideas are wonderful if they are an improvement on the ideas that they are meant to replace. We live in a wonderful age, with improvements that are often dazzling, but there seems to be a rage for gadgets and new creations that confuse. Are we getting away from the simple life? Is speed the essential for the automobile we drive, rather than safety and comfort?

We have had two tragic world wars and the sample of a possible third one. No such destruction of the faith of the world has been so unhealing. The United Nations. What an inspiring title! But how far from being actually united in mind, in heart, and in purpose. One world of faith, of mutual trust, and peaceful cooperation would mean progress. That is what the free world is praying for—peace and good will—genuine progress.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The youngest member of a family is generally accused of being spoiled. Quite a case can be made out against these last comers, whether boy or girl. They were the babies of the family. Their mothers tried to keep them babies longer than was wise; the older children pampered them; they were petted, humored, indulged, excused.

A very gay-living and mischievous gentleman of my acquaintence, who is the youngest of his family, tells me that this is all wrong. Youngest children are not spoiled; they are merely neglected. By the time they come along in the family, everybody is tired of children; the father, mother, the older children, the grandparents, the relatives, even the neighbors.

The first child in a family is always treated with excessive attention and care. It gets a tremendous welcome into the world. It is the object of what amounts almost to a celebration amongst parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles. The greatest attention is paid to its health.

A second child, on arrival, is welcomed onto known ground. The celebration is less exuberant. It gets the advantage of all the learning and experience of its parents in the matter of child care and welfare. The thrill has worn off the grandparents. A second child, like a third or fourth child, is welcomed into the world in a nice, rational atmosphere of taking things as they come.

But the last child, whether third, or sixth, is the embodiment of what might be called too much of a good thing. Everybody is glad to see him, of course, and he is subjected to comparison with his fore-runners, prettier than Bill was, not so cute as Jane, chubbier than Pete. But he is just another baby.

And from there on, he is submerged by the larger interests and activities of the older children; he gets in the way, he's a nuisance. He ties his parents down. His nurture and training are neglected, and to keep him quiet, he is given his way, pampered, spoiled.

That, says my gay-living friend, is why the youngest member of a family often turns out to be the wealthiest, liveliest, most intelligent, successful and troublesome of the whole litter.

Lois Armstrong Wins Art Award

Miss Lois Armstrong was the winner of the first prize awarded to B.C.I. art students in a poster contest sponsored by the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club. Ruth Watson won second prize with the third award going to Terry Clifton.

The prizes were presented to the winners by Freeman Burrows, secretary of the club.

The theme of the contest was the technicolor motion picture taken by Commander A. Braidwood, R.C.N., on a recent trip around the world in a sailing schooner. The film is being shown in the collegiate auditorium next Saturday evening.

The attractive posters will be displayed in downtown shops from now until Saturday.

Mrs. Robbins acted as critic of the contest.

Bridge St. Y.P.U. Discusses Play

The Y. P. U. of Bridge Street United Church met on Monday evening for its weekly meeting in the church parlors with a good attendance of members present. The president, Ken Graham, presided, and opened the business period.

The worship service was under the direction of Barbara Sager, with Bernice Bell reading the Scripture from Galatians 1: 1-11.

The Rev. Duncan McTavish led in the weekly Bible study of the New Testament.

Further details regarding the play to be presented in April, were discussed by Mrs. Jardine, the director, who pointed out many important facts concerning acting, with special reference to lights, actors, and the stage setting.

A social half hour followed the close of the meeting.

Dr. Bruce Cronk Special Speaker At Meeting

B.C.I.V.S. Home and School held its monthly meeting on Monday evening under the chairmanship of K. Atwell, vice-president. Mrs. Gander reported an increase in membership. The purchase of two school area markers for the protection of pupils of Queen Elizabeth School crossing at Dundas Street, was approved in the spirit of a friendly and encouraging gesture to the younger Home and School group of this school.

Dr. Bruce Cronk, speaker of the evening, was introduced in his own distinctive way by Dr. Reg. Anderson, and was thanked by Mr. Freeman. Dr. Cronk gave a very interesting and informal talk of his experiences with the Eskimos on three scientific expeditions of five which were sponsored by the Canadian Defence Research Board, with the object of investigating climatization in the north. Dr. Cronk spoke very highly of the Eskimo people, whose origin is apparently unknown, although they are possibly Mongolians. Their population is seven or eight thousand and although they are fellow Canadians and closer neighbors to us than some of our other fellow Canadians, very little appears to have been done in regard to bettering their health conditions which present a very pathetic picture. Their life expectancy is 42 years and out of a family of 10 or 12 children, only two usually live to maturity.

The expeditions made were to a location on an island in the Eastern Arctic, an approximate distance of 2,000 air miles, the island having 230 Eskimo inhabitants. The base used was a vacated emergency landing strip built during the war.

The parents' attitude in the bringing up of children is rather unique, as from the ages of 1 to 4, the children do pretty well as they please and become perfect tyrants, but strange to say, at four years a change takes place in the child when he becomes a perfect servant of his elders.

Built From Snow

The igloo, which is the Eskimo winter home, is built from cut chunks of snow and is in the form of a perfect circle when completed, without any apparent measurement to arrive at this shape. Two Eskimos can build an igloo in forty minutes which will last the Arctic winter. The only heating problem is the maintaining of an oil candle which supplies sufficient heat. In summer the Eskimo goes under canvas, which he has been able to obtain in trade for his skins from the Hudson Bay factor.

The Eskimo and his family's life depend on his ability to obtain food by the catching of seals and walrus, in fact when the urgency warrants, the Eskimo can stand motionless up to 36 hours near a blow hole in the ice in hope of a seal or walrus coming up for air.

A casuality among the Eskimos in which case one was drowned, at first appeared to the speaker as an oddity that Eskimos could not swim, but on second thought it was realized that the frigidity of the water was not conducive to learning.

Considerable data was collected by physical examination of the Eskimos by blood tests, sputum tests and dietary tests. In all of these the Eskimos were extremely co-operative. The good services of one Harry Gibbons, halfbreed, who strange to say spoke English with a Scotch accent was invaluable in dealing with the Eskimos.

Trees Unknown

Trees are unknown to the Eskimo, the largest being 10 1-2 inches, and wood therefore being priceless.

A family tradition which eventually results in small family groups forming is originated by two Eskimos when hunting making a betrothal pack between the children when they come of marrying age.

Dr. Cronk showed two moving pictures illustrating many of the points which he had spoken of, one of the pictures representing Eskimo life in the winter and the other in the summer.

Both Dr. Cronk and his audience apparently would have been willing to have extended this most interesting discourse, but as it was, all good things have to come to an end and so the audience retired to the entertainment portion of the program feeling that they had, through Dr. Cronk's talk, definitely become acquainted with a fellow Canadian, the Eskimo.

The entertainment portion of the program was carried out by the Quintones of S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. Inc., under the leadership of Dick Brettingham assisted by Jack Todds, Dalton Kaye and Alf. Evans, who very harmoniously rendered "Moonlight Bay," "Jingle Bells," and "In the Gloamin'. Dick Brettingham announced Harmony Night in May sponsored by the Barbershop Quartets of Belleville in order to provide a fund for the scholarship which they annually offer to be competed for by the local high schools.

With refreshments in the cafeteria, the evening program was concluded.

St. Margaret's Guild Celebrates Third Year

The regular meeting of St. Margaret's Guild was opened by the president, Mrs. Arthur Watson.

A business discussion followed concerning projects for the year. Groups were formed under the three committee heads.

Miss Lois Rollins was unanimously elected as St. Margaret's member to sit on vestry council.

The Guild celebrated its third birthday with a delightful party arranged by Mrs. J. Ritchie and Mrs. C. James.

Court whist was played and a pleasant evening closed with refreshments served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. Ritchie and Mrs A. Paradis.

Christ Church Contact Club Plans Details Of Bridge, Euchre Party

The business and work meeting of the Contact Club of Christ Church held recently was marked by the largest attendance so far this year.

The president, Florence Lennox, welcomed everyone back and hoped that the attendance record would keep going up.

The treasurer, Mary Fletcher, reported favorably on the recent rummage sale and the sale of books among the members.

Books Needed

Mrs. Lennox relayed a request from the Rev. E. Smith for books to supplement the library of the County Home for the Aged. She was assured of a good response to this worthy project.

The main business of the evening was the checking of all the details of the forthcoming bridge and euchre party. All committees reported that their jobs were completed or in the process of completion.

Whether the members were planning to play at the party or help in its smooth running, everyone was looking forward to a most enjoyable evening.

Before refreshments were served by Carol Smith, Dorothy Rutter and Marjorie Scott, more work on the layettes, under the well organized management of Katherine Roulet, was accomplished.

FRIGATES ON CRUISE

PEARL HARBOR (AP)—Two Canadian frigates arrived here Tuesday on a 35-day training cruise. The Beacon Hill, commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. J. W. McDowall, Victoria, and the Antigonish, Lt.-Cmdr. H. R. Beck, Toronto, will remain here until Thursday. Then they go to Hawaii for seven days.

Mrs. Rodbourne Will Celebrate 95th Birthday

One of the oldest women in the city and still able to read without glasses, Mrs. Jane Rodbourne, 58 Charlotte Street, on Thursday will celebrate her 95th birthday.

In honor of the happy event there will be a family get-together at her daughter-in-law's where she lives. The birthday party will be on Sunday when a grandson in Toronto will be able to be present.

Born in England, Mrs. Rodbourne came to Canada and to Belleville when eight years of age. She has lived here since and clearly recalls when this city had no automobiles, no telephones and no paved roads.

She is a member of Christ Anglican Church and is well-known by members of the congregation. Her husband, the late William Rodbourne, worked in the Wesley Bullen grocery store on Front street for over three decades. He died about ten years ago.

Although a bit hard of hearing, Mrs. Rodbourne, in the words of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. Rodbourne, is "bright as a dollar" and reads anything and everything. From the newspapers she keeps abreast of world events and is able to converse on many varied topics. She reads almost continually but never wears glasses.

She had but one son, Arthur, who died as a young man. A grandson, William Rodbourne, lives in Toronto. There is one great grandchild, age 13.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't plan to reform anyone after marriage

It is all very well to urge a woman or a man, as strenuously as possible, not to marry with the idea of reforming the other person after marriage. But it almost never does any good. For there seems to be something in the makeup of most of us which makes us perfectly sure, in advance of marriage, that our influence, as wife or husband, can correct some outstanding fault in our mates.

A young woman of 25, who was forced to divorce her first husband after "six hard years of trying to hold our marriage together," is hesitating on the brink of a second marriage because of a serious weakness in the possible new husband. Her indecision is heightened by the fact that she has two small children to consider. The fact that she can be indecisive at all, seems to suggest that she must hope marriage will reform him.

The man in the case was "an old boy friend", who entered her life again about a year ago.

"When we were both 16," she writes, "we courted for two years and wanted to marry, but my parents would not permit it, saying we were too young. So we broke up, which caused much grief and pain to both of us. I went to another city to work and got married five months later, but I never lost my love for my first boy friend, who has never married.

"Now, that he has come back into my life, when both of us are 25, he wants to marry me as soon as my divorce becomes final.

"We get along wonderfully most of the time, except for little arguments that don't amount to much, and he's like a father to my children. His only fault is that sometimes he drinks. As long as he leaves liquor alone, there is no sweeter person in the world, but when he drinks he says things that hurt me very much. Then, when he is over his drinking, he tells me he was only joking. But sometimes I wonder.

Some Doubt

"He has never gone out with another woman since we met again, and he sticks closer by me than my first husband ever did. I love him so much that I feel if I lose him I'd have nothing more to live for, and if we ever broke up there will never be another man in my life. The only thing that makes me doubt is the things he says when he's drinking. He often tells me that he doesn't believe I love him as much as he loves me, yet I've tried every possible way to show him that I do. What can I do to convince him, and would I be doing right to marry this man, who has never been married before and does not understand that I did not find love and understanding in my first marriage?"

What this young woman no doubt means when she asks if she would be "doing right" to marry this man is: "Would I be doing the thing that would make me and my children happy if I married him?" And I say to her flatly that, if this man is an habitual drinker, she will find not happiness if she marries him, but dreadful misery. She will, that is, unless before their marriage he can be brought to realize the seriousness of his habit and take steps to break it for good. When a man has a fault that would be a menace to the security and peace of mind of any woman he married, that woman is wildly reckless if she marries him before he has overcome it. To do anything else, to put hope in her ability to reform him after marriage, is utterly mad.

No matter how much this girl believes she loves this man, no matter how deep her conviction that she would have "nothing more to live for" if she lost him, she would soon find that she had far less to live for if, under present circumstances, she became his wife. For to marry a man who habitually drinks, and especially one who is moody and mean when he drinks, is to live in a waking nightmare.

It's nonsense for a woman with two small children to bring up to say that she has "nothing to live for". She has, on the contrary, everything to live for, when in her hands lies the power to make these children's lives, or to ruin them.

The least she can do, if she intends to consider this possible marriage seriously, is to wait long enough to see whether or not the man has any idea of turning himself into the kind of husband she wants, and whether or not he proves it in advance.

MID-WINTER SPECIAL

Peady's Beef Ragout
Fluffy Mashed Potatoes
Spinach or New Cabbage
Mid-Winter Salad (see notes)
White Fruit Cup Coffee

DIRECTIONS

This is especially adaptable for two kinds of cooks: those with a wood or coal heated oven and for the gal with the posh kitchen which boasts time-temperature controlled oven. Of course, all the folks in between can have it too, for we wouldn't discriminate.

The Beef Ragout requires three hours at 300 deg. Fahr.—a slow oven. My sister is a career girl. She made up this dish in the morning before going to the office set the control to turn the oven on at 2:30 p.m. at 300 deg. Fahr. When she came home from work the lovely aroma of the Beef Ragout greeted her at the front door. She says it is as close as she will ever get to possessing a real live cook—and much more economical.

BEEF RAGOUT

To serve five people buy 1 1-4 or 1 1-2 lbs. stewing beef. Ask the butcher to give you a very small piece of beef suet. Render out the suet in the frying pan (or use butter or other fat) and add 1 chopped medium-sized onion and gently saute it. Cut the meat into 1 or 1 1-2-inch pieces and roll it in 1-4 cup flour to which you add 1 teaspoon salt and 1-4 teaspoon pepper. Add the floured meat to the onion and brown it with the onions. Pour over it 1 20-oz. tin canned tomatoes, add 1 teaspoon each sugar and Worcestershire sauce. If frying pan has tight cover and handle is not wooden, cover and bake in frying-pan at 300 deg. Fahr. three hours or turn into baking dish, cover tightly and bake.

Variations of Beef Ragout: If you would like to make this a one-hot dish main course add 2 cups almost tender boiled dried lima beans, and if desired, 1 very finely chopped carrot.

The fluffy mashed potatoes are delicious with the first version—and of course not necessary with the variation.

MID-WINTER SALAD

I wanted to get a word in here about using lemon juice as much as you can all winter to increase your vitamin-C intake. So make the French Dressing for the salad this way: into a jar with tight cover put 1 cup salad oil, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon each salt and sugar, 1-2 teaspoon paprika, and 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 thin slice garlic. Shake well immediately before using. Pour some on salad made of 1 cup each finely chopped outer celery leaves and stalks, shredded cabbage, coarsely chopped head lettuce, 2 tablespoons parsley. Serve on individual plates and garnish with tomato or cucumber slices and a few carrot sticks. We find that if the salads are on individual plates the family enjoys them more, and gobbles them up while the dinner plates are being served and passed.

WHITE FRUIT CUP

About 1 cup shredded pineapple (canned or fresh), sections from 1 large grapefruit, cut free of all membrane, 1 diced or sliced banana, 2 tablespoons juice from green cherries. If you have to make this larger for your crowd add another banana and 1 pared and chopped apple. Be sparing with the sugar or honey for this is sweet enough for most fruit lovers.

SHANNONVILLE

Holy Trinity W. G. Holds Euchre Party

Shannonville — The Women's Guild of Holy Trinity Church, Shannonville, held a successful euchre at Milltown school, on Thursday evening with 18 tables of cards being played. Prizes went to the following ladies: Mrs. J. Brennan, Mrs. Cobey; Mrs. H. Bennett, lone hand; Mrs. M. Little, consolation. Men's: Gerald Stratton, Robert McFarlane; Jack McFarlane consolation; Robert McFarlane lone hands.

Mrs. Vernon Kirkpatrick was the winner of basket of groceries (door prize.)

Several prizes were won, such as lucky chair, table, lucky napkin and lucky cup.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. C. BEECKMAN

And here comes the prospective groom. . .with an important question

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just become engaged to a very charming and well-bred girl who lives in the city near the suburb where I live. I read in your column the other day (I'm having to brush up on my manners and etiquette these days!) that it is most important for the man's mother, and father if possible, to go to welcome their son's fiancee into the family just as soon as possible after he has told them of his engagement. Now here's where I need your advice, and soon. My mother and father died several years ago, and since then my only sister and I have lived with our aunt, my mother's sister, and her husband.

I know that my aunt, who is a wonderful woman and who has been like a mother to us, would be delighted to make this call if you say she could be my mother's "reprsentative". Would this be proper plan for us to make? Should she telephone or write to my fiancee and ask for a convenient time to come to "welcome" her? What do you think about my 19-year-old sister going with her? (You know how sisters are . . . .she's so keen to go!)—Bob.

The perfect plan, dear sir. .. for your devoted aunt to make the welcome-into-the-family call on your financee. And as soon as possible. Best plan is for your aunt to telephone to see when it will be most convenient for your fiancee and her mother. And yes, I think it would be an excellent idea for your sister to go with your aunt, if your aunt really prefers this. However, she may be the type who would like to do the welcoming - into - the - family procedure all by herself. (Congratulations to you, Bob, and 'come again' to my column, whenever we can talk over any question you will let me share.)

Special questions for golden wedding celebration

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My grandparents are to celebrate their golden wedding next month. (1) At an "at home" party, which we would like to plan, what should be served? (2) Which of their daughters should preside at the tea-table, the oldest or the youngest? (3) Who should greet the guests at the door? And who should take the guests' wraps?—J. V.

(1) The basic menu, the simplest menu for an "At Home", consists of: small, dainty sandwiches, with simple fillings (very often these are made of various kinds of bread and are cut in various shapes, some rolled); tea and/or coffee; small cakes or interesting cookies; and perhaps, for nibbling, salted nuts, heated tidbits, mints or other candies, potato chips or popcorn or cheese But most important for the anniversary menu are the two features: the wedding anniversary cake, to be cut by "the bride and groom" as they cut their wedding cake at the original reception. . . . usually a quite handsome and elaborately-iced cake, with the dates (1903-1953) prominent, and the couple's initials; and something cold, in which to drink to the happiness and welfare of "the bride and groom."

(2) To me it would be poor planning to have either daughter preside at the tea-table. . . the daughters should be free to mingle with the guests, greeting, introducing, and making everyone comfortable and happy. Ask several women friends of the family to pour, two for each hour or each half-hour.

(3) Ask some executive and gracious man relative to greet the guests at the door and direct them to the room in which they are to leave their wraps.

MORE EGGS

REGINA (CP) — Nearly 2,000,000 dozen more eggs were sold in 1952 through registered grading stations in Saskatchewan than in 1951. Last year the stations handled 11,388,000 dozen eggs.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Be dainty to win beauty laurels.

With all the money she spends for toiletries, beauty treatments, expensive dry goods, jewelry and what not, a girl cannot stand in the pulchritude chorus unless she is dainty. Cleanliness to the nth degree still tops the list of good-looks requirements. Let's see how the dainty girl gets that way.

Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

We are all judged by appearance.

She's keen on order and grooming as well as cleanliness. She may spend an extraordinary amount of time fighting atmospheric dust, but she thinks the results are worth it. She'll have none of it on her complexion, on her locks, on her fingertips. She carries an appearance of springtime freshness at all hours, whether she is doing the usual chores around the house or participating in the merry evening party.

She loves the smell of soap suds. She loves to soak in the bath for at least ten minutes before she starts scrubbing with the brush. Relaxation takes the knots out of her nervous system, the weariness out of her bones.

She puts her gloves and hankies in boxes that contain sachet powder. She places sachet cushions in the piles of undies in her dresser drawer. Always smells sweet. She doesn't kick off her shoes at night, letting them land where they will; she puts them on trees. Before she wears them she gives them a brisk brushing. Keeping shoes in tip-top form is something that few girls do these days. She brushes her hats as well as her coats, and she never, never has a stray hair on collar or shoulders. There is something unpleasant about stray shafts.

We all are judged by appearance—not by whether our clothes are expensive or bargain pickups, but by grooming. A scrambled hairdo gives a woman a poor rating. Even though she cannot afford a permanent—and every woman can, these days, what with home equipment for waving—she can have her tresses arranged neatly.

Soiled neckware and soiled gloves spoil the picture. If a girl can't have clean ones, she'd better go without them. And over-stuffed purses!

There is something else: lack of clothes pressing. Skirts especially need frequent pressing, as there are often wrinkles and creases at the back. You don't see them, but other people do.

Perfect grooming calls for nothing but an investment of a little time. It's cheap enough, but the rewards are worth it.

STIRLING

W. A. Sponsors Card Party

Stirling — A successful card party, sponsored by Stirling W.I., was held in the community hall last Monday night. The conveners were: Mrs. A. Lake, Mrs. J. Morrison, Mrs. S. McArton and Mrs. C. Pryor. Eight tables of euchre were in play.

Ladies' high prize went to Mrs. S. Kirkey; men's high to Frank Wood; ladies' consolation, Ruth Tullock; men's second was tied for by Mrs. A. Stevenson and H. Rodgers, with Mrs. Stevenson winning the draw.

The lucky chair prize, a set of refrigerator bowls, was won by George Sarles.

Refreshments were served at the close. The prizes were donated by the conveners.

ROSLIN

W. A. Holds Card Party

Roslin — On Wednesday evening a successful card party was held in the parish hall under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary with 20 tables in play. The prize winners for euchre were: Ladies' high score, Mrs. F. Meeks; men's high score, Edward Dawson; low score, H. Sills. Winners for Ninety-two: Ladies' high, Mrs. L. EUROPE'S DEATH

80,000 Homeless

An estimated 80,000 persons were homeless, 30,000 in Britain and 50,000 in Holland. Thousands were believed still missing in the two countries.

But the final accounting will not be known for several weeks—until the last search of submerged homes has been made, all death lists checked and until exposure, injuries and diseases have completed their toll.

The bodies of four more Americans were recovered from their homes on England's east coast today, raising the toll of known U. S. dead to 15. Three others were still missing and presumed lost. No Canadian deaths have been reported.

Along with the desperate race to save persons still trapped in trees, attics, on dikes and other surrounded high places, authorities faced the grim task of rebuilding dikes against the threat of coming high spring tides that might again force waters far inland.

Aid Pours In

But help and offers of aid have poured into the stricken countries from all over the world, along with messages of deepest sympathy.

New flood threats developed Tuesday night in both Britain and Holland. A new break in the dikes was reported at Rommel on the north coast of the twin Dutch islands of Goeree-Overflakke. Seas roared inland through a hole 35 yards wide and five yards deep. Rommel has a population of 2,000.

River Breaks Bank

In Britain, the Ouse river broke its banks in East Anglia. Homes in Watlington and St. Germans were evacuated and fears were expressed that the town of Kings Lynn might be cut off. Many British towns reported that flooded sewers threatened ,a serious outbreak of disease.

A vast rescue force, including ships, planes and men of the U. S., British, French and Canadian armed services moved swiftly to answer frantic pleas of help from flooded Dutch communities.

Rescue efforts were concentrated on the hardest-hit areas of Schouwen-Duiveland and Tholen Islands in Zeeland and Foeree-Overflakkee.

A hastily-organized airlift parachuted tons of food and blankets and other supplies to isolated areas. Fifteen American and British helicopters are being used to carry medicines and more of the wind-milling craft were expected to arrive today.

Converge on Harbor

A motley armada of fishing boats, Royal Dutch Navy minesweepers and patrol vessels and private craft of all descriptions converged on Zierikzee, a harbor town on Schouwen-Duiveland, to pick off people marooned in that area.

Holland's Queen Juliana, who has visited much of the flooded area the last two days, met her husband, Prince Bernhard, early today at Amsterdam's airport. The prince interrupted a visit to the United States, hurrying home to take an active part in rescue operations.

Amid all the trouble ashore, hope was given up Tuesday for the 1,331-ton Swedish steamship Aspo and her crew of 22. The vessel vanished without a trace after sending an SOS from 125 miles off the Danish coast.

Waters Receding

The waters were receding through most of the flooded areas of Britain. But 1,500 firemen moved in with 350 pumping machines in an effort to speed the clearing operation.

At Whitstable, in North Kent, Tuesday night 56 pumpers—each with a capacity of 500 gallons a minute—were able to clear only two square miles.

The British government has declared the disaster a national responsibility, ordering troops and home guardsmen to aid in the rescue work. In London, the Lord Mayor's national flood and tempest fund officially opened with a gift of £10,000 from an anonymous donor on the isle of Jersey.

Police disclosed that the British death toll may prove lower than has been feared. They reported a mixup in the listing of dead and missing on Canvey Island, in the London. Previous reports had said that at least 130 persons died on Canvey, but police said this figure may be cut to as low as 30.

The Belgian ministry of interior scaled down the country's total of known dead from 22 to 14 today. A ministry spokesman said also that five persons still are missing.

SASK. MEMBERS

Mr. Diefenbaker charged that the royal commission "exorbitantly" exaggerated the costs of the Saskatchewan dam and minimized and underestimated its potential economic benefits.

The commission had estimated the cost would be "fabulously higher" than the estimates of government PFRA engineers who favored the project. It had not studied the evidence of those engineers and from the evidence available the commission had weighed only that which was unfavorable.

Point to Point Discussion

The government should not consider itself bound by a report which was contrary to every other report on the project in the past.

Dr. McCusker criticized the commission report point by point. He, too, found it strange that the body did not take advantage of information at the disposal of the PFRA whose engineers were experts on the dam. The findings of the PFRA engineers were backed by prominent U. S. engineers.

As he went down the list of the commission findings, he described some of them as "entirely erroneous" and said the estimates of costs were "away up."

But he could not support the Diefenbaker motion because "I don't intend to precipitate an election by voting want of confidence in the government."

DULLES TRIES

"Let him understand also that the people of these islands are a proud people, conscious of their own destiny. They did not allow the Germans to push them around, nor will they allow anyone else—not even well-meaning friends."

Express Puzzlement

The independent Times expressed puzzlement over Eisenhower's statement in his state of the union address Monday that the U. S. will not honor secret agreements "permitting the enslavement of other peoples."

It said that the only part of the Yalta agreement that could be called secret, for instance, was a clause promising Russia the southern part of Sakhalin Island and the Kurile Islands—then held by Japan.

"As late as September, 1951, the Japanese government declared in a treaty of peace, largely arranged by Mr. Foster Dulles himself, it renounced all claims to these islands and territories," it said.

The Conservative Daily Mail, commenting on the Formosa decision, said "immediately Formosa becomes involved, the cause of the United Nations (in Korea) becomes identified with that of Chiang Kai-shek who is utterly discredited in this country—and in his own."

Women Responsible For Belief Nylons Do Not Wear as Well

REGINA (CP)—A Canadian hosiery manufacturer's representative says that women who buy nylons are responsible for the belief that present-day nylons don't year as well as those sold some years ago.

Patricia Quigley said the reason nylons pop runs more frequently today is because women don't use the correct hose for everyday wear.

"When nylons were first sold during the war, the 15-denier sheer nylon was only a dream in a test tube," said Miss Quigley who is visiting department stores in western Canada.

"Women then wore 51 gauge, 30 denier nylons and they wore much better. Now we're trying to educate women to go back to wearing 30-denier hose for everyday, saving the sheer 15-denier type just for dress-up occasions."

Denier refers to the thickness of thread and gauge to the number of stitches in each square inch.

Canadian hosiery choices do not follow American ones, contrary to other fashion practices. In the United States, women like hosiery with light-colored seams and in shades that tend to coral and orange tones. In Canada women like dark seams and grey beige and taupe shades.

In Vancouver "where it rains," said Miss Quigley, women like dark-colored stockings. On the Prairies and eastern Canada where there is bright sunlight and snow, lighter shades are preferred

A new stocking shade for spring has been designed to blend with the trend to pink hats and gloves It's a pinky blush shade.

Junior Hawks Increase Loop Lead With 12-2 Victory Over Cobourg Jays

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

IN A FOG

Michael J. Rodden, sports scrivener east o' here, is in a tizzy over the senior "B" schedule. The hon. Mike feels the powers-that-be (he even accused this department of being guilty of the heinous crime) that drew the schedule must have been looking at the blonde in the third row back when they selected the dates, etc. They tossed in a robin-robin for the Christmas holiday, which gave the squads extra games at home and away. Mr. Rodden cannot figure it out, and 'tis rumored he has called in a couple of local swamis and a crystal-gazer in an effort to get some order out of the chaos.

Michael has devoted not a few inches of space to the thing but strangely enough he appears to be the only one to worry about the matter. It seems all squads are or were satisfied with the way in which the schedule was drawn up—at least we have heard no squawks from other league stops.

Says Michael: "If any schedule similar to that in operation has ever been tested before the experiment must have been carried out in the old Lower Ottawa Valley league where, according to rumor, they were always carrying out somebody. Something, indeed, must be out of kilter when Belleville, for instance, is called on to meet Kingston 9 times. Peterborough 8, Oshawa 5 and Orillia and Stouffville each four.

"It could be pointed out — and probably will — that the Glen Roys were dealt the joker when they were selected to meet Goodyears on Kingston ice in 5 of 9 engagements. But it had also been arranged that the Oshawa Truckmen would play three of five contests in the Moira River city. So the Belles met the Oshawans three times, broke even at home and were beaten 7 to 2 in the Motor City."

Ho-hum. Not again. We have tried to impress on the mind of the scribe of Roddenville several times that the teams of the eastern section of the group, Kingston, Belleville and Peterborough play one another eight times, four at home and four away, while they play an interlocking series of two at home and away with Orillia, Stouffville and Oshawa of the western division. The odd game, such as the case of the Glens going to Kingston five times is a result of the group round-robin tossed in there to keep the boys busy over the year-end holiday.

If any squawk should be forthcoming, it should emanate from the Glens who drew the Oshawa power plant for their extra game. The Glens would much prefer to cross rapiers with the Goodies. Just for old time's sake, Michael.

We may as well carry on this piece for we're beginning to worry about Michael J's peace of mind. Actually we believe the guy is worrying about his Limestone City hockey pets and their chances in the playoffs.

Don Miguel finds it passing strange that the Glens are on even terms with the Goodyears despite the fact the Tire boys have "outscored" the Glens. Michael goes on to say "this could be an old Belleville custom whereby opponents are lulled into a false state of security."

Michael, m'lad, you never milled truer words. Wait and see!

SHOULD SCORE 200th. THIS SEASON

Gordie Howe should score his 200th. National League goal this season. The big Detroit right winger started the current season with 160 goals scored and had tallied 37 this season in games up to the morning of February 3rd., which brought his goal total to 197. The 1951-52 Hart Trophy winner also stands a good chance of fracturing Maurice Richard's record of 50 goals in one season. Howe is a notoriously slow starter and always garners his biggest goal output towards the close of the season.

CANADIENS AND DETROIT TOPS AT BLANKING FOES

Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings, the two front-running teams in this year's National Hockey League championship race, jointly share the best record in blanking the opposition, up to the morning of January 31. Each team has kept the opposing club scoreless six times. Canadiens have shut out Toronto and Boston once and Detroit and Chicago twice. Only team the Habs haven't been able to keep off the score sheet is New York. Detroit shut out Chicago twice, Canadiens once and Boston three times. The only team the Wings have failed to blank is the New York Rangers.

Mercs Increase Lead to 3 Points With Close 8-7 Win Over Redmen

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a see-saw showdown Tuesday night as the fourth-place Brantford Redmen extended the leading Owen Sound Mercurys to the limit in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game.

The Mercurys won 8-7 after the battling Redmen tied the score three times. The Mercs fired the winning goal with less than two minutes to play.

It was tallied by Roy Leckie. The victory increased the Owen Sound Club's first-place lead over Stratford Indians to three points. The Redmen are still five points behind the third-place Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

Wolves Climb

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group, Sudbury Wolves moved to within two points of clinching first place with a 7-4 victory over the tail-end Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians. The Wolves are 11 points in front of the Sault (Ont.) Greyhounds.

At Owen Sound, the Mercury's winning goal came barely a minute after Arn Dugan's goal deadlocked the score for Brantford for the third time. The Mercurys' other goal scorers were Buck Forslund with two, and Ray McCallum, Bill McComb, Jaydee McArthur, Harry Kazarian and Ralph Hosking.

Dugan and coach Bill Dinning counted two goals each for Brantford. The Redmens other goals were scored by Jack Taylor, Sam Kennedy and Wally Hnatiuk.

At Sudbury, McLenahan scored two of the Wolves' goals with the others going to Barrett, Mestan and McClellan. The Indians' goal-getters were Kerr, Farelli, Baby and Palladino.

FIVE-GAME SUSPENSION

DETROIT (AP)—Frank Gallagher, president of the International Hockey League, said Tuesday night that Ed Calhoun, right wing of the Ft. Wayne team, has been given a five-game suspension for slugging a Cincinnati player, Hal Grigg. The incident occurred Saturday night in a game at Cincinnati.

'Hank', Hull Hit Hat Trick In Easy Four-Point Victory; Score Nine in Two Periods

Fast all-round skating, expert stick handling, coupled with two hat tricks earned by Henry Therrien and Doug Hull conspired to give the Belleville Black Hawks a 12-2 victory over the league trailing Cobourg Jays in the Arena last nght in a scheduled junior "B" tilt. The contest was another four-pointer so Hawks increased their league lead by just that much.

The Hawks opened up the game as Hull sank his first of the evening after one minute and 18 seconds of play. Brooks came through on an assist from Casey five minutes later. Hull cinched the hat trick by parking two more within a minute of play behind the Jays' goaltender, Stu Lingard. Jacklyn and Halstead claimed assists on Hull's second netter and Pete Green and Jacklyn again, got the awards on his third goal. This fiery opening blast left the Jays on the tail end of a 4-0 tally at the close of the first period.

Gilly Was Good

The Hawks upped the lead by five more goals in the second "20". Skating rings around the visitors, Hull and Jacklin teamed up to draw Lingard to the left corner of his net while passing the rubber to Goyer who pounded it into the open corner. A pile up around the Jays' goal resulted in Henry Therrien parking it assisted by Gilmour some two minutes later.

Therrien did a repeat performance half way through the period assisted by Jones. Gilmour rounded off the period by sinking the last two goals and giving the Hawks a 9-0 lead. Jones and Therrien drew assists.

Showed Fight

The last period had more pep than the other two put together. The Jays began showing a little fight when Campell fooled Bobby Green and accounted for the visitors' first tally. Dotzko did it again for Cobourg on a breakaway. However, their chances were smashed as Therrien, Hermiston and Goyer rang up one each before the close of the period.

Belleville was on the sad end of the penalties all the way through. Referee Stan Scrutton of Kingston thumbed Gilmour and Dawe for roughing and Halstead for interference in the first period. Cavanaugh went off for kneeing. Pete Green for tripping and Delbosco for elbowing, all in the second period. Stocco drew 2 hooking penalties in the last. Dotzko followed shortly for elbowing.

The teams:

Belleville — Bob Green, Delbosco, Stocco, Pete Green, Goyer, Hull, Jacklyn, Halstead, Jones Gilmour, Therrien, Brooks, Hermiston, Casey.

Cobourg— Stu Lingard, Simpson, Halford, Dawe, Cavanaugh, Church, Campbell, Stewart, Boswell, Dotzko, Cain, Bowen, Hissin, Pearce, McKeown.

First Period

Belleville — Hull 1.18
Belleville — Brooks (Casey) 6.27
Belleville — Hull (Jacklyn, Halstead) 7.02
Belleville—Hull (P. Green, Jacklyn) 7.39

Penalties — Gilmour, Dawe, Halstead.

Second Period

Belleville — Goyer (Hull, Jacklyn) 6.40

Kramer Wins

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Big Jack Kramer utilized two service breaks to whip Frank Sedgman of Australia in straight sets 11-9, 10-8 Tuesday night.

The triumph was the American star's ninth against 12 defeats in their cross-country professional tennis tour.

Ken McGregor of Australia tripped little Pancho Segura of Ecuador 6-4, 0-6, 6-1.

McNAB SUCCEEDS PRATT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Owner-manager Kenney MacKenzie fired himself Tuesday as coach of New Westminster Royals. MacKenzie, who had been coaching his Western Hockey League club since Walter (Babe) Pratt left Jan. 19, said he had appointed forward Max McNab to fill the job.

St. Kitts Teeps Give Fair Warning With 2-1 Overtime Win Over Marlies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Those same St. Catharines Teepees who surprised everyone last spring by waltzing through to the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A finals appear to be warming up for this year's stretch drive.

There was no holding them Tuesday night as they moved into sole possession of fourth place in the nine-team loop with a 2-1 overtime decision over the league-leading Toronto Marlboros.

Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts, mired deep in the cellar, achieved a 6-5 victory against sixth-place Oshawa Generals.

Down in Quebec, Windsor Royals dropped their fourth interlocking schedule game with a Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association club when they bowed 3-2 before the last-place Montreal Royals. In one other JAHA clash, Montreal Canadiens widened their lead over the runner-up Quebec Citadelles with a 6-1 victory.

Brian Cullen came through for St. Catharines in overtime after Parker MacDonald had pulled Marlies into a tie late in the game. Pete Kamula scored the Teepees' other goal.

Ken Collins and Bob Ford led Kitchener with a pair of goals each while Graham Joyce and Marc Boileau added singletons. Bob Attersley, Don McIntosh, Roger Maisonneuve, Bob Mader and Armstrong tallied for Oshawa.

Claude Beaupre notched two for Montreal Royals and Sandy Morrison added the third. Joe Zorica and Bobby Brown garnered the Spitfire goals.

Les Lilley and Phil Goyette led Montreal Canadiens attack with two goals each. Claude Prevost and Yvon Charles fired the others. Camille Henri netted Quebec's marker.

Guelph Biltmores move into Barrie tonight for the lone game in the OHA loop.

In Quebec, Montreal Royals play at Three Rivers.

'Le Gros Bill' Tied For Scoring Lead

MONTREAL (CP)—Big Jean Beliveau, starry centre of Quebec Aces, and Stan Smrke, Chicoutimi Sagueneens marksman, are deadlocked for the lead in the Quebec Senior Hockey League scoring race.

Gros Bill has fired 35 goals and assisted in 30 others for 65 points. Smirke has 27 goals and 38 assists.

Andre Corriveau of Valleyfield Braves and Sherman White of Chicoutimi have 64 points each. Corriveau has 27 goals and 37 assists and White a 21-43 count.

Fifth are Ralph Buchanan of Chicoutimi and Tod Campeau of Sherbrooke, tied with 58 points.

Rollie Hebert's Chicoutimi Sagueneens have a strong hold on first place in the league with a five-point edge on Montreal Royals. Ottawa is third with 49.

Hornets Sting Cleveland 3-0; Take Over Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pittsburgh Hornets Tuesday night regained possession of first place in the American Hockey League, blanking Cleveland Barons 3-0. In another game Providence Reds edged St. Louis Flyers 7-6 in overtime.

At Cleveland, it was the second straight shutout for Pittsburgh goalie Gil Mayer. The Hornets are a point ahead of Cleveland.

After a scoreless first period, John McLelland put the Hornets ahead in the second. Chuck Lumsden's and Andy Barbe's third-period markers completed the scoring.

Defenceman Bert Bourassa's overtime goal gave the Reds their victory, and advanced them into fifth spot.

Pete Kapusta fired two goals for the winners. Other Providence marksmen were Zellio Toppazzini, Ray Laplante, Al Baccari and Johnny Denis.

Pete Conacher, Gerald Ehman, Jake Forbes, Buddy Boone and Motto McLean accounted for the St. Louis goals.

'Shut Up Or Pay Up' Says Campbell; 'Jolly Jawn' Adams Nicked $500 Fine

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If National Hockey League referees happen to become the loneliest men in sport, they can place part of the blame on the loop president, Clarence Campbell.

Not that the fans have ever ignored the little men in white, but it has become increasingly expensive of late for club executives to mix with the whistle tooters.

Jack Adams, general manager of Detroit Red Wings, is the latest to feel President Campbell's distaste for persons molesting his officials. The trigger-tempered "Jolly Jack" was nicked $500 Tuesday for his Jan. 18 run-in with referee Red Storey.

Adams is said to have "accosted referee Red Storey in a corridor and entered his dressing room" at Olympia Stadium, home of the Red Wings, between periods of the Jan. 18 Montreal-Detroit game.

A few weeks ago, Bill Tobin, general manager of the Chicago Black Hawks, was also fined $500 for a similar violation. Both Adams and Tobin are league governors.

Campbell said it was decided at the league's annual meeting last June that no useful purpose was ever accomplished by team officials discussing game incidents with referees during a game. Decision was reached then to ban them from entering the referee's dressing room on the day of a game without permission.

Campbell said that in this instance it was contended that the referee "had invited Adams into his dressing room." This was later denied by Storey.

However, the league prexy was firm in pointing out that the purpose of the revised regulation governing the actions of team officials on the day of a game was to eliminate such situations as had arisen from the Adams — Storey squabble. He said any further breach of the rule would bring about more serious punishment.

While the front office boys engage in verbal duels, the players will have it easy tonight, their first open Wednesday since the initial week of the schedule. Thursday night, however, all six clubs see action.

Toronto Maple Leafs attempt to hold their newly-acquired third place when they move into Montreal for a clash with the runner-up Canadiens. Meanwhile, Detroit entertains New York Rangers in a first-meets-last battle.

Chicago, two points back of Toronto, plays at Boston against the fifth-place Bruins.

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) —Report of a grass fire in the middle of winter was found quite correct by Kitchener firemen. Waste products from a factory were being burned when the nearby grass caught fire.

Dufferin Results

TORONTO (CP)—Castle Lee, owned by the H. and B. Stable of Norwich, Ont., and driven by Bill Harvey, registered a handy double heat victory in the class A trot, featured harness event Tuesday at Dufferin Park.

Maxine's Rose, owned by Floyd Milton of Hamburg, N.Y., and Merrie Feet, owned by T. Lennox of Spencerville, Ont., were the heat winners in the fifth and secondary event.

Rangers May be Dungeon-Dwellers, But They Rate Respect of Goalies

By JIM BASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Lynn Patrick of Boston Bruins skated on sticky ice a few weeks ago when he dubbed the New York Ranger forward wall of Paul Ronty, Wally Hergesheimer and Neil Strain the "scavenger" line of the National Hockey League.

Lynn later amended that to read: "The best scavengers in the league" and he couldn't be farther offside.

Their scoring output is some shucks considering the last-place position of the Blue Shirts and Lynn will get plenty of argument from guys who should know—Vezina Trophy contenders such as Detroit's Terry Sawchuk, Montreal's Gerry McNeil, Boston's Sugar Jim Henry and Toronto's Harry Lumley.

The two leading contenders for the best goals-against average have reason to respect the trio. For the "scavengers" have had a highly disruptive effect on the Vezina race.

Sheer Murder

"It's sheer murder at times," says Sawchuk, winner of the Vezina last year and leading the race this season. "Just when you're on top of the world, the Rangers come up with a bucketful of goals. They can make life pretty miserable."

And McNeil, running second to Sawchuk adds:

"Those Rangers act like world-beaters at times—and when you're least expecting it. That line of Ronty, Hergesheimer and Strain is one of the best in the league. Scavengers? Nuts!"

It was an obvious reference to Jan. 11 when Rangers jumped on McNeil for a 7-0 triumph and practically left him in the cold in the trophy race. The murders? Why, the "scavenger" line with four goals and an assist.

Two weeks later, Sawchuk was walloped 8-2 and that put McNeil back in the running. You guessed it, the scavengers contributed four goals and two assists.

Today, Hergesheimer is fourth in the individual scoring race with 21 goals and 24 assists for 45 points in 48 games. Ronty is fifth with 39-points and Strain, a Johnny-come-lately in the big time, has 22 points in 32 games.

Lumley and Henry haven't had too much trouble with the Rangers but they have lots of respect for the Blue Shirts.

Lumley, who came to the Leafs this year in an off-season trade, says he's "out of the Vezina race because I'm so far behind Sawchuk." He adds, however:

"That New York so-called Scavenger line can be rough. . . It just so happens that I haven't been bothered by them."

Henry echoes Lumley's words.

It wasn't so long ago that Sawchuk was considered a shoo-in for the trophy. Now things aren't too rosy for the Winnipeg-born net-minder.

To date, Sawchuk, who won the trophy last season with an average of 1.94 goals a game over the 70-game route, leads with 2.05 goals a game in 41 games. McNeil is next with 2.13. Then comes Henry with 2.46 and Lumley with 2.48.

Sawchuk isn't too confident about the margin: "It was going fine until that night when the Rangers blitzed me. Now I've got McNeil on my tail. I think he is going to make it tough but I think I can take him."

Comments McNeil:

"With the protection I'm getting from the team I think I can overtake Sawchuk. It's just a matter of time. We still have a lot of games to play, too."

Lumley is more concerned about crease-crashers. He has a sort of standing threat that he'll sock anyone who crashes in on his nets. He was socking so many early in the season—and getting penalties—that now Leaf officials fine him when he gets a penalty.

Harry didn't say what the fine is. But he's holding his punches these days.

Gavilan-Davey Bout 'Mis-Match' According to Gotham's 'Wise Guys'

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—It is difficult to recall when there was such a sharp diversity of opinion about the worth of an impending prize-fight as there is about the Kid Gavilan-Chuck Davey welterweight championship to be fought at Chicago a week from tonight.

Out in Chicago they obviously expect it to be one of the greatest events since The Fire. The word is that Chicago Stadium will be packed to the limits of its standing room to watch Davey, the 26-year-old sensation from Michigan State, fight the first 15-rounder of his career against the crafty and able champion from Cuba.

That's how it is in Chicago. In this city, which once was widely known as the U. S. boxing capital, the fight is regarded as a bad mismatch, a serious mistake on the part of Davey's handlers, and up to this point almost nothing has appeared about it on the sports pages.

"Believe me," one New York fight figure said, "it ain't my business to knock boxing. Its' been my bread and butter a long time. But if they had put this fight on in the Garden—which they wouldn't have—I would say the same thing. Davey ain't got any business yet in the same ring with a fellow like Gavilan.

"If the Kid wants to—and of course you never know—he'll cut that boy up terrible and make them stop it before halfway."

"If you want to know what I think, I don't think this fight would have been made if it wasn't for television. All those millions have seen Davey in his biggest fights and they think he's a world beater. They don't see his faults the way we fellows in the business do. They'll see them when Gavilan goes to work on him."

The man with such decided views, one of the big names, preferred to remain anonymous as he wants no feud with Chicago fans. Neither did another who knows more than a little about fight odds when asked what he thought of the fact that Gavilan currently was quoted at less than 2 to 1 over his young challenger.

"A wonderful touch for the Chicago books," he said enviously. "All that fresh country money. If it was here the odds would be about 8-1 and no action."

Galt's McBurney Tops Junior Scoring Race

TORONTO (CP)—Jim McBurney, flashy left-winger with Galt Black Hawks, continues as top man in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring race for the third successive week.

Statistics released by the OHA, including games of Feb. 1, show McBurney played 46 games and marked up 54 goals and 26 assists for 80 points.

Bob Attersley of Oshawa Generals is holding second place for the third week in a row with 36 goals and 41 assists for 77 points in 47 games. Orv Tessier of Barrie Flyers, formerly of Kitchener Greenshirts, is third with 73 points.

Toronto Marlboros' net-minders —Johnny Albani and John Henderson—remain top goal-tenders. Albani has allowed three goals in each of three games he played for a 1.0 average. Henderson has a 2.37 average for 43 games played. Dennis Riggin of Windsor Spitfires holds third place with a 2.97 average in 43 games.

Three Que. Women's Teams Victors 1st Round International Bonspiel

By KEN STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—The 40th international bonspiel reached the half-way point today as teams in the Chateau International Trophy and Omega International Trophy competitions swung into quarter-final games.

Rinks knocked out of top competition in earlier rounds continue playing in lesser competitions—the Francois Jobin International Gold Cup, Holt Renfrew International Trophy, and the Val d'Or Golden Valley Trophy.

Winners of the first three sections who reach the quarter-finals automatically qualify for entry and competition in the top event of the 'spiel — the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy. Losers in this event drop into competitions for the Cite de Quebec Cup and the International Goodwill Shield.

Three women's teams from the Quebec district, playing this year for the first time in the history of the 40-year-old 'spiel, played and won their first games against veteran male curlers.

Wins Over Men

Including Tuesday night's games, the women have won four and lost three games against the men. The latest winner was Miss M. Dumas' Etchemin quartet, who defeated Les Carpenter's Quebec Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans quartet, 8-6.

O. R. Jackman's Granby, Que., quartet smashed Jack Currie's Quebec Curling Club aggregation 19-2 Tuesday in an eight-end—the first eight-end scored to date in the 'spiel.

The eight-end was scored in the fifth, with seven rocks in the house. Jackman scored on a cold draw with his last stone.

In the Omega International event's second round, D. Aboud's Smiths Falls rink defeated Quebec Winter Club, A. Dussault, 9-7. F. T. Julian's Woodstock, Ont., rink lost to Bathurst, N.B., L. A. Archibald, 5-4.

In the Omega third round, S. Wilson's Sudbury rink was defeated 7-5 by a Campbellton, N.B., rink, Dr. R. C. Ric.

In the Chateau International third round, O. Bigford's Westport, Ont., four defeated F. D. Tweedie, Edmundston, N.B., 14-6.

G. Von Zuban's Sudbury rink swamped a Nashua, N.H., four, 13-3 in the first round of the Francois Jobin International Gold Cup. A. Lafrance's North Bay crew lost to Quebec Jacques Cartier, C. E. Emond, 11-7.

V. A. Selkirk's Peterborough four defeated Montreal St. George, G.K. Hodges, 13-10 in the first round of the Holt Renfrew Trophy. H. Wood's Lindsay rink defeated Quebec C.C., Dr. A. D. Beaudin, 10-5. F. T. Julian's Woodstock, Ont., quartet downed C. A. Birge, Toronto Granite, 10-3.

M. Stonehouse of Ottawa Glebe scored a 10-8 victory over J. P. Ellwood, Smiths Falls. Mrs. A. F. Muth, Quebec Victoria, knocked out A. Hartman, Midland, 14-3.

FIRE IN LEGION BLDG.

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Damage estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000 was caused Tuesday by a fire in the Canadian Legion building. Extensive damage was done to the third floor.

Marmora Shares TVL Section Lead

Marmora—The leadership of the northern section of the Trent Valley League is now shared by Marmora with Campbellford as a result of the formers 4-2 win over the erstwhile leaders on their home ice on Monday evening.

Played on fine ice before the largest crowd of the season a fast close game was witnessed in which the goal tenders gave a fine display. Each team indulged in fast ruanes that gave the goalies a warm session.

Wilson opened the scoring for Campbellford after 14 minutes of play on an assist from Free. Unassisted Smith tied the score just before the period closed.

The second period was scoreless. Leonard broke the tie after 45 seconds of play in the third to be soon followed by Doran on assists from K. Trumble and Lavender. Herrington netted for the visitors on Blake's assist.

Marmora got their fourth and final goal at 16.35 in the period E. Trumble registering on a pass from his brother Ken. The teams shared 12 penalties for minor infractions.

Campbellford: Goal Nelson; defence Free, Baker; centre Reid; wings Simpson, Jeffs; alternates. Blake, Herrington, Wilson, Eady Payne, Cole, Pace, Taylor, spare goalie West.

Marmora: Goal Killian; defence Doyle, E. Trumble; centre Doran; wings Darrah, K. Trumble; alternates, Jones, Maynes, Smith, Forestell, Mantle, Gray, Leonard, Lavender, spare goalie, C. Trumble.

Referees: C. Puffer, Norwood; H. Hunter, Havelock.

Kramer May 'Buy Football'

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Pro tennis star Jack Kramer is ready and willing to step into professional football as an owner.

Kramer, touring the country with Australian net ace Frank Sedgman, said in Pittsburgh Tuesday night he was 'very much interested" in purchasing the franchise of the San Francisco 49'ers.

This development came after League Commissioner Bert Bell said he had talked with Kramer's representative, Frank O'Gara, about the possibility of buying the franchise from its present owners, Anthony and iVctor Morabito.

Antaony and iVctor Morabito. he wanted to sell the team because his doctor had advised him to get out of football, following a heart attack.

FRANKFORD

Pt. Anne Edges Frankford 7-6

FRANKFORD. — Frankford Lions Hockey Team is really in a rut nowadays, and unfortunately for Frankford, it isn't a winning rut. Point Anne Cementmen handed Frankford their third consecutive set-back Monday night in Frankford, edging the locals by a 7-6 score. Although the hockey was not the best seen in Frankford to date, it was certainly much the best of the three games with Point Anne this winter. Previously short-handed for games in Frankford the Cementmen brought along a full crew Monday night, and showed what they could do with a full team. It was their first win of the season, and a well-deserved one at that.

The hockey was very clean all the way, with only two minor fines apiece being levied. Referees Carson and Aquinq did a fine job calling the plays.

Frankford lost the game in the first period, as the Pointers scored four times, Hull, from Strachan and Goyer, Strachan from Hull and Bradshaw, L. Maracle from E. Maracle and Locue, and L. Maracle again from E. Maracle.

Frankford got their first goal of the game forty-five seconds after the drop of the puck in the second game Adams from Cooke. E. Maracle came back to score for the Point Anne squad, with L. Maracle getting an assist. E. Maracle scored another solo effort before Frankford got another, Adams teaming up with Rankin and Foster.

The third period was a different story, as Frankford really came to life, scoring four times. Carey notched one from Watson, Sheppard from Rankin, Stephens from Carey, Adams from Cooke. Locue scored what proved to be the winning goal, with E. Maracle getting the assist.

Teams — Point Anne: goal Twa; defence Tinney and Dennitt, centre, R. Hull; wings, Bradshaw and Strachan; alternates: E. Maracle, Branigan, O'Brien, Goyer, Whalen, L. Maracle, Anderson, Locue, Sedore.

Frankford: Goal, Foshay; defence, Bone, Pukancik; centre, Stephens; wings, Adams, Carey; alternates: Cooke, Foster, Reid, Moran, Rankin, Farmer, Watson, Sheppard.

Wings Whip Studes

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, using a rookie goalie, overwhelmed the University of Michigan 11-4 in an exhibition game Tuesday night.

Ross Wilson subbed for Wings' ace goalie Terry Sawchuk. The collegians kept Wilson fairly busy with a total of 33 saves but he found time to smoke a cigar while tending goal in the final period.

CHAPTER VII

A scrubbed-looking waitress was setting the tables. She glanced up and gave me a steady, incurious look, then went on about her task. I smiled and approached her.

"Scrambled eggs, bacon, toast and coffee," I said, and sat down.

"I'm sorry, sir, you'll have to wait," she said. "The grits ain't ready yet."

"I don't want grits," I said.

She gave me a strange look, "Don't you want your grits this morning?"

"No grits," I said, and she had given me an idea of the cosmopolitan quality of Hydetown. "Just scrambled eggs and bacon, if you can manage it."

"Sure," she said, "I can get that for you right away."

While I ate breakfast the hotel began to stir. Before I had finished, three other early morning risers came in for breakfast. I paid my check and carried my bag to the lobby.

An old man was behind the railing now, chewing a toothpick. Although he had not been among the breakfasters in the dining room, he had apparently had his grits. I put my bag down and said, "How about a room?"

"How long you aim to stay?"

"Just overnight, I think."

He nodded. "We're pretty busy. All filled up this week for the big shindig. But I got a room for tonight. Sign here."

He pushed the register toward me and said as I signed my name, "You only going to use one bed, ain't you?"

"Yes." My eyebrows went up at that.

"Three beds in the room," he said. "Sometimes you get these truckers late at night. One will sign up and the others sneak in somehow. That will be two fifty." As I reached for my wallet he glanced at my signature and said, "I bet you're the fellow wrote that book about Willie Warburton."

"That's right." I said.

"Thought it was the name," he went on. "I knew Willie Warburton when he was a boy. I always had my money on Willie."

"That so?" I said, and added tentatively, "I think he'll win."

"That he will," the old man said. "He sure will. I got my money on him this time too."

It was nearly noon when I awakened. I looked for the room telephone, to call John Mills, but there was none, so I shaved and dressed and went down to the lobby. I crossed to the telephone booth and picked up the directory and as I was looking up the number a rasping voice said, "I guess you're Mr. Roy Mason."

I turned. A lean man with gray hair and a leathery brown skin was looking me over. Spectacles were pinched on a long, thin nose, and his black bow tie and dark suit gave him a deaconish air.

"I'm Melvin Fisher," he said. "I operate this hotel."

I had not connected the name of the Fisher Arms Hotel with Melvin Fisher. I said, "Oh, yes. Mayor Fisher, isn't it?"

"That's right." His thin lips drew back and showed his teeth enough to indicate a smile. "So you're the fellow who wrote that book, Mr. Mason."

"Yes, Mr. Fisher."

"It's quite a book," he said. "Yes, sir, quite a book. Kind of long on talk and lean on facts, ain't it?"

"Is it?"

"But it was mighty good reading," he went on, "Yes, sir, I guess everybody in town expects to see Willie Warburton come galloping into town on a white horse Wednesday, waving a big shiny sword." The tight lips drew up again in a smile. I did not like his smile. "I guess he won't be riding a horse though," Melvin Fisher said. "Will he?"

"It depends on what sort of transportation is available in this town, Mr. Fisher," I said.

Melvin Fisher chuckled. "I get it," he said. "Yes, sir, we're a horse-and-buggy town, all right. We're kind of all hippologists here, too."

That caught me between the eyes; they were all kicking that one lame paragraph around. But Fisher continued, "I hear they're calling him the Great Hippologist these days."

So it was already in McDonald's column, and the column was available even in Hydetown, population 3220.

"But I see you're busy," Melvin Fisher said. "I won't bother you any more, Mr. Mason. But welcome to Hydetown, and you tell Willie it will be a big day Wednesday. Yes sir, a big day."

He walked away, still chuckling and as I stepped into the telephone booth I saw that everyone in the lobby was looking at me, the fellow that wrote that book. I slammed the door shut and gave John Mills number to the operator.

Trenton Flyers Defeat Moiras 54-34 In First Game Basketball Playoffs

Proving the fact that seasonal play means little in the decisive playoff, Trenton RCAF 'Blues' last night blasted off with all jets to smother the high-flying Belleville Moira's 54-34. The local five did not look like the basketball artists that they are, and dropped their second decision in 17 games played this year.

Big gun for the fly boys was Big "Easy Now" McLeod, who not only netted 25 of the Trent's points, but also put in a full game of floor-generalship.

Never Looked Back

The boys in blue took over from the first whistle and once in command refused to coast for a second. The Moiras never quite got organized and their big scorers, Batchelor, Soules and Muirhead, couldn't find the mark. Time and time again a Belleville rush would end with the ball skittering around the rim and finally dropping into eager RCAF hands.

The first half ended with the Moiras on the short end of a 29-18 count. They started to show some spirit and drive at the start of the second half, but ran out of steam as Trenton's man-to-man defence settled in on them. From then on the issue was never in doubt, it was just a case of what the 'spread' would be.

Positional play appeared to be a major factor in the airmen's favor, despite the fact that they are more accustomed to playing on the larger and roomier Air Force gym floor. At times some of the Moiras looked like they were playing their first game on the cramped Prince Edward gym boards.

The Belleville five will have to come through with a much better brand of ball if they are to get past these determined RCAF basketballers. Those who have followed them over the season know full well that they can, and are looking forward to Thursday night when these two teams meet again, for they feel sure that the Moiras will come through with their old mid-season style and pick up all the marbles.

Trenton RCAF Blues — McLeod (25), O'Hara (7), Lehay (8), McLeod (9), Wade (4), Campbell (1) Hearnden, Blythe, Baxter.

Belleville Moiras — Pappas (9), Muirhead (3), Soules (8), Batchelor (4), Dowsett (3), Spafford (1), Hayman (1), Gerow (4), Lockyer (1), Massey.

Sport in Brief

NEW YORK (AP)—Rocky Marciano will defend his world heavyweight title against ex-champion Jersey Joe Walcott Friday, April 10, at Chicago Stadium in a 15-round rematch that will be seen on home television.

Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, made the announcement Tuesday night after a conference with Angelo Malandra, lawyer for ailing Felix Bocchicchio, manager of the 39-year-old Walcott. Each fighter will get 30 per cent. There will be no rematch agreement.

"I think the bout should draw over a million dollars, counting television," said Norris. "We will ask the Illinois athletic commission to let us set a $50 top. The house will be scaled at $858,000 with a capacity of 26,000 including standing room.

"We have not signed a TV deal yet but we have had several preliminary conferences. The bout will be seen on home TV."

DETROIT (AP)—A net profit of $114,000 for the 1952 season was announced Tuesday by owners of Detroit Lions, champions of the National Football League. Edwin J. Anderson, re-elected as president of the Detroit Football Co., said at a stockholders meeting the company still was $42,726 short of off-setting losses incurred from 1948 to 1950.

AT THE BELLE—The backstage romance between Stewart Granger and Eleanor Parker in "Scaramouche," starting today is both tender and torrid. Granger enacts the title role of Rafael Sabitin's romantic adventurer, with Miss Parker cast as the temperamental leading lady of an 18th Century theatrical troupe. Also starred is Janet Leigh, Mel Ferrer. A Tom & Jerry Cartoon precedes the feature attraction.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, FEB. 5, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Most work interests, industries, merchandizing, small shops under fresh friendly rays today. Rather favorable for business matters than for personal gains.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Worrying won't mend. Be practical. No really conflicting vibrations. Well handled effort can advance. Sagacious moves will help smoothen progress.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Many magic hours before you! What to do is your responsibility. Promote sound propositions with a will to win; expect good results.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—First, fully realize what benefits attainable are good for you. A too conservative attitude can mar progress. You are smart, can attain.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Being calm, realistic, and shelving egoism, you in work-a-day or any jobs can make appreciable headway with dignity. Don't be gullible, susceptible to flattery.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Planetary aspects on upgrade; several auspicious hours ahead for making gains in favored work, propositions. Give sound thought to business contracts.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—This a.m. highly favors research, planning schedules, and tending to minor duties. Heart interests can take their place later. In all, should be a good day.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Some unusual matters, unexpected advantages (perhaps from friends, relations) to aid you to further your interests. An emergency may arise, but never be upset.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Always add to your resources by right attitude in early hours. Don't make up your mind too quickly. Decision can bring fine returns.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—New ideas, modern exposition have green light with wise restrictions. Sane aggressiveness original tries among top-rank.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—May have to curb enthusiasm that you won't be tempted to go too far out on that tempting limb. Think well and long before acting.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—More favorable in part for business, civic undertakings, some personal activities. You can accomplish if you avoid tackling things in hit-or-miss fashion.

YOU BORN TODAY: possess discretion and deep sympathy; fine intuition. Disappointments and unappreciative people seldom embitter or prevent you from overall high ambitions. The well developed Aquarian can reach great heights. Study, have grit, and you will win.

Birthdate of: Christopher Marlowe, Elizabethan genius; Geo. J. Gould, financier.

Brief on Income Tax Recommends Number of Changes

OTTAWA (CP)—Income taxes are being charged where they shouldn't be charged, a joint committee of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants and the Canadian Bar Association said today.

The committee made its representations to Finance Minister Abbott and Revenue Minister McCann

It said the act, and the government's assessing policy, are "upsetting long-established ways of doing business and causing great concern and even alarm among both large and small business firms."

"Sound accounting principles are not being followed in computing many cases, taxes are being exacted more than the true profits for the taxation year."

Example Given

Spokesman for the chartered accountants gave an example. He said distributors of dairy products have to pay tax on receipts from milk tickets sold at the year's end, without any deduction being allowed for the cost of the milk which has to be supplied for the tickets in the following year.

As a result, he stated, many companies "find it necessary to change policies which are perfectly sound from a business point of view so as not to pay tax on unearned profits.

"One large company went as far as to stop selling milk tickets in the last week of 1952, to the annoyance of its customers and its drivers.

Companies in other lines of business have given up the practice of charging deposits on containers and are prepared to take the resulting loss rather than pay tax on deposits which are refundable.

"This procedure of taxing business on their receipts rather than on their profits affects businesses of almost every kind."

Clem L. King and Melville Pierce of Toronto and Frank L. Coffey of Montreal represented the chartered accountants, and Stuart Thom, Toronto, and Palmer Howard, Montreal, the bar association.

They said a wife is penalized if she is employed by her husband or carries on a business with him.

Want Broader Application

They asked a broader application of income tax relief for payments towards retirement pensions, so as "to encourage more citizens to provide for their old age out of earnings."

Until recently, said the brief, the purchaser of a bond was taxed only on the interest accrued after the date of purchase. However:

"A short while ago the tax department began taxing purchasers of bonds on the full amount of the interest coupon." The deputation recommended that the tax be apportioned between sellers and purchasers of the bond, as formerly.

The ministers were asked for a modification of the present rule which restricts capital cost allowances to the aggregate of depreciation allowances shown in its accounts. The effect of this requirement was to place a premium on unsound accounting practices by making it advantageous to claim higher depreciation allowances than are justified in fact.

Confectioner Celebrates 25 Years of Business

Stirling—Citizens of Stirling and district joined in extending congratulations to J. S. Whitehead, local confectioner, who last Monday observed the completion of 25 years in business here.

Over 700 Treated

The occasion was marked by the free distribution of soft drinks, ice cream cones and novelties and over 700 friends and customers were treated by Mr. Whitehead and his staff.

Several congratulatory messages were also received from wholesale firms and others.

Coming here from his native town of Campbellford, Mr. Whitehead was employed by the late Thomas Cranston for a time before purchasing the business in 1927. By strict attention to duty, and hard work, Mr. Whitehead developed his business until today it probably is the best known in the surrounding district. "Joe's" as it is commonly known, is the general meeting place of the younger folk of the village and district and from morning until late at night it is one of the most popular "spots" in town.

In addition to his business, Mr. Whitehead is interested in community affairs and for some four years served as village councillor. His only son, Glen, now shares in the responsibility of the business, while other members of the staff include Mrs. D. Ackers and Mrs. K. Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacConnell and Mr. and Mrs. Barry Brawley and Susan, of Brighton, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Mason and Mrs. Edith Sager of Belleville, were guests on Sunday of Mrs. C. A. MacConnell and Mrs. Lillian Laird, her daughter, who is staying with her during her illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Meiklejohn of Kingston, visited friends in Stirling last Sunday.

Mrs. Vivian Fallis and Mrs. W. Wannamaker of Toronto, were recent guests of the latter's mother, Mrs. Rebecca Sine.

Mrs. A. V. Greenley has returned home after spending a week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Don Haggerty in Syracuse, N.Y.

Mrs. Howard Millsom, Mrs. Bert Stirland and Mrs. Arthur Edwards of Toronto, spent a couple of days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Morton.

Mr. R. W. Meiklejohn has returned home from Kingston General Hospital where he had been undergoing treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Cooke and girls were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole, Thurlow.

Mrs. William C. West has returned home from Belleville General Hospital where she underwent an operation.

The Baby Band of St. Paul's United Church remitted $32.86 to the treasurer of Belleville presbyterial for the year 1952. The Baby Band has 34 life members and 39 annual members, 4 members graduated to the Mission Band and 12 members moved away. Birthday cards were sent to each member. Mrs. Sid Demorest and Mrs. Harold West are the leaders of this organization.

MARSH HILL

Members Evergreen S. S. Organize 'Hastings Stars Class'

Marsh Hill — The members of Evergreen Sunday School class of Marsh Hill church met recently at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Grace Bartindale, Oak Lake, and organized a teenagers' group under the new name "The Hustling Stars". Miss Barbara Brown was chosen president and Douglas Detlor as secretary.

The group is to meet the first and third Wednesday of each month.

Ralph Parks invited the group to his home for the next meeting. After the meeting closed with a sing-song skating was enjoyed and Mrs. Bartindale served refreshments.

The Hustling Stars met for their first meeting Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Parks, with the president, Miss Barbara Brown presiding. During the business Raymond Ross invited the group to his home for their next meeting with Gilbert Brenton and Elwood Culbertson as program conveners.

The following program had been prepared by Barbara Brown. Raymond Coniglio read the Scripture lesson, "The Ten Commandments," followed by prayer. A reading was given by Gilbert Brenton, "Live Day by Day"; a cornet solo, "It Is No Secret," by Douglas Detlor; Raymond Ross gave a reading, "My Calvary." Barbara Brown read an interesting story, "The Hills."

After the meeting closed Mrs. Parks served refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Tanner were supper guests Thursday night of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Bateman, of Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hollinger and Mrs. Berson Mitts attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Harry Vanderwater of Moira, Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hollinger were supper guests Saturday night of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Pollock, of Wellman's.

Mr. and Mrs. Berson Mitts and Lois were supper guests on Saturday night of Mr. and Mrs. G. Ashley, of West Huntingdon.

A number of children from here are attending the "Children's Mission," which is being held this week at Foxboro under the leadership of Mrs. Giffin.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moon, of Frankford, were Sunday evening callers of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Finkle.

Given 15 Years

TORONTO (CP)—Peter Siminow, Russian Army veteran, was sentenced Tuesday to 15 years in penitentiary when convicted of manslaughter in the death of Mrs. Helen Szalapata Nov. 22 last.

Siminow, 39, who asked to be hanged "as soon as possible' while testifying he struck the woman on the head with an ax, was originally charged with murder.

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer said Siminow was under the influence of liquor when he struck the woman with whom he had been living for three years.

Hamilton Men Denied Appeal On Extradition

TORONTO (CP)—Two Hamilton men charged with murder in the death Dec. 9 of a Buffalo jeweller were denied Tuesday an appeal against an extradition order granted Jan. 17.

Maurice O'Dell, 27, and Walter Griffin, 26, indicted by a Buffalo grand jury following the death of Donald F. Hurd, appealed for a writ of Habeas Corpus.

Buffalo police said the pair held up and shot Hurd as he stood behind his desk in the store.

A third man, Ralph J. Grubisch, about 30 and a native of Windsor, is sought by police in connection with the shooting and $40,000 robbery.

John G. White, counsel for Griffin, argued that the Ashburton treaty of 1842 between Canada and the United States is void because Canada has since attained sovereign statehood.

Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder rejected Mr. White's argument. He said the Ashburton treaty is in full force and effect and there is nothing in the Statute of Westminster for a contention to the contrary.

Bank Governor Urges U.S. Remove Trade Barriers

National Production Shows All-Time High Last Year

OTTAWA (CP) — Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, today urged the United States to reduce its trade barriers as a move to strengthen the free world.

The head of Canada's banking system said sterling area countries may have to rely heavily on import restrictions and discrimination "if United States actions limit severely their chances of earning dollars by competing in the American market."

"Restrictions in the United States cannot fail to encourage restrictions elsewhere," he said in his annual 1952 report to Finance Minister Abbott tabled today in the Commons.

Reviewing the year's domestic and world financial developments, Mr. Towers' report stated:

Billion - dollar increases in spending both by consumers and by governments in Canada boosted national production of goods and services in 1952 to an all-time high of $23,000,000,000. This compared with $21,400,000,000 in 1951.

2. Wage increases in 1952, though not as large in dollar value as those of 1951, actually had greater purchasing power because of a drop in consumer prices.

3. Canada fared well in foreign trade, the value of the Canadian dollar jumping nearly five per cent. Import prices dropped 12 per cent but export prices slipped by only two per cent.

Governor-General Heads List Of Best-Dressed Men

TORONTO, (CP) — For the second year in succession, Governor-General Vincent Massey heads the list of Canada's ten best dressed men, the Men's Fashion Council of Canada announced Wednesday night.

This year's judges were influenced by the "vice-regal simplicity" of Mr. Massey's wardrobe while in 1952 his selection was made on the basis of "gentlemanly restraint" in apparel.

Hon. Lester B. Pearson, external affairs minister, is second on the list. He was applauded as "the man who made Canada bow-tie conscious."

Hon. Paul Martin, Q.C., minister of national health, was voted into the select ten as "fat man makes good." Mr. Martin recently slimmed from 200 to 160 pounds.

The "Maritime breeziness" of Hon. Harold Connolly, Nova Scotia's minister of health and welfare, won him mention while the "traditionalism" of Mr. Justice J. Keiller Mackay of the Ontario Supreme Court who wears kilts or street costume with equal distinction placed him fifth.

The others: James E. Hahn, Toronto industrialist and sportsman; Donald C. Cromie, publisher of the Vancouver Sun; Eric Duggan, one-time Western Canadian football star and head of the Edmonton stock exchange; A. F. Mercier, publisher of the Quebec L'Evenement - Journal; Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster of Toronto, Canadian entertainers.

McNeill Named Commissioner

TORONTO (CP) — Edwin V. McNeill today was appointed commissioner of the Ontario provincial police.

He succeeds William H. Stringer, who died last week.

Born in Bruce county, Commissioner McNeill joined the Kitchener police department in February, 1926. He went to the Ontario provincial police as a constable July 20, 1927, and rose through the ranks to appointment as Deputy commissioner last June 1.

He was acting chief constable in Windsor during that city's police shakeup in 1950. He also assisted in the reorganization of other municipal police forces in the Province.

During the First World War he served in France with the 18th battalion and with the 3rd Canadian tunnelling company and also spent some time in England as an instructor with the Canadian trench warfare school.

He is married and has three daughters.

BREAKS NECK ON HILL

TORONTO (CP) — Beverley Gentle, 17, suffered a broken neck Tuesday night when a toboggan travelled about 70 feet through the air after taking off from a hill. It somersaulted twice. June Nicklas, 16, also aboard the toboggan, was unhurt.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: Balmy air is flowing into Ontario this morning and will wreck havoc upon our wintry landscape. The whole of the western and central United States is covered with air with much above normal temperatures. Only in Northern Ontario are the temperatures representative of winter and across these regions is moving an area of snow and freezing drizzle. A small low pressure area developing this morning over southern Kansas will move through Ohio on Friday.. This will bring a thick layer of clouds, mild temperatures and some rain to southern regions during Friday.

Tips on How To Keep Crowds Coming Back

TORONTO (CP) — Speakers at the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies gave some tips Wednesday on how to keep crowds coming back to the local fall fair year after year.

J. S. Walker of Leamington said the Leamington fair board had called in public and separate school teachers, and later the high school principal, to discuss the question of junior classes. To make room for the resultant entries 25 feet of wall space was replaced by a new building for school exhibits with 5,000 square feet of floor space plus wall space.

B. L. McLean of Lindsay suggested getting rid of all unnecessary fences so fair visitors could wander freely about the grounds.

W. R. Walker of Fort William said grounds must be kept up at all times. He also suggested that grandstand performances should not be unnecessarily long since this kept fair visitors from getting around to other exhibits.

Canada and Three Other Countries Take Steps Toward Common Bullet

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and three other countries have taken one more step towards agreement on a common bullet for their armies and are considering what rifle to use at once after the bulle is chosen, an official statement said today.

The joint statement was isshed in Canada, Britain and Belgium but not in the fourth country, the United States, a fact which may or may not have significance. A defence spokesman said Washington was informed the other three rifle to use at once after the bullet but decided against issuing it there.

The purpose of the statement was obscure but it disclosed that the four countries have agreed on the over-all length of the round—regardless of calibre.

It also indicated that Canada, the U. K. and Belgium are collaborating in developing one round while the U. S. works on one of its own. There are signs that the first three countries have largely come to agreement on a bullet whose main features were developed by Canada.

The four-country agreement on the length of the round was explained by officials as a significant step because it clears the way for development of differing rifles which could be rebored to use the common round, regardless of calibre.

In other words, knowing the length, the countries can go much further in developing a new rifle than they could if the length were but not in the fourth country, he indefinite. The rifles could differ in size and length and other characteristics and still use the same bullet.

Officials said Canada is beginning to think of a new rifle but that top priority has been given to the round. The thinking seems to be that Canada will modify someone else's rifle for her own use rather than develop a new one.

Belgium, not in on the original discussions about a common round, entered when it became an Atlantic pact matter. Belgians are rifle experts.

LIVING COSTS SLIP TENTH OF POINT IN DEC.

Old Index Soon to Be Abandoned Is Higher

OTTAWA (CP) —Living costs continued to decline in December with the new consumer price index slipping by one-tenth of a point to 115.7 from 115.8, the bureau of statistics reported today.

But the old cost-of-living index, soon to be abandoned as obsolete, showed a small upward trend, increasing by one-fifth of a point to 184.4 from 184.2. It was the first increase in this index after a continuous five-month decline.

The bureau has made the new consumer price index the official gauge of price changes. December's drop was the second consecutive monthly decline in the yardstick, based on 1949 prices equalling 100. In November, it declined by three-tenths of a point. The peak was 118.2 in December, 1951.

The old index, based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, has dropped from its peak of 191.5 also reached in December, 1951.

200 Families Near Montreal DrivenfromHomes

MONTREAL (CP) — A sudden ice jam in the St. Lawrence river Wednesday night flooded parts of suburban Longueuil and Ville Jacques, across the river from Montreal, driving more than 200 families from their homes.

The water receded a few hours later and some families were permitted to return to their dwellings. Water left behind turned the lower floors of some houses into blocks of ice.

At its peak the water was 10 feet deep in low-lying areas. Damage was expected to be heavy.

Most of the residents had time to don heavy clothes and walk to safety. Some had to be taken from their homes in boats.

The ice jam sent the water over an incomplete retaining wall, begun about a year ago in hope of averting floods that have plagued the south shore communities in previous years.

Many residents unable to return to their homes stood guard throughout the night to prevent looting that has followed other floods.

Campaigns to Raise Funds To Buy Material Assistance For Homeless Springing Up

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadians today opened their purse strings as well as their hearts to the refugees of the flood-devastated areas of Britain and the Netherlands.

Campaigns to raise funds to buy the material assistance the thousands of homeless need are springing up across the country.

And at Montreal an airlift scheme has started to ferry the much-needed supplies to England and Holland where more than 2,000 are believed drowned.

Just what the flood victims need was answered by the Women's Voluntary Services, a British organization.

"There is practically nothing we could not use," Mrs. G. H. Dunbar, head of the Empire and foreign department of WVS, said. "I would ask people abroad to send us the products of their countries. Probably each country has something of its own manufacture it could send."

The first load of supplies left Montreal's Dorval airport Wednesday for the Netherlands in a Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM) plane. A Trans-Canada Air Lines North Star took off a few hours later.

The two planes, first of many to ferry vital supplies, carried 5,580 pounds of Red Cross supplies—boots, blankets and warm clothing.

All to Carry Supplies

Practically every commercial transatlantic flight from Canada to the flood-stricken regions will carry supplies. The supply pool at Dorval will be replenished with supplies arriving from cities across the country.

TCA will pick up Red Cross supplies at every Canadian centre their planes put down. All airlines operating transatlantic services are co-operating.

Funds to raise money for flood relief were established Wednesday in Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton and Winnipeg. Board of control in Ottawa started its fund with a $1,000 contribution. In Toronto $1,000 was earmarked for Britain and $500 for the Netherlands from civic funds.

Through its overseas relief committee, the United Church of Canada sent $10,000 for the relief of victims in both areas. The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire voted to contribute $2,000 to the WVS and $2,000 to the Netherlands flood relief fund. The IODE also gave the British Save the Children Fund and the Soldiers', Sailors', and Airmen's Families' Association in Britain permission to use goods on hand from the IODE for flood relief.

Send Outboard Motors

Red Cross will send outboard motors to the Netherlands if they are needed, Dr. W. S. Stanbury, national director of the Canadian Red Cross said. The outboards, which published reports said are needed to speed the work of evacuation, will be shipped by air if their need is determined.

In the Commons Immigration Minister Harris said special assistance will be provided to enable flood victims from Britain and the continent to emigrate to this country.

The emigration of flood victims will be speeded up by special measures, the Dutch emigration office announced at The Hague.

Another 1,400 Mi. Four-Lane Highways to be Built in Ont.

TORONTO (CP) — J. D. Millar, deputy highways minister, said Wednesday night that Ontario now has 230 miles of controlled access, four-lane, highways and plans to construct another 1,400 miles.

He told the annual convention of the Ontario agricultural council the new roads to be constructed will ultimately carry 80 per cent of the province's through traffic. He said the new roads are expensive to construct — from $300,000 to $500,000 a mile — but are "absolutely essential" to accommodate present day traffic.

Mr. Millar said that the department does not plan to construct four-lane highways between Fort Erie and Niagara Falls and between Brockville and Gananoque. He said one lane has already been constructed between these points and the present volume of traffic does not justify the expense of constructing four-lanes.

The deputy minister said that salt still is being used for melting snow on highways. It costs only one cent a gallon for salt, compared to 65 cents a gallon for alcohol, he said.

Mr. Millar denied that salt corrodes automobile bodies. He said "the real trouble lies in the fact that cars are not made of as heavy metal as they used to be." Cars in Florida and California suffered from corrosion but no salt was used in those states.

Freeing Chiang Not 'Aggressive' Eden Tells House

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said today Britain is satisfied that the United States has no "aggressive intentions" in freeing Chiang Kai-shek's forces on Formosa for raids on the Communist Chinese mainland.

Eden cautioned an anxious House of Commons against "reading into the President's statement anything more than it actually said."

The British foreign secretary took the floor to answer Socialist concern that Eisenhower was egging Chiang on to attack the mainland at the risk of spreading the war in the Far East.

Eden stressed that he had talks only a few hours earlier with the United States secretary of state, John Foster Dulles.

Eden quoted Eisenhower's own words on deneutralising Formosa —"this order implies no aggressive intention on our part."

Neighbors See Angel in Yard Carrying Harp

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Right out there in Dorothy Betts' backyard was an angel with a harp.

She wasn't strumming the harp; she was carrying it.

Then the woman with the harp, who wore no clothing, yelled "fire," and startled neighbors looked up to see smoke pouring from Mrs. Betts' roof.

Mrs. Betts explained that the fire started from a toaster while she was taking a shower. Her first impulse was to save her $2,000 harp.

"By the time I realized what I was doing, I found myself in the middle of the yard without a stitch on, dragging my harp to safety," she explained to her neighbors, film actress Ann Dvorak and television actress Joanne Jordan.

Mrs. Betts' loss was estimated at $9,000.

Four Airmen Killed, Plane Crashes, Burns

WINNIPEG (CP) — A twin-engined air force plane on a training flight from Winnipeg crashed and burned early today about 30 miles north of here and the four airmen aboard were killed.

The Beechcraft plane plunged to earth and caught fire two miles northwest of Gunton, Man., shortly after midnight.

Two of the bodies were thrown clear. Rescuers were unable to reach the other two because of the heat from the flames.

The RCMP reported the crash to RCAF officials here and an ambulance and a doctor were dispatched to the scene along with an air force fire truck, A. D. Goodwin from Gunton was already standing by at the csash, but there was little anyone could do until the wreckage cooled.

The names of the dead, the pilot and three student navigators, were withheld pending notifcaton of next-of-kin.

The plane was from No. 2 air navigation school here.

CANADIANS OPEN PURSE STRINGS TO FLOOD VICTIMS

Special Treatment Will Be Given Refugees

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will extend a welcome hand and financial assistance to United Kingdom and European flood victims anxious to come to this country.

Immigration Minister Harris announced in the Commons Wednesday that special treatment will be given to flood refugees in Britain, Belgium and Holland.

The Canadian government will loan them the money needed to reach new homes in this country. The assistance will be given to medically-fit immigrants and their families.

The assistance will be an extension of the government's assisted-passage program. Since 1951, the government has been financing the passage of some single workers and heads of families. They have been allowed up to two years to repay transportation loans from earnings in Canada.

In the case of flood victims, the government will undertake to pay the passage of entire families. Terms for repayment may be extended.

Mr. Harris made no estimate of how many flood victims will take advantage of the government's offer. Many would want to remain where they are.

40,000 Last Year

Canada admitted an estimated 40,000 immigrants from Britain last year. Approximately 20,000 came from The Netherlands and about 2,500 from Belgium.

Author of 400 Short Stories Dies Suddenly

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Ben Ames Williams, 63, author of more than 400 short stories and about 40 books, died of a heart attack on the Country Club rink Wednesday night while participating in a game of curling.

He was stricken and fell to the ice just as he had shot his last stone toward the mark.

Medical examiner Thomas P. Kendrick said the noted author died of coronary thrombosis. A friend of Williams' said he had been bothered with a heart ailment for some time.

Williams got his start as a writer by working six years as a reporter for the Boston American after his graduation from Dartmouth College in 1910.

MESSAGE TO EISENHOWER

Rome (AP) — Premier Alcide de Gasperi today assured President Eisenhower that Italy will continued to work for a united Europe. De Gasperi's message was in response to a letter from Eisenhower delivered by State Secretary John Foster Dulles of the United States on his visit here last Saturday. Eisenhower said he was highly interested in speedy formation of the proposed European defence community and European economic union.

Hastily-Shored Defences Withstand Angry Waves Beating Against Coast

LONDON (Reuters) — Angry waves early today again broke over the Lincolnshire coast but it appeared that hastily shored-up English sea defences had withstood their greatest test since the weekend disaster.

The winds whipped tide waters into the deserted streets of Mablethorpe and Sutton on the Lincolnshire coast. Thousands of freshly-placed sandbags were washed away but an official said no further harm was done to persons or homes.

Near Kings Lynn, Norfolk, the River Ouse swept away a barge with 30 or 40 men of the RAF but grounded on flooded flat land and the party escaped without injury.

Kings Lynn itself escaped further trouble, though the tide rose higher than normal.

At Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, water seeped over the river banks in a few places but caused no harm.

Through the night thousands of troops and volunteers pressed on with the job of reinforcing Britain's shattered coast defences, with troops and volunteers working 10-hour shifts to plug the great holes that gape from the sea walls.

Rescue workers toiling night and day to recover flood victims estimated the total death roll of 265. This included 46 bodies recovered on Canvey Island, three more found in Essex and one in each of the three counties of Lincolnshire, Norfolk and Suffolk.

Boats, Helicopters Remove Thousands Of Dutch Refugees

Official Death Toll In Flood Now Stands at 1,800

AMSTERDAM (CP) — A vast international flotilla of small boats and helicopters today evacuated thousands of flood-imperilled Dutch but new dike breaks raised new threats for thousands of homeless.

The death toll from hurricane and flood in The Netherlands reached 1,320, bringing the total in Britain and the Low Countries to 1,880. Reliable but unconfirmed reports said the count of dead in The Netherlands alone will be approximately 2,000.

The mass evacuation of numbed and dazed townspeople from the island of Goree-Overflakkee was effected by British, French, Dutch, Belgian, U. S. and German vessels. The 1,500 villagers of Oud and Nieuwe, who had spent five horror-filled nights on a crumbling dike, were removed this morning and during the night.

Guided by Planes

The small vessels were guided to the rescue spots by planes. The planes were aided by helicopters which have rescued 700 persons in The Netherlands in the last three days.

But four new breaks in the dikes at Schouwen-Duiveland Island in southwest Holland endangered nearly 3,000 stranded persons.

In Britain, great waves surged through a newly-built emergency wall at Mablethorpe, Lincolnshire, but police said the situation was under control.

The death toll in England stood at 546.

Fight Heavy Seas

In the race against time to save the stranded at Schouwen-Duiveland Island, boats fought heavy seas and planes battled snow and wind to reach them before the next high tide late this afternoon.

A British amphibious boat was reported in distress near Zierikzee on the island and asking for immediate assistance.

Dutch parachute troops were ordered dropped into the surrounded dry parts of the flood area to help in rescue efforts and to direct parachute drops of relief supplies. Rescue officials set up a "flying windmill" helicopter airlift from Woensdrecht airport here to pick up people most in danger in stricken areas.

Britain Helps Holland

Although Britain herself is staggering under heavy flood damage in the southeast, British troops and helicopters have been sent to help stricken Holland. Queen Juliana of The Netherlands sent her thanks to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) —Two persons were killed and two injured today in an explosion at the Welland Works of North American Cyanamid Limited here.

Names of the dead and injured were not immediately available.

Says Eisenhower Egging On Chiang Kai-Shek

LONDON (AP) — A British Socialist leader today accused President Eisenhower of egging Chiang Kai-shek on to attack the Communist Chinese mainland and warned "there was a risk of spreading the (Korean) war."

Herbert Morrison, deputy Labor party leader, opened a full - dress House of Commons debate by expressing "apprehensions" that the U.S. policy switch taking the wraps off the Chinese Nationalists might lead to "considerable consequences."

Citing the risks of a Nationalist attack against the Chinese mainland, Morrison said:

"Supposing Chiang gets into difficulties, supposing he is defeated, supposing some of his troops are surrounded, supposing there is a naval action by Communist China against his troops in transit—what is the U.S. going to do then?"

"Is the U.S. going then actively to participate, as the United States, directly in warlike activities against the mainland of China or against Chinese naval forces?

". . . There is a real risk that there might be major trouble between Communist mainland China and the forces of the U.S."

No Manslaughter

BRAMPTON (CP) — William Fleming, 30-year-old Port Credit chauffeur, was acquitted Wednesday by a supreme court jury of manslaughter but convicted on charges of careless driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

He will be sentenced Friday by Mr. Justice G. A. Gale.

It was Fleming's second trial in connection with the death last June 29 of Anne Vaderhuel, 16, and Billy Green, 13, of Streetsville. They were struck by a car near Port Credit.

Fleming testified that on the night of the accident, Margaret Alderson of Kirkland Lake, a passenger in the car he was driving, "mentioned a bump in the road, but I felt and heard no bump."

Asked "was it you?" by newspaper publisher Roy H. Thomson his former employer, the day following the accident, Fleming said he replied: "It might or might not have been."

Two Overcome From Coal Gas, Soon Recover

Overcome by coal gas fumes arising from a furnace, that had been checked too soon, a teenage boy and an adult at 343 Victoria Ave. collapsed in the hallway of their home this morning.

Hearing the commotion caused by her son Robert, slumping to the floor, Mrs. M. Raymond hoisted the windows to air out the house and called firemen, who made a hurried run with the resuscitator.

Firemen said that both persons affected by the coal gas had partially recovered, when they arrived. However, they were given oxygen to speed up their recovery At mid-morning, headaches and upset stomachs were the only remaining effects of the coal gas.

Mrs. Raymond said the furnace had been stoked the usual time the night previous but apparently had not been given sufficient time to burn up before being checked.

CAR CRASH KILLS TWO

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP)—Two persons were killed and two others injured Wednesday night when two cars collided near Chambord, 55 miles from this northeastern Quebec community.

Dead are Mrs. Ulric Desbiens of Jonquiere and her daughter, Mrs. Paul Deville. Injured were Louis Simard of Metabetchouan, driver of the small English car in which the four were riding, and his wife.

Mother, Daughter Banquet By C.G.I.T. Successful Affair

Blue and white the traditional colors for the Canadian Girls in Training were used for the decorations at the city-wide mother and daughter banquet held at Bridge Street United Church on Wednesday evening. At the head tables miniature dolls were dressed in exact replicas of the C.G.I.T. uniform with middies trimmed with navy collars navy skirts and black ties. Each group had decorated the table and prepared the food for their guests.

Miss Pat Simmons presided at the dinner. The song leader was Miss Margaret Hillis and the accompanist was Mrs. T. K. Franklin.

Toasts were proposed to the Queen by the chairman; to the church by Miss Carol Osborne, who said that the church was the protecting structure of our life, but the church was the people not the buildings. Rev. Duncan McTavish replied by saying that we carried the church with us wherever we went. The church was the great cosmopolitan organization in the world today, and the real church was you and I.

The Sunday school was toasted by Miss Margaret Brickman, who said that the C.G.I.T. was a specialized church program joined with the Sunday school to teach sound religious values. Mr. George Wright responded by explaining the goal of the Sunday school in carrying out its purpose of teaching Christian living.

Toast to Mothers

The toast to the mothers was proposed by Miss Jane Townsend who stated that the girls realized their obligations to their mothers and owed much to their continued interest and support. She pledged that the girls would do their best always for their mothers. In response Mrs. H. M. Townsend voiced her thanks for this expression of love and affection. Parents tried to give the proper training in character so that their daughters would increase in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man. With self-discipline and good humor they would possess fine qualities of spirit, and girls would find that in their mothers they would have a friend, counsellor and constant companion.

To the toast to the C.G.I.T. by Mrs. Arthur Newman, who stated that this organization was interdenominational and known around the world, Miss Sandra Newman replied with the C.G.I.T. purpose, "As a Canadian girl in training under the leadership of Jesus, it is my purpose to cherish health, seek truth, know God, serve others, and thus, with His help become the girl God would have me be."

Miss Jacqueline Avery who attended camp council last summer described the daily life at camp and what it meant to those who attended. The food and recreation, she recalled were the best that could be asked. After flag raising in the morning five minutes were spent alone in meditation and prayer. The topic for study and discussion was the Beatitudes, and most of the girls had never before realized the true meaning of those scriptures. Vesper service was held outdoors while the sun was setting, and the speaker mentioned that the girls felt very close to God. On Sunday morning service was held in the chapel on the hill, and on the last Sunday a Communion service was given. At camp one had a wonderful feeling of one's closeness to God.

Speaker Introduced

Mrs. H. R. Varcoe, chairman of the girls' work board introduced the speaker, Mrs. Harold Keefer of Trenton, secretary of girls' work in the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Keefer read excerpts from letters written by Miss Bricker, who is travelling in Japan. She described graphically her first impressions of the strange customs and different modes of living. Taxis, bicycles, and vehicles of all sorts go whirling by at breakneck speed along the narrow roads, with the drivers simply leaning on their horns all the time. The noises there are legion but the two continuous and predominant ones are the horns and the electric trains. On the train Miss Bricker discovered she was the only feminine passenger and as their was no privacy anywhere they practised a sort of mental privacy. Looking out the windows one could see the ever-present mountains that run like a backbone the length of the island.

Mrs. Keefer read a description of the church which started the service at five-thirty in the morning and of a Korean home papered with newspapers, and lighted with a single bulb.

"It makes us realize how lucky we are to be Canadian girls and women", said the speaker. "We have advantages that women do not have in many countries. You are in training. In training for what? It is hard to believe that you can make anything out of yourselves that you want to badly enough. But you have to work for what you want. If it is money or power, you can have it. But when you are older you will realize that money does not fulfil your deepest needs and power brings tremendous responsibility. Service does not bring money or power but it brings satisfaction and peace. You are at a critical time of life when you must choose. The possibilities are there. If you think of living your life so you will matter to others you will feel you are amounting to something worthwhile. You must put first things first, and if you take on a task do it as well as you can.

Miss Pat Rolland expressed thanks to the speaker, and the singing of "Taps" brought the evening to a close.

THE REV. WHITNEY J. DAVIS
(Thornbury, Bancroft, Cannifton)

Funeral services for the Rev. Whitney J. Davis, who formerly held pastoral charges at Bancroft and Cannifton, were held from Grace United Church at Thornbury on Saturday last.

Born on Manitoulin Island in 1901, son of the late John Davis and Hannah Atkinson, he spent his early years working on his father's farm at Gore Bay. The deceased studied theology at Emmanuel College at Toronto University, graduating in 1931. After working in the United Church mission fields of Western Canada, he was appointed to pastoral charges at Bancroft and Cannifton, and later at Dobbinton and Thornbury.

The Rev. Davis died on Thursday, January 21, after an illness of one year. He is survived by his wife, the former Marian Luctkar and three children, Richard at Thornbury, Carolyn in high school and Allen in public school, all at Thornbury.

Interment was at Thornbury.

FRANK R. SCOTT

Frank Robinson Scott, who was born in Roblin, died in Vancouver on January 19th. He was in his 68th. year.

He is survived by his wife, Ida; four brothers, Archie, Grand Forks, B.C.; John, Trail, B.C.; Walter, Deseronto and Murney, Roblin. A sister, Mrs. Helen Brown, Belleville, also survives.

He was a member of Harmony Lodge, No. 40, A.F. and A.M., Grand Forks, B.C., and a member of Emulation Lodge, No. 125, A.F. and A.M., Trail, B.C.; past District Deputy Grand Master, District No. 7, A.F. and A.M., also a member of Royal Arch Masons, member of Joppa Chapter, Preceptory Knights Templar, a member of Gizeh Temple, A.O.N.M.S., also a member of Gateway Lodge, I.O.O.F. Grand Forks.

The son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Scott, of the Roblin district, the deceased moved to western Canada in 1908 when he was 23 years old.

Interment was in Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Vancouver.

INFANT DEBBORAH L. YOUNG

The funeral of the late Debborah Lorraine Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Young, Trent Road, was held this morning from the Belleville Burial Co. Funeral Home.

Committal prayers at the graveside at St. James Cemetery were said by Rev. J. F. Buckley, St. Michael's Church.

Herbert Fox Named Director Hardware Assoc.

Herbert W. Fox of Belleville was elected a director of the newly-formed Canadian Retail Hardware Association yesterday at Toronto. Previously known as the Ontario Retail Hardware Association, the group changed its name Tuesday in an attempt to give further expression to the already inter-provincial character of the association. Mr. Fox was a director of the Ontario association before the change in name.

President of Walker Hardware Company, Mr. Fox has served 27 years in the retail hardware business. Following an apprenticeship, he joined the firm in 1925 and became a partner in 1933. Later, in 1949, he was made president.

SAVES NEPHEW IN FIRE

SNELGROVE (CP)—Arvid Jopp, 21, rescued his three-year-old nephew, Raymond Stoddart, from his flaming home Wednesday. The fire, which destroyed the 100-year-old pioneer home valued at $12,000, was believed to have started when Raymond dropped a flaming stick from the kitchen stove into a wood box. The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stoddart were shopping in this community 25 miles northwest of Guelph when the fire broke out.

Group of Airmen Saves Contents of Home in Fire

Rawdon (Special) — A party of about 20 airforce men from Trenton RCAF Station, out on a rabbit hunt, saved the household furnishings of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Nelson, 3rd. concession Rawdon, when their farm home was gutted by fire Wednesday afternoon.

The airmen were hunting in the immediate district and when they saw the fire turned in and carried the furniture to safety. The entire interior of the farm home was gutted by the flames, which went out through the roof.

Mr. Nelson and his five-year-old son Leslie were at home when the fire started around mid-afternoon. He reported that he heard an unusual noise upstairs and on inevstigation found the fire in a partition.

Most of the district farmers were at Stirling attending a hog producers' meeting and little help was available to fight the fire until the arrival of the Stirling pumper. The structure was saved from complete destruction with water pumped from a nearby well.

A large woodshed, piled high with the winter's supply of wood was saved.

Mrs. Nelson, along with a neighbor, was in Belleville shopping and returned home about 5 o'clock to find her seven-roomed farm home ablaze. The house was partially covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and their son are staying with Mrs. Nelson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Menzies, of Stirling.

TRENTON

Admirals Bow To Wellington By 6-3 Score

TRENTON (Special) — Wellington's Belleville bolstered club banged out a 6-3 victory over Carr's Admirals at the Quinte St. arena last night.

By virture of the win Wellington extended their league lead another two points while Trenton, tied with Frankford for second place, at the start of the game dropped back into third position, Frankford winning over Stirling 10-8 and forged ahead into second place.

The Wellington crew have goaltender Parks to thank for their win. The Trenton sharpshooters dispatched plenty of rubber his way but much to the locals' dismay he seemed to be always in the right place at the right time.

The Wellington scoring was divided up across the board. Goyer, York (2), Cousins, Hatfield and Graham shared the honors.

The same can be said about Trenton scoring. Leavey, A. Scott and Jones collected the points.

Weary Search Crews Write Finish to Hunt

HALIFAX (CP) — Weary search crews wrote finish today to their hunt for a missing British airliner, biggest problem in a tragic-studded week - end which apparently claimed the lives of 50 air travellers.

The four-engined plane disappeared into the Atlantic Monday with 39 persons, servicemen, their wives and children, aboard.

No trace was found during an intensive sea and air search although hopes were twice raised by reports that a United States Coast Guard cutter had sighted dye markers and a flare. Both leads, however, proved fruitless.

Although sill wihou clues, he for a missing RCAF Lancaser and its nine crew members, missing in Labrador.

The Lanc disappeared while hunting for a United States civilian plane and its two occupants, also still missing. American craft are hunting for it.

More than 20 planes were scheduled to continue the hunt for the Lancaster today although rescue headquarters here said hopes of finding survivors were not great.

Three planes remained in the air Wednesday night trying to trace the source of a flare reported sighted in the general search area.

Search planes from Greenwood, N. S., Summerside, P. E. I., and Goose Bay, Labrador, criss-crossed 40,000 square miles of snow-covered Labrador Wednesday. Three American planes from Goose Bay also joined the search.

The missing British airliner, en route from London to the West Indies, was last heard from when it sent a distress message about 359 miles east-southeast of Gander, Nfld.

FERRY CAPSIZES

TOKYO (AP)—An inter-island ferry capsized and sank in rough seas Wednesday off Okinawa and carried 58 Ryukuans to probable death. The captain and one survivor swam to a small island north of Okinawa. U.S. rescue planes searched a 200-square-mile area for survivors.

IN MEMORIAM

MIDDLETON. — In loving memory of our baby daughter, Marilyn Rose Middleton, 2 days old, who passed away February 3, 1952.

Sweet little flower of heavenly birth,
She was too fair to bloom on earth;
And, oh, the wrench when an angel came
And took our dear child home.

—Lovingly remembered by Mommy, Daddy and Nancy Lou. F5

ASSELSTINE. — In loving memory of my mother-in-law, Emily Asselstine, who passed away February 5th, 1946.

A beautiful memory, dearer than gold,
Of a mother whose worth can never be told:
Alone, unseen she stands by my side,
And whispers don't grieve, death cannot divide.
For deep in my heart her memory is kept,
Of one I still love, and can never forget;
And though the years may be many or few,
I will always be thinking, dear mother, of you.

—Lovingly remembered by her daughter-in-law, Lina. F5

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mr. Ernest Crook wish to acknowledge with grateful appreciation the many kind and thoughtful expressions of sympathy of friends and relatives during their recent bereavement in the loss of a loving husband and father.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—Active trading in low-priced mining issues today boosted first-hour stock market trading to 1,700,000 shares—highest since Monday. Prices generally were mixed.

Heaviest first-hour trader was Manitoba and Eastern with a turnover of 190,000 shares for a gain of two cents. Gunnar added 45 cents in busy trading.

Banks, foods and utilities were strong in industrials and papers held firm. Liquors and refining oils weakened.

Higher-priced base metals mixed as Cons. Smelters slipped and Labrador gained. Most other issues gained.

Losses by General A, Central Explorers and Home Oil weakened the western oils list but Britalta and Prado gained.

Senior golds weakened in light trading but junior producers mixed as Broulan Reef slipped and Upper Canada added pennies. Prospects were firm and holding companies mixed.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The U.S. dollar was at a discount of 2 17-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Wednesday's noon rate was 97 9-16 cents. The pound sterling $2.74⅛ against $2.75.

GETS PROMOTION

IN KOREA, (AP) — Maj. John Eisenhower, son of the President, today became staff intelligence officer of the 3rd division.

David Hollinger Re-Elected Pres. Hog Producers

Approximately 150 county farmers turned out Wednesday for the Hastings County Hog Producers' annual meeting held in the community hall at Stirling. Officials said it was one of the best attended meetings in years with farmers showing keen interest.

Guest speaker was Charles McGinnis, president of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association, who went into detail on the recently introduced marketing scheme, whereby all hogs sold in Ontario are disposed of through the producers' central hog marketing agency. He said this scheme had been in effect since January 23, and was having a good reception from farmers.

He stressed there was no intention to interfere with the regular marketing channels any more than necessary, the idea of the marketing agency being to negotiate prices.

Advocates No Change

He said as long as the packing plants would note on their statements their total cost price for hogs purchased, then deduct all charges and forward net proceeds to the farmer there should be no change in the actual marketing procedure. "It was important," he said, "that all costs be broken down so as to show all deductions. He felt the packing plants would co-operate."

A fee of 20 cents for each hog sold would go to central marketing agency but this fee would be reviewed at the end of six months with the hope it may be reduced, possibly by one-half.

24 Cents Per Hog

Other fees collected by the marketing agency would be two cents per hog yardage dues, giving producers the use of full facilities of the Toronto Stock Yards, and two cents per hog for the Hog Producers' Association, making a total of 24 cents per hog.

Other speakers heard at the meeting included W. E. Tummon, Foxboro, regional director for the Ontario Hog Producers' Marketing Board taking in eight counties ranging from Frontenac on the east to Durham on the west, and Roscoe Robson, MLA, for Hastings East.

Following the addresses a discussion period was held with the producers invited to ask questions.

David Hollinger, Stirling, was re-elected president of the county producers, with Irvine McCoy, Marmora, as vice-president. Gordon Bailey, of Harold, is secretary-treasurer.

Directors are appointed from each of the eight townships in the southern part of the county.

Hitch-Hiking Priest Reaches 99th Birthday

SPANISH, Ont. (CP) — Rev. Joseph Richard, the hitch-hiking priest of Algoma, marks his 99th birthday Feb. 6, still in the service of the Roman Catholic Church. His greatest wish now is to reach the century mark.

Father Richard has put behind him 60-odd years of living devoted to the rugged Algoma bush country. Now, although he has long since lost his sight, he continues to perform in whatever capacity he can in the school at Spanish, 85 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie.

Since his ordination as a priest in 1886, he has filled some 60 posts through the district, offering spiritual comfort to Indians and whites alike.

His long career in the Northern Ontario bush led to many nicknames, such as the "Grand Old Man of the North," but the one which is favored most by his many friends is the "hitch-hiking priest."

Had Many Friends

This stems from one of his most dependable modes of travel during his wandering days in the parishes. Where no highways existed he travelled by dogsled or boat, but his friendly wave on the backwoods roads brought many a teamster's wagon to a halt to offer him a lift.

Father Richard's accomplishments are many. He is responsible for construction of churches in Algoma at Cutler, Mississagi, Lesable, Sagomok, Cockburn Island Hilton Beach, White Sands at Michipicoten Harbor, West Bay and Gros Cap.

When the gradual loss of his sight became apparent many years ago, he developed a Braille system of his own, teaching the Indian language with the use of tooled blocks.

The small, silver-haired priest was the second-oldest of 17 children. In teens, he studied Greek and Latin and entered L'Assumption College when he was 17. He entered the Jesuit novitiate in 1878 at Sault au Recollect.

In Northern Posts

Two years were spent teaching in Montreal and Sault Ste. Marie, and then he was sent to Wikwemikong on Manitoulin Island. Later he studied theology and was ordained in 1886.

His first post was at Garden River, just east of Sault Ste. Marie. He served there from 1886 to 1892 and then began a career of missionary work throughout the northern part of the province.

In 1894 he was made a superior at Wiwemikong, but illness caused by overwork brought a temporary halt to his career. He returned to Garden River and the Sault before semi-retirement was forced upon him in 1921 by failing eyesight.

Father Richard's formula for longevity, which has served him well thus far, is moderation.

"Never eat until you are satisfied," he said. "But always get up from the table feeling as if you could eat more."

IN THE WAKE OF ANGRY SEAS

The overwhelming disaster which has struck Britain and the Low Countries is beyond anything that can be comprehended by the minds of Canadians. Seldom, if ever before, have the great seafaring nations of England and Holland known the angry seas to rise against them in such an onslaught upon human life and property.

Defences which have withstood the blows of the sea for centuries have crumbled and been swept away. As the stories of incredible destruction and inspiring heroism are recounted, the horrible and incalculable cost continues to mount from hour to hour.

The long history of western Europe has known few peacetime disasters to paralled this sudden, cruel stroke of nature. It was one which could not have been foreseen and against which there could be no real defence except sheer heroism in the face of utter devastation.

In Holland, where so much of the country's land area had been reclaimed from the sea through generations, the work of centuries has been destroyed. And in England, too, mountainous seas swept through sea walls in destructive floods as far as 30 and 40 miles inland. Whole communities have been visited by complete disaster.

In spite of the remarkable emergency operations which were available to meet the unprecedented scope of the disastr it might be weeks before the tragic toll of lives could be known. In this stern and sudden crisis the people of these stricken seafaring communities have risen to noble heights of succor and heroism. In their plight the hearts and hands and resources of Canadians go out to them in spontaneous aid; in whatever small measure material things can bring at such a time of overwhelming loss.

NEW DEAL FOR RURAL MAIL CARRIERS

For many years Canada's rural mail carriers have been the neglected stepchildren in the large family of federal government employees. Last week in the House of Commons a new deal was in the making for the men who carry the mail to the remote places of the land. That it was long overdue was agreed by members on all sides of the house.

There has been little or no change in the system of rural mail delivery in Canada since the horse-and-buggy days. Time and again voices have been raised in protest against the system but it was not until last week that the Government had shown any inclination to consider changes apart from temporary or emergency measures which were necessary in the war years. Meanwhile, it was apparent from debate in the house that the quality of the rural mail service has seriously deteriorated in many sections of the country.

Now a special parliamentary committee has been set up to study the "general administration and operation of the rural mail delivery service" and if this committee takes to heart some of the advice that a score of members offered in debate last week some drastic changes will be the result. Some immediate benefits for the rural mail men were arranged at the same time when the Postmaster-General was authorized to provide for increased payments under existing contracts.

The contract system has been the notorious cause of complaint over the years but even its severest critics disagree on alternative methods of providing for rural mail deliveries. The stumbling block is the position of the Postmaster-General in insisting upon the "profitable operation" of the rural routes with little or no regard for the mail service needs of many areas. Many routes have been arbitrarily discontinued because new tenders on existing contracts were considered too high.

The greater evil of the contract system, however, has been the wide discrepancies in contract prices. Many contractors have continued to operate at a loss to themselves in the face of higher costs of maintaining services while others have permitted the services to deteriorate. Even though provision had been made in Parliament to permit adjustments with the contractors, many rural carriers were unaware of these provisions and had not derived any benefits from them. In short there was no uniform system of estimating costs or arriving at reasonable prices.

The new deal promises some recognized pattern of administration. It is even possible that some means of eliminating the contract system may emerge with rural mail carriers' jobs being assigned on qualifications similar to those required in other civil service work. In any event an improved contract plan is certain and fuller recognition of the mail carriers as a branch of the civil service is contemplated. It is altogether likely that the Parliamentary committee will bring many veteran rural mail men before it to give their own views on ways and means of improving the system for the benefit of the public as well as themselves.

IN FOR OBSERVATION

"In for observation!" said the doctor crew.
"Time we looked you over, in and out, and through.
Time we checked completely all from head to toe.
Since you're having trouble,
why, we ought to know.

"In for observation! Bring your old machine.
All the tests we'll give you, you can work between.
We'll just punch and pinch you,
peer and probe and jab,
Let a nurse-pushed wheel chair ride you to the lab.

"In for observation! Come and settle down.
You won't need your Christmas ties, just your dressing gown.
Mornings we'll take X-rays till
we've got enough,
And for them we'll shoot you full of liquid stuff.

"In for observation! Come, of course, you should,
For while we're observing the rest will do you good.
You can take it easy. You'll feel better too,
When at last we tell you we've seen enough of you."

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Board of Education, F. E. O'Flynn was elected chairman for the year. He was nominated by W. P. Hudson and seconded by William Johnson and was elected unanimously. The following were present: William Johnson, F. E. O'Flynn, I. Diamond, W. P. Hudson, G. A. Bennett, H. Walker, J. H. Anderson, W. C. Reid, J. Martin, A. McGinnis, P. C. Jones, W. Tennent, J. F. Wills, A. E. Lewis, Lieut.-Col. W. N. Ponton and the Rev. A. L. Geen. Mr. O'Flynn was escorted to the chair by Messrs. Arthur McGinnis and P. C. Jones.

Mr. Frank Schultz, an old Belleville boy, has been appointed manager of the Union Bank at Baldur, Manitoba.

Mr. J. L. Tickell is in the eastern part of the province on business.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

INSIDE OR OUT?

To what extent is environment important in the shaping of a man's life? Some would say that it is all-important. In fact that is the prevailing emphasis today. We live in an age afflicted with an ailment known as "secularism"—a wordly outlook on life which has attained epidemic proportions.

Most of the current schemes for human development have to do with changing a man's environment. Pass laws making majority groups respect minority groups; destroy capitalism, centralize government and bring about quick social betterment, cries one set of thinkers. Decentralize government, and democracy becomes the pathway over which the down-trodden masses march to perfection, cries another.

Christianity takes issue with all systems which maintain that centre of importance in human affairs is outside the heart and experience of the individual There are a lot of pig sties in the world but it is the pig that makes the sty, and not the sty the pig. Modern "isms" want to change the factors of a man's environment, confident that if this can be done, all will be well. Christianity maintains that the only thing valuable in life is personality and that personality grows from the inside out, instead of from the outside in. Christianity insists that if a man is changed on the inside of his heart, he will, with the passing of time, change his environment.

Catching A Name-Caller

(Montreal Star)

A speaker in Montreal asserts that political and economic servants of the devil control all governments, "a group referred to in the Bible by the word 'beast'." To clinch his case he insists that people have recognized this by referring to governments as beasts. And he calls to witness the British lion, the Russian bear, the Chinese dragon, even the useful and industrious Canadian beaver.

He could have gone on if he'd done a little more thinking. This beastly habit is world wide. There comes to mind the Republican elephant, the Democratic donkey, the American eagle, the German eagle, the Australian kangaroo, the New Zealand kiwi (or is it the duck-billed platypus?), the Scottish lion, St. George's dragon, the South African springbok, to say nothing of Paddy's pig. Rommel was known as the Desert Fox and there was an Italian division, which on the whole didn't really do very well, that called itself the Wolves of Tuscany.

The list is endless and if these have anything to do with the "beast" of the Bible we'll eat the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse.

Too Little Slack

(Kitchener-Waterloo Record)

Many a woman crams and packs far too much into a pair of slacks.

Vanished Vagabonds

(Barclays Bank Review, London)

Richard Watts of Rochester (England), by his will of 1579, endowed a charity for "six poor travelers," who received for one night lodging and entertainment and were sent on their way the following morning with fourpence in their pockets. For nearly 370 years this charity was disbursed daily; but in recent years the supply of tramps has failed.

Here is another deficiency: Another link with the past has gone. That sturdy, independent band who tramped this island from the earliest days have apparently hung up their boots. Why should this be? Our forefathers whipped them from parish to parish and sometimes branded them with hot irons; but the number of sturdy vagabonds increased. How have we discouraged them?

These rugged individualists probably disappeared because there is no place for such people in our well documented society: They are untidy they conform to no pattern, they cannot be catalogued, numbered or sent forms. It would be nice to know where they went.

Manitoba Whaling

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

Whales in Manitoba seem as much a contradiction as the proverbial Swiss Navy, but nevertheless the whaling industry with centre at Churchill on Hudson Bay is beginning to play an important part in that province's economy. Not that it yet offers serious competition to mining or agriculture as the staple industries of Manitoba, but in 1952 a quota of seven hundred "white whales,' or belugas, was taken by fishermen off Churchill.

The beluga is not a true whale, but rather a member of the same family of mammals as the dolphin. The largest taken so far measured about fourteen feet, but the average size is considerably smaller. The belugas are gregarious, and are hunted with harpoon and nets.

The company operating the whale industry at Churchill now employs twenty-eight hunters, mostly local whites, Indians and Eskimos. The hunters use twenty- foot canoes powered by an outboard motor. These drive the belugas into shallow water where the animal to be harpooned is carefully selected. After the kill is made, the animal is towed to the processing plant. Last year $7,051 was paid to the hunters for the carcasses they brought in. A strict quota has been set to prevent any danger of extermination.

The animal up to now has concentrated on the production of blubber oil and quick frozen animal food. Steaks are processed for human consumption and have been finding sale in Winnipeg. The head oil has been found to be of exceptionally fine grade, particularly useful for lubricating rifle moving parts and watch and clock mechanisms. As yet the commercial production of this head oil has not been organized. Al though the railroad from Churchill to The Pas makes transportation of the products possible, the expense of processing equipment for handling large quantities of fine head oil has not proved feasible. Blubber oil, however, is finding ready sale:

The publication, Trade News, issued by the Department of Fisheries, points out that the presence of the beluga in the waters around Churchill was responsible for the early establishment of a Hudsons Bay Company port here. Settlements at Churchill had extremely bad luck and it was not until the late eighteenth century that whaling was established on any profitable footing. But takes have always been small, compared to the present quota of seven hundred animals per year.

The day is on its way when Canadian industries will be as varied as the people that compose the population.

Fish Gusher Unique Strike

(Winnipeg Tribune)

At Bentley, 80 miles south of Edmonton, a drilling crew was working merrily. Its drill was down 500 feet. Then all of a sudden the boys had a flowing well on their hands. Nice clear water came bubbling up from the hole.

But as they were pulling out they noticed flocks of magpies gathering around the flowing well, having a wonderful time. They checked more closely. Then they discovered that they were in Alberta after all they had struck a fish gusher. The water coming from the hole was full of fish.

Learned authorities were called in and they confirmed the presence of thousands of Eucalia inconstans—brook stickleback to us—in the water.

'Inexplicable' Ghost Stories

(From the BBC London Letter)

Some time ago the BBC's West Region invited its listeners to write to them giving details of any ghosts of which they had personal knowledge. It was hoped to find enough authentic ghost stories to make an interesting broadcast anthology for coldly scientific as this jet and atom age may be, things that cannot be explained do still occur.

Stories of ghosts, more than 300 of them, poured in to the BBC's Bristol offices, the majority coming from people of 40 and over but a substantial number being provided by young listeners.

The BBC sent a recording van all over the Region to find these seers of "Ghoulies and ghosties and long leggety beasties and things that go bump in the night", and their stories were recorded straight off the reel without any preamble or rehearsal. A microphone was placed before the person concerned who was asked to "Tell us all about your ghost and when and where you saw it", and without exception the tellers plunged straight into the story.

Some talked for a few minutes only, others went on for nearly half an hour and by the end of the tour the engineers on the job had heard such a variety of supernatural experiences as can have fallen to the lot of few ordinary men. A selection was made from them and successfully broadcast in both the Home and Overseas Services.

The BBC could not guarantee the truth of the stories, but it seemed unlikely that nearly 300 people should be lying and some of the happenings recorded were indeed inexplicable by any normal standards.

The ghosts seen were of various types: there were the familiar spectres of lovely distraught ladies and figures cumbered with clanking chains, but there were also young men in shorts with tennis racquets who seemed quite tangible, but suddenly vanished into thin air, and in the region of the Roman roads that abound in the West of England, several phantom Roman soldiers were seen in full uniform.

One motorist in the region of Windmill Hill, in Wiltshire, site of so many discoveries of prehistoric man, swore that he had seen a man on horseback, dressed only in skins and brandishing a club, riding furiously at right angles to his car. This man turned at the road and galloped parallel with it for some way, the curious motorist driving slowly to keep pace with him and to have a closer look before the ghostly horseman turned away.

But the oddest and most frightening story of all was told by three separate people, all living in different countries. The apparition they saw was a man who stepped out from the grass verge into the path of an advancing car and when the car swerved threw himself back under its wheels. When the shaken motorist stopped there was no one in sight, no sign of blood and no shelter of hedge, house or haystack to offer concealment.

Cures For Warts

(From the Louisville Courier-Journal)

A doctor at the University of California is toying with the idea of psychiatry to cure warts. Wonders have been worked, he says by mental suggestion. Anyhow, the warts disappear—sometimes.

It strikes us, however, that the good doctor has a lot to learn from his colleagues of the barnyard school. A glance at our Kentucky book shows 112 ways of getting shed of warts and practically every one preferable to a sojourn on an office couch. There are some that have us wishing for warts, just for the fun of their removal.

High on the list is the assurance that you can get rid of a wart by selling it to somebody. The ritual price is only a penny, but there's the consoling thought that this isn't an OPS ceiling, and that a good "5 per center" might wangle something better for you.

We like, too, all those curdling prescriptions that deal with black cats and graveyard ceremonies in the dark of the moon. If it's exercise you want there's help in the mountain advice to walk backward in the moonlight to a stump full of water and stick your wart in it.

Then there's no end of things to rub 'em with all sure fire—dishrags, poke root, horse hair, green mustard, goose quills, tobacco juice, dandelion greens, eggs (stolen from a neighbor's hen house), and endlessly on. You can kiss your wart and then a pretty girl—and there we go, confessing our compulsion, and that California psychiatrist watching us, too.

Personal Health Talks

MIRACLE IN MINIATURE

WHAT'S YOUR HEMOGLOBIN SCORE?

Hemoglobin is the iron-bearing oxygen-carrying pigment which gives color to the blood. It is in the red corpuscles. The fluid part of the blood (serum) is almost colorless or faintly yellow. Only the myriads of red cells swimming in the blood make it look red.

Hemoglobin constitutes nearly a third of the solid substance of the red blood corpuscles. There is approximately three-fourths of a pound of it in the entire volume of blood in the body of a 150-pound adult (10 pints).

There is a teaspoonful of iron in the entire body most of it being the iron in the hemoglobin of the blood, although some iron is stored in the liver. The iron in hemoglobin remains at a constant level of 0.33 to 0.34 per cent.

Function of the hemoglobin is a mystery of life. That is, we know it carries oxygen from lungs to the cells, tissues and organs throughout the body and returns to the lungs carrying a load of carbon dioxide, produced by the working cells, to be blown on into the outer atmosphere. Trying to understand how hemoglobin can do this is like trying to invent perpetual motion. Thinking on these things, one realizes there are an awful lot of such unsolved mysteries in modern science.

The routine examination of the blood includes an estimate of the amount of hemoglobin as well as a count of the number of red corpuscles.

The red corpuscles are constantly being destroyed as they wear out (from overwork I suppose, carrying oxygen from lungs to distant places and then without any rest, immediately loading with C-O2 for the return trip) and their remains eaten by scavenger cells (leukocytes, white corpuscles, phagocytes).

But the birthrate keeps up with the deathrate. As fast as worn out red cells are destroyed, new red cells generated in the red marrow of the large bones replace them.

In the healthy body there are approximately 5,000,000 red blood corpuscles (doctors call 'em erythrocytes to keep customers—I was about to say guessing, but that's the prerogative — I mean what a patient doesn't know won't hurt the doctor much) in each cubic millimeter of blood; that would make about seventy million red corpuscles in every drop of blood (I hope), but being so busy and all we just haven't time to count that many, so we use only a cubic millimeter and call it a day.

The hemoglobin content of the blood is 14 grams per 100 c.c. for women, 16 for men in health. This is taken as 100 per cent when hemoglobin is estimated by color gauge.

Most people who have fair health have five to seven per cent less hemoglobin than the ideal. This is nothing to worry about, but take care of yourself and don't indulge in pain-killers such as aspirin, ocetanilid, phenacetin or the numerous nostrums containing these dangerous drugs, for every dose will probably destroy a good many corpuscles and interfere with the function of your hemoglobin—which is to keep your vital cells supplied with oxygen.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

OUR BELIEFS

To our many beliefs we owe more than we ever give thought to or realize. Yet it is to them that we are indebted for all that we are and do. Imagine how bereft and isolated we would be without a single belief!

Our beliefs of honesty, justice, tolerance, human values, overall goodness, self-reliance, and the innumerable qualities that go to make up a great chracter, are what give to us the friends we have, the successful business in which we are engaged, and the satisfaction gained by our efforts to make good on each one of our beliefs.

As we look out upon nature, and see evidences of wonder, beauty, and many a miracle of creation, we cannot help but believe in a Superior Being who made it all possible. We can only exclaim: "I believe—help Thou my unbelief." God is in everything—else how did everything come about? The child believes without evidence as it takes its mother's or father's hand. We reach out and grasp the invisible hand of God with our hands of faith.

Without these simple beliefs of ours we would be creatures of fear walking in darkness, searching blindly for guidance, bereft of all hope. It's our beliefs in times of trouble, sorrow, discouragement, and temporary failure that give us the urge to go on, to carry on, and to hope. It's our beliefs that keep lifting us up to higher ground, giving to us the spiritual strength to overcome our physical fears.

It is only as we formulate these beliefs of ours and put them to work, that we are able to arrive at the goal of our selected destinations. It's our beliefs that characterize each one of us. Find out what a man or woman believes, and you have the key to that one's life.

Every uttered prayer is a fortified belief. Without that belief there would be no prayer. Here in this western world there are individual enterprise, religious beliefs, and individual freedom. That is what has created progress, homes of happiness, and individual dignity. Beliefs have made it so.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

All the recent talk about atom bombs, following upon Mr. Truman's farewell warning to Stalin, is powerfully reminscent of the talk about the Blitzkrieg in 1937, remember? So terrible were the Remember? So terrible were the weapons being prepared for that war, so mighty the bombers, so colossal the bombs, that the war would be over in a matter of days, or weeks at the most.

Well, the war came: and after a long wait of nine months, the Blitzkrieg. It was terrible enough. But it did not end the war in days, or weeks, or months.

We are assured that the atom bomb bears no relation to any war weapon ever conceived in the past. So we were assured in 1938 in connection with the threat of Blitzrieg. Already a number of outstanding political commentators are blaming the apathy of France and other European nations with regard to armament on the feeling that the atom bomb has really outmoded all other forms of offence and defence, and that it is hopeless to waste time, effort and money on such primitive implements as battleships, planes, tanks, guns. If the new homeland—busters are going to do what is promised, what use will armies be?

It might be useful for some of us to remember, always, that whatever marvels of destruction our great guns, our mighty bombers and all our engines of fury can effect, there still has to be quite a numerous company of fairly resolute men prepared to enter into the field of destruction on their two hind legs and there, by means and methods as old as the hills, even so primitive as a clubbed rifle, engage whatever resolute men may still be left among the enemy. Destruction is not enough. Some of Britain was destroyed: it only exalted the Britons. Germany was destroyed: she appears to be coming alive. Japan got the first atom bomb: she seems to have raised up quite a fresh new crop, over there on the uneasy side of Asia.

Hannibal with his elephants, Spain with her galleons, we with our tanks on the Somme, Hitler with his Panzer divisions, all seemed to think in terms of property, as though history were the story of cities, fortresses, factories, territories, materials. History, however, has to do with men. And no atom bomb can get 'em all.

Minute Saved At Tragic Cost

(Fort William Times-Journal)

The driver who drives swiftly and carelessly when school youngsters are going to school or returning home should visit Lise Dagenais at her Montreal home.

Lise will be 10 years old this week, but she will not be aware of it. Three months ago she was hit by a car. The fracture in her skull was healed, but the little girl has not been conscious during the three months. "Occasionally she is able to open her left eye. And sometimes she will cry quietly, her lips moving as if she were trying to speak—although she has not uttered a word since her accident.'

The minute that fast driving saves in a school area is not worth such a tragedy.

Canadians Join In Movement To Aid Stricken

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

In the big cities and in hamlets, Canadians are joining in a spontaneous movement to aid the flood-stricken areas of Britain and northwest Europe. Their governments, federal and provincial, supported them.

For the second time in little more than a decade, the country is offering a helping hand to its neighbors across the Atlantic in a spirit strongly reminiscent of the days of the Second World War.

The list grows hourly of communities which have started campaigns to collect cash, food, clothing and medicine for the beleaguered flood victims. A national fund may be set up to co-ordinate their activities.

Several remember their own days of trial and the unstinting generosity of the British people.

One such community is Winnipeg, scene of a devastating flood in 1950. Mayor Garnet Coulter said the citizens "remember with deepest gratitude the generous aid which came in 1950 from all parts of the western world" and he offered "every co-operation in support of the national flood relief fund which I understand it is proposed to form."

In British Columbia, trustees of a fund established in 1948 to aid sufferers whose homes were lost in the Fraser valley floods voted $100,000 to European relief, the biggest single contribution so far. The money will come from $500,000 still remaining in the fund treasury.

For the citizens of Sault Ste. Marie, the flood is history repeating itself. During the Second World War, Sault citizens "adopted" the fishing village of Lowestoft on the English east coast. Lowestoft is in the middle of the flood area and the Northern Ontario city is ready to adopt Lowestoft again.

Rimouski and Cabano, two small Quebec towns almost wiped out by fire in 1950, have also expressed willingness to help Britons who aided them nearly three years ago.

The federal and provincial governments are taking an active part. Prime Minister St. Laurent has been given the unanimous support of Parliament to make a "substantial financial contribution" to European aid. Quebec, British Columbia Ontario and Manitoba have signified their intentions of helping in any way possible.

Some relief now is on the way. The Canadian Red Cross Society has sent 250 cases of bedding to Holland from its stockpile in Switzerland and another 80 cases are being forwarded from Canada.

Numerous service clubs have acted independently in voting relief money. The Ottawa Lions Club voted $1,000 each to Britain and Holland, and $250 to Belgium. The Welland Lions Club has sent $1,000 to England and the Niagara Falls Rotary Club has approved $1,500 to be divided evenly between England and Holland.

The Senate Tuesday night unanimously extended sympathy to the flood victims and promised them material aid.

A resolution similar to that passed Monday in the Commons was sponsored in the Senate by Senator Wishart Robertson, government leader, and Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader.

Y's Menettes Enjoy Inspection Tour Through Avon Plant

On Tuesday evening, the members of the Y's Menettes' Club held their regular meeting at the Y.M.C.A.

Later they proceeded to the premises of the Avon Jewellery Ltd., where they were met by Mr. A. Mazer, who conducted them through the building. The group followed the manufacture of jewellery through its many processes, casting, polishing and plating, to the beautiful finished articles that will be worn by women from coast to coast.

The highlight of the evening was the inspection of the stockroom where the Y's Menettes saw the latest styles in costume jewellery. Of special interest was the new coronation jewellery, tiaras, crown pins, pins with the royal crest to be shown this spring.

Mrs. R. D. Johnson thanked Mr. Mazer, on behalf of the club, for a most interesting evening.

The group then returned to the Y.M.C.A., where a short business meeting was held. Plans for a rummage sale to be held in February and a tea and home-cooking sale to be held in March, were discussed.

The president, Mrs. F. R. Clarke, welcomed Mrs. J. Baxter into the club.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses for the evening, Mrs. H. Watson, Mrs. R. Cass, Mrs. E. Wooding and Mrs. F. R. Clarke.

Women's Activities

WEST HUNTINGDON W.M.S. - W.A.

The W.M.S. and W.A. of the West Huntingdon United Church held their January meeting at the home of Mrs. C. Wright.

The new president, Mrs. D. Cooke, was in charge and opened the meeting by reading a poem, "Your Part." Scripture reading, Romans 12: 3 - 21 was given by Mrs. Elmer Post; prayer by Mrs. Frank Hammond; reading by Mrs. Albert Ashley, and temperance rewards by Mrs. Frank Hammond.

Business and reports for 1953 followed.

Presentations of life memberships were made to Mrs. C. Carr and Mrs. E. Post.

The study book, a chapter on Africa was read by Mrs. George Cook.

Solo by Mrs. W. Grant and a reading by Mrs. Pollock, "The New Year," followed.

Mrs. Grant, past president, read a letter from Angola which was most interesting.

A social half hour was spent and refreshments were served by the hostess and friends.

Letters from Mexico

By Arnold Meyers

Editor's note:—A group of descriptive letters has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Alva Meyers, of Trenton, R.R. 7, from their son, Arnold, an artist, who is now in Mexico, getting color and inspiration for his art.

Mr. Meyers spent four years at the Ontario College of Art, Toronto, winning several prizes and one scholarship. He has held one art exhibit in Toronto, and several in his native town of Trenton where, during this month a showing of his work will be held at the new Odeon Theatre.

Those interested in art may appreciate seeing through the eyes of a fellow artisan, the beauty of the land "south of the border."

Mexico City,
December 9, 1952

Dear Mother and Dad:

I am writing this letter on my first evening in Mexico City. We (the bus and I) arrived in Monterey at 7.30 p.m. on December 5th. I was feeling somewhat apprehensive but found that the bus terminal was also an hotel. Mr. "X", a man I met who wasn't sure whether or not it was wise to stay there, finally decided in favor so we stayed. Mr. "X" owns a home at Lake Chapala. We went over to a 'joint' across the street and got some supper.

All I ate or drank there was a cup of coffee, bread, and a bit of spaghetti. That was a miserable repast. I had accidentally leaned against the wet paint of my bedroom door when entering and got a streak of white paint on my coat, so I hired a young boy to go and get some gas and clean my coat. (With the help of Mr. "X", who spoke fluent Spanish). We went back and went to bed.

This room was not heated, so I thought I had better sleep in my winter underwear as it was cool in Monterey that night. I slept all night and was not cold. Got up and changed my room to the Hotel Anciras, downtown — lovely hotel and quite reasonable (60.15 pesos from Saturday morning till Monday noon, $7.38). Made reservations for my trip to Mexico City and saw about the trip to Saltillo.

I have made a new friend? Allan Alvarez, of Corpus Christi, Texas. He is a fine fellow. On Saturday, 6th., I found my way to a bank and converted some money, then went down the Avenida (Avenue) Morelos to its end and took a picture of "Saddle Mountain." Saw a few boys and girls playing on the street.

Nonplussed for some seconds as to how and what to say to them concerning sketching them. Finally, I broke the ice by saying: "Puedo delinear usted?" (May I draw you.) The little boy smiled and nodded his head, so I indicated how to pose, and he did so.

Never did a sketch of mine create such a fever of excitement. Eventually the whole family came out—a terrific babble of Spanish. They were all beginning to ask to be drawn, I could tell that, so something had to be done quickly, since after all I wanted to keep the sketch and I didn't feel like giving the whole bunch a peso (11 1-2c).

I gathered up my things, gave the one boy a peso and left, thanking them. Did a little shopping then, and made my way to the Alameda (park), where I did a sketch of a shoe-shine boy. I was on the way to take a picture of the cathedral when along came my young bus friend, Allan—a pure chance meeting.

He suggested that if I were interested, we should take a trip by cab to the Valo de Caballo (Horse Tail Falls) right away. We found that this could be done for 40 pesos—this because of the extreme difficulty of the dirt road about one-third of the way.

Away we went passing between rows of step mountains, fields of sugarcane and orange groves. Eventually, the car turned off the highway into a terribly rough dirt road and passed through a village of adobe and thatched roof huts. Here was rural Mexico at just about its worst. The place had a smell all its own. You could notice it the moment you came near, but gosh how beautiful the girls were!

We could see through their doorways their little fires in the dark interiors— apparently preparing supper. The sun was getting low in the sky. The way became rougher and rougher. It went abruptly down a steep incline and at the bottom came to a turn so sharp—but that was far from all—up you go, up, and around and around and around exactly like a corkscrew; curves so sharp that it tests both the driver's ability as well as the car's.

My friend touched my arm and, pointing up said: "There's where we are headed for." Up above, nestling among groves of orange and palm trees, lay this tourist home. With a final struggle from the engine, we pulled up at the gates.

Since the falls were only about one-quarter mile away, we decided to walk, a little Indian boy was our guide. He couldn't have been more than seven or eight. The trail wound through the orange grove, by a creek, up and over old rocks and roots, ever growing wilder. The rocks were in every sort of fantastic shapes.

Our juvenile guide moved on at quite a pace. We stopped to take several pictures. I honestly could have spent weeks in that one spot. The place is absolutely wild. We could hear the falls plainly now. Suddenly we were there above the tree tops—a multitude of glimmering, shimmering threads. After photographing from here, we pressed on.

Finally the entire falls hove in view. We could hardly go two steps without wanting to take a picture. It was good that our guide had plenty of patience. We crossed the little wooden bridge. (I wondered how long before the thing would give way.) After climbing over more rocks, we found ourselves upon a mound to contemplate this wonder of nature. All this water comes from a spring away up on the mountain. The spring, our guide told us, is ten feet in diameter. The water comes cascading down in dozens of threads, a distance greater than Niagara. . . .

I am well and have a decent room here in Mexico City, obtained through another friend, of whom I shall tell you in my next letter. This room costs but $1.10 per day (10 pesos). My next letter will deal with our trying a most fantastic passage through the mountain ranges up to the central plateau. I am now living at 7,338 feet altitude and am experiencing no reaction at all.

From Arnold.

Belleville Subdivision C. W. L. Sponsors Attractive Afternoon Tea

St. Michael's rectory was the scene of a lovely and largely attended afternoon tea on Wednesday, under the auspices of Belleville Subdivision of the Catholic Women's League of Canada. This was convened by Mrs. J. E. Logan and Mrs. W. J. Doyle. Mrs. S. Kvarda opened the door for the guests who were warmly greeted by league president, Mrs. J. E. Boyd and Miss Ann Quigley, while Mrs. F. R. Ross and Mrs. W. Grant invited to the tea-room.

The beautifully appointed tea table was centred with a silver bowl of white phlox, narcissi and fern with tiny red cupid and heart cutouts tucked here and there in the blooms. Triple silver candelabra held pale blue candles with white lacy collars. The silver tea services gleamed in the soft candlelight at either end over a snowy madeira cloth.

Pouring during the afternoon were Mrs. J. R. Kelby, Mrs. W. Foley, Mrs. E. Bulger, Mrs. G. Bronson, Mrs. B. J. Black and Mrs. E. Doyle. The servers included, Mrs. E. Stiver, Mrs. A. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. J. Morey, Mrs. Bakyta, Mrs. T. Dolan, Mrs. P. Cleary, Mrs. J. Lawn. Mrs. T. Black, Mrs. C. Murphy, Mrs. C. Casey, Mrs. C. Philbin, Mrs. A. Bigonaise, Mrs. F. B. Cunningham, Mrs. B. Beehler, Miss L. Courayea, and Miss S. Ford.

Replenishing, Mrs. E. Brown, Mrs. T. Hopkins, Mrs. E. Rivers, Mrs. R. Park, Mrs. T. Duggan, Mrs. T. Morrell, Mrs. E. Lally and Mrs. R. McDougall, while Mrs. R. Cruji and Mrs. W. Harris were responsible for the delicious cups of tea.

Mrs. B. E. Burley was in charge of the draw on a MacPherson tartan motor rug which was won by Miss Linda Ross, Moira Street.

Mrs. W. A. Graham, Mrs. M. J. Kennedy and Mrs. J. Legault supervised the bake sale while Mrs. E. Cooper sold chances on two roasted chickens which went to Miss K. O'Rourke, 118 Pinnacle Street, and Mrs. M. Hawley, 273 Dufferin Avenue.

Mrs. L. Quinn and Mrs. H. Lamp were responsible for delivery of supplies and Mrs. A. Wilkinson acted as treasurer.

Grateful appreciation is extended to Very Reverend L. B. Garvin who kindly opened the rectory for this very successful event.

C. W. L Holds Euchre Party

A most enjoyable euchre party was held at the Knights of Collumbus Hall on Tuesday evening with a fine crowd in attendance.

The winners included, ladies' 1st, Mrs. Taylor; 2nd, Mrs. Cope, Mrs. Reid; men, W. Levesque, W. Joudwa, M. Sagriff.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

These parties are held every other Tuesday under auspices of the Catholic Women's League and are convened by Mrs. H. Carr-Braint assister by Mrs. J. Carr-Briant, assisted by Mrs. J. J. C. Baker.

P-T Association Enjoys Social Evening

On Monday, St. Michael's and Holy Rosary Parent-Teacher Association held their monthly meeting. At 7:30 p.m. all classrooms were open and parents and teachers met to discuss common problems. A special feature of this month was "Open House" held in the Home Economics and the Industrial Arts and Crafts departments.

Sister Mary Verda and Mr. J. Doran had a class in session and parents and friends were able to see how these classes are conducted. This proved an education to most visitors as this type of work was not included in the time-table when they were students.

The majority of the girls prepared a full-course dinner while others attended to homemaking duties in the bedroom, laundry and sewing room. The boys were engaged in sheet metal, woodwork, drafting and plastics.

Later, a short business meeting took place. The president, Mr. E. McCallum, told the audience that the provincial and archdiocesan offices urged all members to work forcefully in the campaign against salacious literature.

A letter of appreciation, from Mrs. Milne was read thanking the Association for the new record player which had been purchased for her classroom.

For the remainder of the evening, bridge and euchre were enjoyed by a large crowd. Prize winners in bridge, 1st, J. Ryan; 2nd, Mrs. F. Robinson. Prize winners in euchre, 1st, Mrs. S. Smith, Mrs. Conway; 2nd, M. Ryan, Mr. A. Mercier.

Refreshments were served by the social committee under the convenership of Mrs. R. J. Rashotte.

To Share $250,254

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario municipalities will share in $250,254 through the Corporation Tax Act, according to an order-in-council made public Tuesday.

It is a portion of the provincial corporation tax on railways divided every year between municipalities on a per capita basis. This year's rate is five per cent.

The act allows for deduction by the province from any municipality's share of 10 cents per patient a day for indigents and for patients in Ontario mental hospitals.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

At 19, she's still treated like a child

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 years old, and my parents treat me as though I were still a child. I don't know why they do, unless it's because I'm the only girl at home.

For example, I recently met a boy I had gone to school, with when I was downtown one evening, and he asked if he could take me home. I agreed, but before I knew it, it was quarter of twelve. We went right home and it was exactly twelve when I got in the house.

My parents were waiting up for me as usual, and they started picking on me and telling me I can't stay out so late and that I'm sneaky. This is quite unfair, because I never go any place, even with my girl friends, that I don't tell them where I am going and when I'll be home. I tried to explain that I just happened to meet this boy, but they wouldn't listen.

Last fall I was going with a very nice boy, but any time he came to the house neither of my parents would speak to him. When we broke up, I felt very bad and I blame it on them.

Don't you think I should be allowed to stay out at least till twelve, and don't you think I'm old enough to have a steady boy friend and go out on lots of dates like other girls do?—D.

Dear D.:

My answer to those questions is yes, I do think so. I also think that there may be a good deal in what you say about your parents' attitude being due to the fact that you are the only daughter left at home. It is very likely that they want to hold on to you, and so try to discourage your having young men friends lest you should marry one of them.

I suggest that any time you want to go out with a boy, you ask him if he will call your mother and request permission to take you out. Sometimes if young men make a real effort to win the friendship of parents by being specially thoughtful and courteous with them, things go better all around. As I have often said before boys these days are apt to ignore parents as though they didn't exist, and it is no wonder the parents are antagonized.

Try out this idea and then let me know how things go. If it doesn't help the situation, perhaps we can think of something else.

Never had a date? Start getting them this way

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 17 who has never had a date. I live in a small town and go to a small high school.

I have a sister 15, and she goes to more parties than I do, and has all the luck. I am hardly ever invited to parties and other social events for people my age. Somehow I just don't make a hit with boys. I'm a little bashful, too.

I wish you would print in your column some suggestions that may help me.—O. M.

Dear O. M.:

It is, I know, very hard for a girl to see her sister more popular than she is, especially when the sister is younger. Don't get too discouraged, though, for there are lots of things you can do to make a place of your own among the young people in your town.

There are some girls who are naturally lively and full of fun, and so attract people easily. Other girls are the quieter kind, and it may take a bit longer for people to realize their good points. But there is no sense in a girl of the quiet type trying to make herself over into a different sort of personality, for that never works. Instead, she should develop her own personality.

A good way to start making people aware of you as a person would be to take a pencil and paper and write down all the things you like to do, putting the ones you like best at the top. Then think of all the boys and girls you know, and see if you can figure out which of them would be most likely to be interested in some of the same things.

Let's say, for example, that you are fond of roller skating, as lots of other young people are. If you know certain boys and girls you are sure like to go roller skating, too, ask them if they wouldn't like to get together in a group and all go skating together one night a week. Then the different members of the group could take turns entertaining the others at the end of the evening with refreshments in their homes. Since you live in a small town, it shouldn't be hard to do this, as none of your homes can be too far apart.

Maybe you'll think of something that would be better than roller skating for a group activity. If so, work on that. Whatever you decide on, once you have it going, you'll find the way to more social activities will open up. Besides which, you'll get the reputation of being a peppy girl with good ideas, and the young people will want to include you in all they do.

Won't you try this and let me know if the plan succeeds?

Out With Monotony—On With Variety—in Lunch Boxes

By Mary Moore

"Mary, why don't you ever write anything about packed lunches? Don't you know that just about half of the people in this city eat their lunches out of a paper bag or black tin box?"

I'm glad I have you people to keep me in line. After receiving that letter asking me these pointed questions I went through my files and found I had not given packed lunches much attention since early last fall. For nine years we packed three lunches per day in this house but with my young people now away at school and me doing all of my work at home my lunch-packing days are over.

Dr. Pett, Director of Nutrition Services of the Department of Pensions and National Health, conducted a survey of war plants in 1942. His field workers observed that only 15 out of every 100 lunch boxes could be rated "good". This means that those "good" lunch boxes included (1) Milk—if not as a beverage, then in soup or dessert; (2) Fresh fruit or vegetable or both; and (3) Protein sandwich fillings such as meat, fish, egg, cheese, peanut butter or fowl.

With Dr. Henry C. Sherman of Columbia University as my authority I go one step further and strongly advise the use of 100 per cent whole wheat bread for making those protein-filled sandwiches.

The quality of this carried lunch can make the difference between an adequate nutritious daily diet and one that is far too starchy.

With a sharp eye on nutrition and variety I have chosen some lunch box ideas which I think your lunchers will enjoy:

LUNCH BOX MENUS

(1) Ground liver (see below) and lettuce sandwiches on whole wheat; Celery-hearts or small sticks, tangerine, date squares, milk, or cocoa in thermos.

GROUND LIVER SANDWICH FILLING

Buy 1 lb. pork or beef liver sliced, gently boil it in barely enough water to prevent sticking, until it is firm. Cool, then put through fine knife of food chopper. Add 1 tablespoon grated onion, 1 tablespoon drained chopped pickle, the juice from cooking it—there should not be more than 1-4 cup, 4 tablespoons mayonnaise, dash of tabasco or 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper to taste. You may add the butter—about 1-4 cup—to this if you like—this eliminates one spreading job when it comes to making the sandwiches. Mix all these ingredients well. Keep very cold in covered jar.

(2) Cream of Tomato Soup in Thermos; Peanut Crush and Bacon sandwiches on whole wheat bread; whole raw carrot (when cut into strips they lose some of their vitamin-content); large ripe banana; brownies.

(3) Oatmeal Meat Loaf (see below) sandwiches with lettuce on whole wheat bread; radishes; 1-inch cube of cheese; medium bunch grapes; graham wafers; milk or cocoa.

OATMEAL MEAT LOAF

Soak 1 1-4 cups quick-cooking uncooked oats in 1 1-4 cups milk. To them add 1 lb. ground meat—this may be beef, veal or mixture of beef and pork or ham, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon celery salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 well-beaten egg, 1-3 cup catsup, 2 tablespoons grated onion or 1-2 clove garlic chopped to a powder. Mix well and pack into greased loaf pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. This amount serves six, so if you have four in your family you will have enough left-over for two packed lunches.

(4) Chopped hard-cooked egg on whole wheat bread with lettuce; firm tomato; apple pie in triple wax paper or plastic pie holder, cheese, milk.

(5) Swiss cheese on rye bread; dill pickle; large orange; applesauce cake; cafe au lait (half and half strong coffee and hot milk).

I think a good lunch packer who includes a surprise every day endears herself to her loved ones forever.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. C. BEECKMAN

Today's courtesy tip

"There's no place like home" . . .yes, there's no place like home to show your kindness, to show your charm and tact, to show your consideration for others. An ever-ready "Thank you", . . a pleasant "Please" . . a nice, warm smile. . . an offer to help . . . a gracious answering of the telephone. . . .a willingness to commend . . . the generosity to compliment—how very often the thoughtfulness of a simple word or action will put a shining mood on the day or evening for a family. Good going, comfortable going.

Her 16-year-old brother as her escort, her mother to give her in marriage.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am 22 years old, to be married in May. My only sister, 20, is to be my maid of honor. My sister, my only brother, 16-years old, and I have lived with our darling mother ever since dad died, three years ago. I have no uncle or cousin whom I particularly want to ask to give me in marriage. Would it be correct for me to have my 16-year old brother walk up the aisle with me and give me in marriage?—Helene R.

My suggestion is that you give your 16-year old brother the honor of escorting you up the aisle . . .and then give your "darling mother" the honor of giving you in marriage. To do this she may simply reply "I do" as she stands in her place in the first left pew. Then what a wonderfully close and devoted family-company . . .you, the bride; your sister, your honor attendant; your brother, to escort you; and then your devoted mother to give you in marriage! All blessings to you.

No "partner" for junior bridesmaid

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My niece is to be married in June. Formal church wedding. In the bridal party: a maid of honor, a bridesmaid, and a junior bridesmaid, 10 1-2 years old. She feels that inasmuch as her other two attendants have partners, she would like to have my son, who is 11 years old, as the junior bridesmaid's partner. Although we have never seen this done, we feel that it might be optional, but would very much appreciate your opinion.—H. B.

The "partner" idea should not be applied to the children in the wedding party. The 10 1-2 year old junior bridesmaid should walk alone, in both processional and recessional. . . before the senior bridesmaid in the processional, and after the bridesmaid in the recessional. (Incidentally, your niece has placed too much emphasis on "partners" in her wedding party, and definitely not enough on the balance of her processional and recessional. For example, in her processional, every attendant must walk alone; first, the one usher; then the junior bridesmaid; then the bridesmaid; then the maid of honor, also alone. Not an attractive plan.)

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

KEEPING YOUR FACE CLEAN

In large cities; surveys are often taken of the amount of soot and grime in the air. The results would surprise you. It comes down to the fact that considerable dirt can settle on your complexion each day. A fine kettle of beauty fish, if you ask us.

Face-washing too often is a casual matter—especially among teen-agers who are susceptible to blackheads that frequently develop into acne. The bedtime complexion scrubbing should be done with plenty of water warm to fluff up a rich suds and a bland soap that lathers quickly. The complexion brush is a help. When you buy one, do not economize; only high grade brushes are worth the investment. The bristles must not be so firm that they are irritating to a tender skin, but must be substantial enough so that they do not bend or mat when wet.

Send the soaped brush around in circles, over the neck, the jawline, the cheeks, the forehead. When the suds are distributed, pat the flesh lightly, to force the lather into the pores. This brisk friction will make the blood streams dance and will normalize the functioning of the glands.

Rinse with warm water; cold water will not free the flesh of the lather, though it can be used afterward if the complexion is oily or the tissues are softening.

Some women depend entirely upon cleansing creams. That system works out all right for those who have extremely dry skins that are sensitive to soap. It would be better if a cream were used first for the removal of make-up, then the face washed thoroughly with warm water and a cosmetic meal, after which cream should be used again.

You will find these meals on cosmetic counters. The basic ingredients, usually, is powdered oatmeal. It not only serves as an ideal cleansing agent, but is soothing and healing because of its starchy content.

Young persons should be particularly mindful of facial renovating. There should be two soapy treatments, one in the morning another at bedtime. Washcloths should be fresh every day, towels should be soft, and made of materials that absorb water quickly. Also, to guard against acne, youngsters should cut down on butter, cream and pastries that cause the sebaceous glands to become overactive and to clog the pores with a wax-like substance.

Britain This Week Passes Milestone With Sorrow for a Dead King And Pride in Reigning Queen

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—With sorrow for a dead King and pride in a reigning Queen, Britain this week passes a milestone in her long island story.

A year ago Friday, King George VI died in his sleep and the crown passed to his elder daughter, Elizabeth.

Now, as the Queen surveys the first 12 months of her reign, sadness at her father's death may be tempered by a quiet conviction that she has met and passed the tests of office. The new Elizabethan age, observers agree, is off to a flying start.

The Royal Family's prestige has never been higher.

Pride and Rejoicing

When the King died Feb. 6, 1952, it was as though a sigh went round the world. The country's profound emotional reaction gradually gave way to pride and rejoicing in the frail-seeming yet resolute young Elizabeth, first British Queen in more than half a century.

As the second year unfolded there were signs that the radiantly happy sovereign, maturing to her tasks as Victoria had before her, was leading Britain along a comeback road in which the great emotive force of royalty could perhaps play more than a wishful part.

The Queen spent the busiest year of her life. She opened Parliament, presided over state functions in Buckingham Palace, gave garden parties and receptions, made hundreds of decisions, tactfully thought of what seemed spontaneous questions to hundreds of people she often had never seen before. Ahead lay the ordeal of the Coronation.

At her side was her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, adding a new dimension to the concept of royalty. The vigorous, dashing duke went about making speeches which, considering the royal tradition, were surprisingly pointed. His theme was Britain's role in the modern world and her compelling need to use science and technology in the uphill economic struggle.

"Let it never be said that Great Britain became the poor relation of the British Commonwealth in our time," he said.

British Recovery

And as though to show there was something more than fancy in all the talk of new Elizabethan greatness, the country made some progress. The year 1952 had opened in a melancholy spirit of crisis and prophecies of doom. Britain was near bankruptcy. The year 1953 started with the country in better financial shape than in any year since 1947—although reduction in imports accounted for the improvement.

The notable economic event of the first Elizabethan year was the meeting of Commonwealth prime ministers and finance ministers, which ended in December with plans for an approach to the United States for a policy based on "trade not aid."

During the Commonwealth economic conference the Queen gave a dinner party for the visiting ministers at Buckingham Palace and also gave an audience to Canada's Prime Minister St. Laurent. Earlier she had seen among others External Affairs Minister Lester Pearson and Vincent Massey, now governor-general of Canada.

While settling down to the varied and exacting duties of queenship, Elizabeth found time for visits to Sandringham and Balmoral, attended the famous summer race meeting at Ascot, inspected Canadian sea cadets in the garden of Buckingham Palace, held investitures and presentation parties and supervised certain preparations for the Coronation. At busy times, she signed her name 100 times a day.

On Christmas Day, she broadcast a call to her people, urging them "whatever your religion, to pray for me" on Coronation Day next June 2.

She spoke from the study at Sandringham House, using the chair and desk that served her father and grandfather George V.

Encouraging Signs

There were some encouraging signs in the first Elizabethan year. Britain exploded her first atomic bomb off Australia's Monte Bello Islands, announced the projected opening of an atomic plant, established a clear lead in civilian transport aircraft with the Comet airliner and seemed far ahead, at least on the drawing board, with new types of jet military aircraft.

In what was believed the largest single dollar order for United Kingdom-manufactured goods since the war Canada ordered 15 Vickers Viscount turbo-prop airliners for delivery in 1954-55. Far-sighted Britons urged the nation to think of its aircraft factories as it once thought of its shipyards. Aircraft exports now run about £43,000,000 annually, only some £10,000,000 less than ship exports.

In domestic affairs, rationing remained in effect on staple commodities such as meat, cheese, butter and sugar, but prospects were brighter for everything except butter. Tea, a precious British brew, was freed completely. Housing restrictions were relaxed, and in 1953 a man could build his own house, within certain specifications.

Thus in the grey, blitzed heart of Empire, with its old Victorian houses, its still formidable list of restrictions, its precarious financial condition and dirty railway stations, despite the thickest fogs in years, most people looked with greater confidence to the future.

Women's Institute

SPRINGBROOK W.I.

The Springbrook Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. W. J. Barlow for the January meeting, with a good attendance of members.

Mrs. Charles Gordanier presided over the meeting and opened it in the usual manner.

The secretary stated a fine amount had been realized from the dance and catering to another dance earlier in the month, and a successful card party — 13 tables—held at the home of Mrs. C. Gordanier, and $25 had been donated to the recreational centre.

It was decided to send boxes to a soldier in Korea, the first to be packed and sent for Easter, also that a box of fruit be sent to a sick member.

Mrs. A. P. Williams was in charge of the following program on Canadian Industries.

The motto: "Beauty does not lie in the face, it lies in the harmony between man and his industries," was given by Mrs. George Thompson.

Mrs. G. Webb gave two readings on "Trees," and Mrs. B. Bateman gave a fine paper on the topic, "Paper Industry in Canada." This was followed with an interesting contest conducted by Mrs. J. McKeown.

At the close of the meeting the hostess and assistants served refreshments.

CANNIFTON - CORBYVILLE W.I.

The Cannifton - Corbyville Women's Institute held its January meeting in the town hall, Cannifton. There was an attendance of 22 members and three visitors.

Cards of thanks were read. A bazaar to be held in the fall was voted on, also a quilt is to be raffled at the next meeting. Mrs. Helen Shorey is in charge of the tickets. Reports were given by the standing committees.

The president, Mrs. Florence Bleekman turned the meeting over to Mrs. Bill Latchford, who started her program with an interesting talk on Canadian Industries by Mr. Phillipps from the Northern Electric.

Mrs. Anne Soble and Mrs. Ruby Poste gave short poems; Mrs. Latchford conducted two contests which were won by Mrs. F. Moore and Miss Milton.

There was a popular sing-song while Mrs. D. Melbourne and her committee prepared tasty refreshments. A social half hour was enjoyed.

Club Activities

SUNBEAM MISSION BAND

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Sunbeam Mission Band of White's District held its January meeting at Quinte View school on Thursday afternoon with almost perfect attendance. The president, Grace Goldie, presided and opened the meeting.

The Scripture, Genesis I, 1-5 was read by Karl Arthur. The singing of "Jesus Bids Us Shine" by Nancy Hockaday, Audrey Bowers, and Sylvia Bilham closed the worship service.

The roll call was answered by the payment of dues. A "Happy Birthday" was sung to Heather MacKenzie, Anne Blong, Wayne Copeland, Sheila Caves, Sandra Farrar and Monty Droulliard who were celebrating their birthdays in January.

The study book "Nyanga's Two Villages" was read by Marilyn Bowers, Barbara Shoemaker and Gail Gingras. It told of a shooting contest with bow and arrow among the boys and also of village life.

The Leader, Mrs. Young read an African story, "Cassova's Christmas Baby," from the Missionary Monthly. Both of these stories had their setting in Angola, Africa.

Canadian Army Nurses Will Shortly be Serving Closer To the Korean Front Line

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (By Mail)—(CP)—Canadian Army nursing sisters will shortly be serving closer to the Korean front line.

They are expected to be posted to the 25th Canadian field dressing station, in the general area of Tokchong, within a month. Tokchong is 25 miles north of Seoul.

Canadian nurses first were posted to Korea last September, when a reorganization of Commonwealth division medical facilities was begun by Col. G. L. Morgan Smith of Barrie, Ont., director of the division's medical services.

Came From Japan

Morgan Smith moved the station out of Seoul and formed in its place a "communications zone hospital" with nurses attached from the Commonwealth Base General Hospital in Kure, Japan. The station was moved forward to undertake a greater share of the work from the immediate front.

Morgan Smith's reorganization has enabled the less-severely-injured and not-so-ill soldiers to be treated in Korea and returned directly to their units on recovery. Formerly most had to go back to Kure for treatment.

Surgery done at the Tokchong station is of the "elective" kind, the sort the soldier asks to have done, or is not obviously caused by enemy action—appendectomies, hernias and the like. Also treated there are casualties who have had surgery at a United States Army mobile surgical hospital and will have early recovery.

U.S. Army nurses throughout the war have served relatively close to the front.

Release Orderlies

Surgical nursing at the station has been done until now by nursing orderlies of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. Morgan Smith says they have done a "terrific" job but have borne "unfair responsibility." Post-operative nursing should be done by graduate nurses, trained for the job, freeing the orderlies for work in the medical wards.

Morgan Smith has argued that since the Korea set-up now is saving the hospital in Kure so much work it is only fair that a share of its resources should help bear the increased load in the field.

First step was the placing of nursing sisters, under Matron Capt. Elizabeth Pence of Winnipeg, in Seoul. Approval to move nurses forward to Tokchong is expected to be forthcoming.

First Canadian appointment likely will be Matron Pence, who will have a composite staff of British and Australian nursing sisters with her. To start with, four sisters will be posted.

Apart from the medical and manpower factors, says Morgan Smith, the nurses' presence would be good psychologically as an element in post-operative recovery.

Night Clubs, Cabarets, Cafes Primping in Hopes Week Of Coronation Will be Gay

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — London's night clubs, cabarets and restaurants are primping in hopes that the Coronation season will be the brightest since the gay days of the Edwardians.

The patron's tab will be more than it was in the boisterious pre-1914 days, or than it is right now, although the exact scale hasn't been decided yet in many places.

But the entertainment ingredients won't have changed much, despite any new-fangled wrappings, from the showman's standby of the ages. There'll be girls, wine, girls, song and girls.

Jamaican girls, "Lucious lovelies . . . all very artistic of course," are being imported by a club-cabaret for two shows nightly during the six-week season.

Standard props of Gypsy music, soft lights and garden dining will be featured. In fact, lighting seems a major item in the general face lifting.

Subtle illumination reaches the ultimate in the garden of a club owned by Rico Dajou where a table for two is perched in a tree.

One club is flying over plane loads of Americans who, it is hoped, will do the town by night and sleep by day in the plane.

A Canadian, at first glance, might get the impression that London's night life is pretty tame except in Mayfair and Soho. Exceptions can be found but most sections roll up the streets well before midnight.

Generally speaking, the city after dark lacks the garish touch externally of Paris or New York but the clubs, once you're inside, are just about the same.

One British newspaper, the Evening News, gave a sample of what may be expected in prices when it reported the case of four overseas visitors who paid more than $30 for two bottles of champagne and chicken sandwiches in a West End dine-and-dance spot.

For straight eating, prices range from the stiffest at elegant Mayfair premises to bargains at out-of-the-way spots. Soho, famed for eating places and notorious for its after-dark reputation, can provide a none-too-elaborate meal with a minimum of wine for under $3 a person.

Gastronomic entertainment alone won't suffice for many visitors, however, most club men hope. "Les girls" will be in demand.

As one of the main night club moguls summed it up for Noel Whitcomb of the Daily Mirror: "Anatomy is something we all have, but we've got to remember that it looks better on girls!"

FOXBORO

Foxboro — A large number of young people attended the skating party at Stirling on Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Wilson returned home on Wednesday evening after spending a month in Florida.

RAWDON

Rev. A. W. Lougheed Gives Talk on 'Trend Of the Times'

RAWDON — On Sunday afternoon, at Mount Pleasant United Church, Mrs. Malcolm Sharp presided at the piano and Rev. R. R Bonsteel introduced Rev. A. W. Lougheed, Port Hope, who spoke in the interests of The Ontario Temperance Federation. His message to the boys and girls was based on the theme, "the talents we refuse to use we lose."

Mr. Lougheed chose as his text "Righteousness exalteth a nation but sin is a reproach to any people." The speaker voiced his personal loyalty to the motherland and the joy of being a Canadian. He told of the inexhaustible mineral supply in Canada and spoke of the trend of the times when evils and bad ideas are stealthily creeping in to wreck the way of wholesome life. "The task today is urgent in order to give our youth a chance to make good. If we don't claim them now as our "market" for sobriety, the opposition will win them later for indulgence."

In 1951, the latest figures given out by the brewers and distilleries said they sold $642 millions worth of their products. The Federation needs two fieldmen to give leadership to the temperance cause. There are 27,000 copies of "The Advocate" circulated monthly; 2,000 pieces of literature are distributed weekly to churches, to schools and community organizations.

The speaker closed his message urging the four main words — Pray, Study, Serve and Give.

The Carmel congregation are withdrawing their afternoon service on Sunday, July 5th in order that they may attend the special service at Mount Pleasant in recognition of the debt we owe to the Baptists who set up the first churches in Rawdon township.

Mr. and Mrs. John Carlisle of Wellmans, attended Carmel pie social on Thursday evening.

The mumps have visited several people in the Carmel disrict with a few other cases in the township.

Mrs. Charles Bailey, Carmel, had the misfortune to dislocate her shoulder.

Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Phillips of Burche's Falls, spent a recent holiday with relatives in this district.

A large number of folk from Stirling and district attended the formal dance in Frankford on Friday evening held under the auspices of the Masonic Order.

Mrs. Bob Philp, River Valley, spent the week-end with her sister-in-law, in Bowmanville.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Spencer, Toronto, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Spencer also Mr. and Mrs. Merle Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott and family attended a shower on Tuesday evening, in the Legion Hall, Campbellford, in honor of Mr. Aubrey Sharp and his bride, the former Miss Joan Sloan, of Brighton. Aubrey is well-known here as he is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sharp, former residents on the fourth concession.

Mrs. Donald Campbell spent last week with friends at Gananoque.

Mr. and Mrs. Orno Sharp attended the religious educational service at Marmora, on Wednesday evening.

On Sunday morning, the Mission Band will convene after Sunday School for its regular meeting.

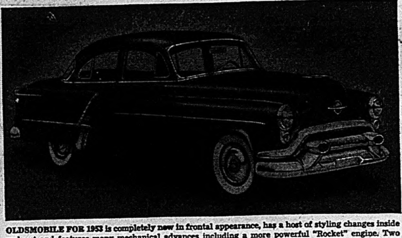
Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Linn and Ruth entertained on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wells and family and Mrs. W. C. Pitman, Stirling, also Mrs. James Linn.

Several folk have been ill with an attack of influenza. The germs seem to have been going the rounds all through January.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith and family spent the week-end in Trenton, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bedford.

A dozen folk from Mount Pleasant attended Carmel pie social Thursday evening. Kalvin and Carol Shrap and Mrs. Percy MacMullen, assisted with the program.

Those who viewed the eclipse of the moon on Thursday evening had a real view without any obstructions as the eclipse came on full, the crescent seemed to hang by a thin cord and then a full shadow covered the view for a few seconds. Several folk had never been privileged to see an eclipse previous to this.



OLDSMOBILE FOR 1953 is completely new in frontal appearance, has a host of styling changes inside and out and features many mechanical advances including a more powerful "Rocket" engine. Two series, the Classic "98" and Super "88", offer a total of seven body styles in a wide array of new solid and two-tone color combinations. Frigidaire car conditioning, that cools the car interior in the warmest weather; and a safety-padded instrument panel, are options at extra cost on the "98" series. Directional signals are standard equipment on all models. Both series offer, as extra options, "Pedal Ease" power brakes, for faster, safer stops; Power steering; the Autronic Eye, an automatic headlight dimmer; and Hydra-Matic Super Drive. Shown here is the Oldsmobile Super "88" four-door sedan.

WELLMAN'S

Rawdon — On Friday evening, Wellman's Women's Institute, under the leadership of the president, Mrs. Douglas Clancy, and her committee, sponsored the first euchre party of this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Tompkins opened their home for the occasion and 11 tables of euchre were played. The prizes were awarded as follows: Ladies' high, Mrs. Everett Maybee; ladies' low, Miss Frances Clapp; men's high, Douglas Clancy; men's low, Glen Hinds; lucky draw on door ticket, Mrs. Robert Wallace.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed. The Institute plans to sponsor another party at a later date.

REDNERSVILLE

Queensboro — Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Anderson and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Anderson, Bonarlaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allair and family, Peterborough, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Allair.

Mr. Allen Gordon, Kingston, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon.

Mr. Leslie Holmes, Kinmount, spent the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Holmes.

Miss M. Greene, Peterborough, was a guest of her sister, Miss Jessie Greene, over the week-end.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Leslie over the week-end were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sager, Ottawa, also Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Stark, Peterborough.

Messrs. Allen Ramsay and Frank Alexander, of Oshawa, spent the week-end at their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Laffin and Rose spent Sunday in Marmora with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hullsman.

Mr. John W. Moore, Hamilton, spent the week-end at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Whalen, Sharon and Maureen, and Mr. and Mrs. Stafford Whalen, Stoco, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bosley, on Sunday.

Queensboro Girls' Club held its seventh meeting at the home of Mrs. John Moore on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Boldrick, of Tweed, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Holgate.

Misses Diana Holmes and Barbara Sager, Belleville, spent the week-end at their respective homes.

The January meeting of the W.A. was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. E. Lewis. A quilt was quilted.

Mr. Latta, of Tweed, demonstrated a supper at the home of Mrs. John Moore on Thursday evening. 25 members of the Women's Institute were entertained.

3rd. HILLIER

3rd. Hillier — Sorry to report Mr. Norman Foster, of Cold Creek, ill at Belleville General Hospital. Mr. Delbert Boyle is looking after his barn work during Mr. Foster's illness.

Mr. Gordon Lloyd and boys are ill with the 'flu.

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Boyle entertained their young nephews, the Lavender boys, of Wellington, last week.

The Guild is planning another card party on Valentine day at Hillier town hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Benway and Mr. Charles Benway were in Picton on Friday.

The Institute is planning a pot-luck supper at Hillier town hall on February 5. Everyone welcome. Visitors to bring one dish.

Mrs. Herbert Panting is much improved in health under the doctor's care.

Past Noble Grands' Club Holds Meeting

STIRLING — The January meeting of the Past Noble Grands' Club met last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Sis. Marion Wells with Sis Edna Fox as co-hostess.

The president, Sis Gena Spry, opened the meeting with the reading of a poem. Sis Edith Utman presided at the piano.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Sis Hazel Mumby with Sis Gladys Elliott and Sis Annie Warren as program committee. The Sisters were delighted to have Sis Lyda McKee with them again after her recent illness.

Program

In the absence of Sis Grace Vandervoort and Sis Effie Bailey, Sis Neva Vandervoort took charge of the program which was as follows:

Instrumental, Sis. Mildred Morrow; reading by Sis. Edith Utman; duet, Sis. Annie Warren and Sis. Mildred Morrow. Sis. Vandervoort staged a vegetable contest which proved most interesting.

The hostesses served appetizing refreshments.

During the social hour Sis. Ward and Sis. Agnes Johansen (Hammond) called to have a social chat. All were pleased to see Sis. Johansen looking so well.

Sis. Gena Spry moved a vote of thanks to the hostess and co-hostess and to all who helped to make the afternoon such an enjoyable one. The Sisters responded in the usual way.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mr. and Mrs. Clare Millar and family of Belleville were recent dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush.

Premier Stalin Has Put Heat On Ukraine

LONDON (Reuters) — Premier Stalin has put the heat on the Ukraine in his current drive against Jewish and "bourgeois" influence, press and radio reports from Moscow indicate.

A substantial purge of officialdom there seems under way. Several Ukrainian ministers have already been attacked for alleged failures and ineptitude.

The Ukraine, southern Soviet republic known as the granary of the U.S.S.R., together with its neighboring republic of Byelo-Russia, contains a substantial proportion of the roughly 2,500,000 Jews in the Soviet Union. The Ukraine, with its population of more than 38,000,000 (1939 census) is the second biggest Soviet republic.

Not only has Jewish influence always been strong in the Ukraine but there has often been evidence in the past of tendencies towards "nationalism." The Kremlin has tried to "sovietize" all Ukrainian culture.

Killed Two With Stone

Stalin, by putting the squeeze on "Zionist" and "bourgeois" influence in the Ukraine, may be trying to kill two birds with one stone —keeping the Jewish element firmly in check and suppressing "nationalist tendencies."

The latest public attack, in the local newspaper Pravda Ukraine Feb. 1, was on Justice Minister Panasiuk and his ministry and on lawyers said to have accepted bribes.

Earlier Trade Minister Zaporozhets, Food Minister Gritsiuk, Meat and Milk Minister Butenko and Local Industry Minister Gritsenko came under heavy fire for alleged failings.

Set of Moose Antlers Carries Tale of Knife, Fork Shooting

FREDERICTON (CP)—This is the story of a moose that was shot with a knife and fork, a frog orchestra and other strange events in the life of the late Dr. O. E. Morehouse.

His son, Dr. O. E. Morehouse has an extensive array of natural history exhibits collected by his father.

Few specimens of Canadian wild life fail to find a place among the stuffed and mounted items in the Morehouse collection.

One of the prize trophies is a mounted caribou head, one of the last killed before that species of wild life vanished from New Brunswick.

Another set of moose antlers carries the tale of the knife-and-fork shooting. Dr. Morehouse and several friends, so the story goes, had a hunting camp not far from the home of a shrewd hunter who happened to be out for game birds, armed with shotgun and bird-shot ammunition.

Smart Nimrod

He spotted a moose, which didn't spot him, giving time to plan his course of action. First he emptied the small shot from the shell, broke off the blade of his jack-knife and rammed it into the casing.

He fired from 20 yards and the moose fell, founded but still full of fight. This time the hunter used a piece of iron fork from his ration kit. That shot did the trick.

Another of Dr. Morehouse's top attractions is his collection of frogs. He had one set mounted in different positions, armed with musical instruments and arranged as an orchestra. It took two years to complete.

Also extensive is the weapon collection including various types of old pistols and muskets and more modern weapons. Included is a pair of long-barrelled muskets used by Morehouse ancestors during the Amesican Revolution.

Dulles Warns Quick Union Price of Continued U.S. Aid As He Leaves for Germany

First Canadian Civilians to Receive Korea Medal

Sheila Douglas

Virginia Cook

First Canadian civilians to receive their country's Korea medal for service with U.N. forces in the Far East, are Virginia Cook of Calgary, and Sheila Douglas of Ottawa, members of a 17-member Canadian Red Cross team stationed in Tokyo and Kure, Japan, and Seoul, Korea, providing welfare services and supervision of recreational programs for Canadian troops. Both saw overseas service with the Red Cross during World War II. Since arriving in Japan in May, 1952, the two have spent much of their time in Korea. — Central Press Canadian Photos.

LONDON (AP)—John Foster Dulles left London by plane today for West Germany—the next stop on his lightning tour to convince Western Europe that quick armed union against possible communist aggression is the price of continued big-scale American aid.

The U. S. secretary of state told newspaper men at the airport that his brief visit to the British capital revealed basic accord in Anglo-American policies.

In the West German capital, Dulles and the U. S. mutual security administrator, Harold Stassen, will tell Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and other leaders that the U.S. government expects positive action on the proposed one-uniform European army in 75 days.

Informants said Dulles set this time limit in his London talks Wednesday with Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and in previous conversations with French and Italian government chiefs.

Deadline April 20

On this timetable, the deadline would be April 20—just three days before the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic treaty council hold their next meeting in Paris.

In a written statement given to reporters at the airport, Dulles said Britain and the United States "are in accord as to our basic aims of peace, security and economic well-being and stability."

"As regards the means of attaining the goal," he said, "our differences of opinion are very minor as compared with the large area of agreement."

As in his Paris and Rome talks, Dulles was reported to have made it clear to the British government that uless progress is made on the six-country army project within the 75 days, the U. S. Congress may refuse to pour any more foreign aid into this part of the world.

The project—known as the European Defence Community — would unite troops from France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg into a fighting force under a single command.

None Ratify Treaty

None of the participating countries has yet ratified the EDC treaty, although Adenauer said Sunday the issue would be placed before his Parliament the week of March 9. The proposal faces the implacable political party in the country.

Britain does not plan to become a full member of the European army but has forwarded to EDC members a proposal for linking British units with the projected defence force in case of emergency.

Dulles is known to have urged even closer British co-operation with the plan.

West German Socialists complain that Germany would not have equal rights with other countries under the projected treaties and that the bulk of the Germans opose them.

An alliance of the free countries of Europe, including Britain and the Scandinavian countries, is preferable to the EDC plan in Socialist eyes.

VETERAN SKIPPER

STOCKHOLM (CP) — Captain Sigfrid Ericson, commodore of the Swedish American Steamship line is retiring this year after 32 years' service. For the last 10 years he has commanded the motorship Gripsholm, which will be taken over by Captain H. G. Nordenson.

Crown Completes Evidence In Murder Trial

VALLEYFIELD, Que. (CP)—The Crown completed its case Wednesday against Lawrence Sundae, an Indian charged wit h the knife-murder of another Indian, Jake Buckshot, on a reserve last July.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police told the court that when they entered Sundae's house to question him, he said: "I must have lost my temper.'

Constable M. Tremblay of the RCMP said he heard Sundae tell someone: "I did not mean to kill him."

Provincial police read a confession allegedly made to them at headquarters. In it, Sundae said:

"I came back to Massena (a nearby centre) at 11 o'clock the night of the 19th. I was sober because I never touch beer or hard liquor. I heard Jake Buckshot tell my brother Frank: 'I will stab you if you ever come over here.'"

Earlier in the day, Frank Sundae testified he and Buckshot had been quarrelling outside the Sundae home when Lawrence came out, roused by the noise of the quarrel. Buckshot took a swing at him.

The confession continued:

"Then I got up, dressed, picked up a knife and went outside. Buckshot tried to hit me with his fist but he missed me. I then hit him in the abdomen once and again in the shoulder."

Dr. [illegible] Fontaine, Quebec medico-legal expert, testified earlier that Buckshot died from a wound caused by a sharp instrument which cut an artery leading to the kidneys.

The incident took place at Chenail, on the Quebec section of the reserve which also includes territory in Ontario, not far from Cornwall.

Changes Would Allow Queen To Rule Denmark

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — Constitutional changes to make Denmark more democratic and to allow a queen to reign over the country were taken up by Parliament Wednesday.

The most popular change would alter the rules of royal succession to allow 12-year-old Princess Margrethe, freckle-faced daughter of King Frederik IX, to ascend the throne.

The changes worked out among all major political parties, were presented by Prime Minister Rik Erikson. They provide that:

1. A woman may come to the throne if there is no direct male heir. This means that if Queen Ingrid does not bear 53-year-old Kink Frederik a son (they already have three daughters), Princess Margrethe would become queen. The change would oust Prince Knud, Frederik's 52-year-old brother, as heir apparent.
2. The age requirement for voters will be lowered from the present 25 to 23 or 21.
3. The upper house of Parlament Landsting will be abolished and Parliament will have a single house. The Landsting is a mere rubber stamp for the lower house.
4. Greenland, long a Danish colony, will become a full part of Denmark and will be represented in Parliament.

The constitutional changes must be approved by Parliament, then national elections will be held in April under the old constitution and the new Parliament will have to approve.

Next the issue will be put up to the people and 45 per cent of the entire eligible electorate will have to say "yes." Only then will the king sign the new constitution.

Ends Happily

CORNWALL (CP) — A six-months romance ended happily in the county home for the aged this week when 70-year-old Mrs. Christina McLeod was married to Francis Nicolas Duvall, 79.

The ceremony was performed at the home. Afterwards the newly-weds moved from single quarters into the wing for married couples.

Mr. Duvall came to the home a year ago and met his bride six months ago when she moved in.

B.C. Hospital to Dismiss Staff, Close Doors; Compulsory Plan Falls Short of Meeting Costs

VANCOUVER (CP) — The high cost of healing the sick is threatening to close at least one British Columbia hospital. Others face a similar problem.

The North Vancouver General Hospital, civic-owned and seventh largest in B. C., has threatened to dismiss its staff and close its doors unless the government increases its financial aid or its employees drop demands for higher pay and shorter working hours.

The hospital's position turns a hot spotlight on the provincial government's compulsory hospital insurance service, which since its introduction in 1949 has checked hospital budgets in B. C and then decided on the rates it will pay each one.

Grants Unchanged

Last year the insurance service increased its payments to hospitals with higher budgets. But this year, in an announcement last Dec. 1 by Health Minister Eric Martin, the hospitals learned they would have to get by with the same amount as last year.

Said the North Vancouver General: it just won't work.

And to give weight to its argument, it has announced that after next Tuesday, no new patients will be admitted and the 140 persons now under its care must leave by Feb. 27. Most hospital workers have already been notified they will be out of a job Feb. 28.

The hospital is not the only one in B. C. to threaten drastic action because of increasing deficits. The board of Revelstoke's Queen Victoria Hospital meets this month to consider handing over the hospital to the government and the Enderby Hospital in the interior may soon close.

Cost Beyond Means

In his announcement, the Social Credit health minister said:

"The government feels that the cost of hospitalization in B. C. is accelerating at a pace which is beyond the means of the people to support."

He added that the daily rate "should be decreased wherever possible."

Under current regulations, the insurance service pays the public ward rate and patients, in addition to their insurance premiums, pay $1 a day to the hospital for every day they spend there. Thus the North Vancouver General receives $13.50 daily for each insured patient.

Since his announcement of the rate freeze, Mr. Martin has met with the B. C. Hospitals Association. The meeting apparently solved nothing.

Pressure on the freshman Social Credit government has also come from the Hospital Employees Federal Union. Speaking for its hospital workers, it urged the cabinet to permit hospitals to increase their budgets when wage increases are granted through negotiation or arbitration.

Wage Demands

The crisis was reached in North Vancouver when hospital engineers represented by the International Union of Operating Engineers (TLC), and registered nurses submitted their contract demands.

Both groups have demanded a 40-hour week and other concessions which hospital trustees say would cost an additional $72,000 this year. Negotiations are continuing with the nurses. The engineers have already voted in favor of strike action.

The hospital says in a final hope that a shutdown can be avoided, it is attempting to arrange a meeting between a two-man hospital delegation and the health minister. There was no word immediately when or if the meeting will be held.

If the hospital does close, it is presumed the patients can be absorbed in other hospitals in the greater Vancouver district. The General is the only hospital in North Vancouver (pop. 16,000) and it also serves a wide surrounding area.

Senator Honored

OTTAWA (CP)—The predominantly-male senate took time out Wednesday to wish happy birthday to one of its two women members—Senator Cairine Wilson (L—Ontario).

Amid desk-thumping from her male colleagues, Senator Wilson was given a bouquet of yellow roses to mark her 67th birthday.

Senator Wilson, celebrating her 22nd year in the Senate this month, and Senator Iva Fallis (PC—Ontario) are the only women members of the 102-seat upper chamber.

Beef Producers Alarmed About Cattle Rustling

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario beef producers are attempting to rouse province-wide action against an outbreak of rustling which cost farmers an estimated $100,000 last summer.

County representatives to the convention of the Ontario Agricultural Council were asked Wednesday to form a committee which would solicit contributions from all counties to help pay rewards for the apprehension of rustlers.

The request was made by B. B. Warnica, president of the Ontario Beef Producers Association, who estimated that provincial police had investigated or were investigating theft of $30,000 worth of cattle.

Mr. Warnica said he believed that great numbers of stolen cattle had not been reported and he estimated the total loss would reach six figures.

He gave this picture:

The epidemic of rustling broke out in Elgin county last summer, but later spread to almost every part of southern Ontario.

Provincial police cracked what they believed to be a well-organized ring in Elgin county and one man has been convicted while five others face trial on cattle thievery charges.

In Carleton county, $5,000 worth of cattle were stolen in a brief period, some of them from stables. Kent county has offered a $500 reward for apprehension of cattle thieves.

Will Send Motors

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says today in a dispatch from The Hague that a planeload of outboard motors "would be the greatest assistance Canada could give this storm-shattered nation."

The story, by the newspaper's editor-in-chief, Oakley Dalgleish, who stopped off in Holland en route home from a visit to South Africa, says the motors are needed to speed the work of evacuating families of Zeeland and South Holland.

PROUD CENTENARIAN

ST. IVES, England. (CP) — Mrs. E. M. Freeman celebrated her 100th birthday in this Cornwall town. Among her nine children was the late Sir Ralph Freeman, designer of the Sydney harbor bridge in Australia.

Candy Taken Off Ration List In Great Britain

LONDON (Reuters) — A hesitant food ministry endeared itself to the sticky-fisted generation by taking candy off the ration Wednesday. The kids were drooling.

It's the first time in 11 years that candy has been decontrolled except for a brief period in 1949. The Labor government tried it then, but hastily clamped rationing back on four months later when it was found that nobody but the early birds got any.

The move falls in with Prime Minister Churchill's aim of freeing Britons from the shackles of the ration book. Eggs are expected to be freed about April 1, and there have been rumors that meat will follow early next year.

It has been known for weeks that candy would be decontrolled in time for the Coronation June 2, but no one expected it before April or May. The ration has been six ounces a week.

Manufacturers were quick to react with demands for extra sugar. One trade official estimated 30,000 tons above present allocations would be needed to meet the demand. Food Minister Gwilym Lloyd-George told the House of Commons: "I have no doubt whatsoever that stocks are sufficient."

Cow Has Quints, Four Survive

FAIRVIEW, Mont. (AP) — A Shorthorn cow gave birth to five calves late Tuesday—a feat described by veterinarian D. C. Baker as "one in a million". Baker said the cow is owned by Adam and Edward Buxbaum. She gave birth to three heifers and two bulls. One of the calves died, but the other four were reported in "fine" condition today.

Britain Increases Position as Leading Tanker Nation

LONDON (CP) — The maritime countries of the world began 1953 operations with a tanker fleet aggregating 32,373,775 deadweight tons, more than twice the tonnage afloat in 1939. The figure shortly before outbreak of the Second World War was 16,078,000 tons.

The analysis, prepared by the shipbroker firm of Davies and Newman, shows that Britain not only maintained her position as the leading tanker nation, but increased her margin over the United States.

During the six-month period ending Jan. 1, the world fleet was enlarged by 1,600,000 tons. Of this figure 190,000 tons were added to the British flotilla, to bring the United Kingdom's grand total of 7,336,450 tons, or 22.37 per cent of the world's tonnage.

The United States is listed in second place with 7,069,170 tons, representing 21.5 per cent of the world total. Next came Norway with a six-months' increase of 235,000 tons to 5,044,150 tons, or 15.4 per cent.

Liberia reported the largest proportional increase by expanding her tanker fleet to 1,500,000 tons, a boost of 38 per cent. Denmark also reported a substantial gain of 25 per cent to 580,450 tons.

During the second half of 1952 tonnage contracted or building rose by 850,000 tons, bringing the world's total to 14,542,000 tons with approximately 5,100,000 tons going to British ship - building yards. Among other leading countries Germany had contracts for 1,615,800 tons and the United States 1,465,000 tons.

TEACHERS ACCEPT RAISE

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton secondary school teachers voted Tuesday to accept an offer of a salary increase of $200 across the board plus incorporation of the cost-of-living bonus, now $280, into the basic salary. The offer was made by the board of education and is subject to its final approval when it meets Feb. 12. The Teachers Federation originally asked for across-the-board increases of $800.

DOG BITES BOY

The milkman slips on your icy walk. Your dog bites someone or knocks a child over. A week-end guest slips on a scatter rug. You may hit another player with a golf ball. Everyone knows how easy it is to have an accident and in the eyes of the law, the person responsible for the accident is going to pay.

The injured person cannot only claim for medical treatment and loss of income but for compensation for pain and suffering and it is not unusual to find claims being awarded by the courts for amounts like $30,000 and $50,000.

If you have never inquired about the cost of liability insurance you will be surprised how low the premiums are and your estate will be much more secure with our insurance to protect you.

4. Consumer spending increased to $14,300,000,000 from $13,300,000,000 in 1951, while combined federal, provincial and municipal government spending on goods and services climbed to $4,200,000,000 from $3,200,000,000.

The world situation was not so bright. Seven years ago, he observed, the world set out to clear away trade restrictions and discriminations, and still the goal has not been reached.

"Indeed," he said, "restrictions on trade and payments are in many cases more rather than less severe than they were some years ago."

He made no direct references to the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London last December but noted "encouraging signs" that some important countries are changing their approach to the restrictions problem.

If it was the primary responsibility of the deficit countries—the sterling area—to organize themselves in such a way that they have goods to export, it also was the primary responsibility of the surplus countries—Canada and the U. S. —"to allow competition from abroad to take place and not to prevent but rather to encourage an increased inflow of goods."

". . .It is greatly to be hoped that the policies of the U. S. will be of a character which gives encouragement and support to a fresh effort to attain international balance with less reliance on weakening restrictions and by methods which increase the underlying strength and efficiency of the economies of the free world."

Show Divergent Trends

This is not the first time the two indexes have shown divergent trends. Several times in the past, the new index has gone one way and the old index the other.

The bureau explained the reason for this was that the new yardstick accounts for several changes in food buying habits while the old index does not.

In December, the food sub-index in the new index continued to show a decline while in the old one, the sub-group increased.

The bureau said that generally eggs and oranges showed price drops while fresh vegetables and beef increased.

Rents increased, with the sub-index climbing to a new high. Coal, electricity and telephone rates were higher in some areas.

Food Group Drops

In the new index, the food sub-group dropped to 113.5 from 114.1, the second consecutive decline in this column. Shelter, which includes rents, climbed to 122.3 from 122.2.

The clothing column remained unchanged at 109.7, while the household operations sub-group rose to 116.5 from 116.1.

In the old index, the food sub-group increased to 226.2 from 226.1; rents to 150.2 from 149.9; fuel and light to 153.9 from 152.7; homefurnishings and services to 196 from 195.3; miscellaneous to 148.9 from 148.8. Clothing slipped to 205.3 from 205.4.

Wholesale Prices Down

A moderate decline in wholesale prices was reported in January. The bureau's index for 30 industrial materials, based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, slipped to 239.7 on January 23 from 241.6 on December 26. The Canadian farm products index, also based on 1935-39, dropped to 266.1 from 272.4.

Declines were shown for steers, hogs, wheat, oats, beef hides, raw cotton, unbleached pulp, raw rubber, sisal, lead and tin. Domestic raw wool and cottonseed oil were higher.

CANADIANS OPEN

Mr. Harris' announcement was made before members dealt with government legislation and resumed debate on opposition motions of non-confidence in the government.

The motions sponsored by John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) and Percy Wright (CCF-Melfort) criticized the government for not making provision in 1953-54 estimates for construction of the South Saskatchewan irrigation and power project.

Debate was adjourned by Agriculture Minister Gardiner and may not be resumed until some time next week. The agenda for today includes a variety of government legislation.

Final Reading Given

Third and final reading was given to a bill providing for appointment of an associate minister of national defence. It was passed after the Progressive Conservatives made an unsuccessful last-ditch attempt to amend the legislation to make the second defence minister responsible for the air force.

Senate approval of the legislation now would clear the way for Hon. Ralph Campney, the Vancouver lawyer who is solicitor-general, to join with Defence Minister Claxton in running the defence program.

Await Royal Assent

Third reading also was given to two government measures which will allow Canadian loan and trust companies to invest in securities of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

The measures, previously passed by the Senate, now await royal assent.

In debate on the South Saskatchewan river project, Liberal, CCF and Social Credit members urged the government to go ahead with the work.

Fred Larson (L-Kindersley) said the government should ignore a royal commission report recommending against the irrigation and power project. The commission said the project would be uneconomical at this time.

Mr. Larson, a farmer, said steps should be taken to negotiate an agreement with the Saskatchewan government for the long-discussed development.

FLOOD-BATTERED

As fleets of boats and small planes rushed to the rescue through rough waters and sleet and snow, a new storm bore down on the flood-battered Dutch coast.

Another major rescue effort also was under way on stricken Goeree-Overflakkee Island, where some 1,500 persons were marooned on a crumbling dike.

Schouwen-Duiveland already was four-fifths under water and some 5,000 of the island's 23,000 residents were not accounted for—many of them dead in their farmhouses.

High winds bearing down from the water-logged east coast of England threatened to hurl towering waves against the breached sea defences on the fifth day of the Dutch "battle of the dikes." Weather forecasts chilled hopes with predictions that more snow and hail would accompany the storm.

Wins Brief Respite

Workers toiling in the disaster area to remove thousands of stranded homeless to safety had won at least a brief respite when the morning high tide came and went before the new storm could reach the coast.

The sea's rising challenge threatened new havoc to ravaged Holland, Britain and Belgium. The death toll from week-end storms—Europe's worst flood and tide disaster since mediaeval days — already neared 2,000.

With thousands in Holland still in danger of drowning, exposure, or exhaustion, unofficial predictions were that the figure would go much higher. Some unofficial sources have forecast that deaths in the Netherlands alone will total more than 2,000.

1832 Korean Dead

The revised three-country toll thus far, as compiled from official and reliable unofficial sources, mounted to 1,832. Holland counted 1,272, England 546 and Belgium 14.

Across the North sea in eastern England, gale-whipped seas gave Dutchmen a preview of their new peril when high tides broke through hastily-patched dikes along the Lincolnshire coast and spread again through empty streets of Marblethorpe and Sutton. These two towns were evacuated after the week-end storm.

Situation Serious

Dutch officials ordered the hastily - assembled armada of light craft to gather with utmost speed off the threatened Goeree Overflakkee dike, where refugees from the twin towns of Nieuwe Tonge and Oude Tonge were stranded.

The commandant of a Dutch army detachment was ordered to evacuate Nieuwe Tonge with the utmost speed.

"The situation in Nieuwe Tonge is very serious," he was told.

Strong ocean currents hampered efforts to seal leaks in dikes. In spots, currents were sweeping sandbags aside almost as soon as they were pushed in place. Near Zierikzee, flying squads worked ceaselessly to fill seven gaps in protective walls—thus far without

In Britain, too, civilian volunteers and members of the armed forces worked far into the night to strengthen dikes, particularly on the "death island" of Cavey in the Thames estuary.

Some 3,000 residents of the island, where at least 46 have already perished and 1,000 have been forced to flee to the mainland, escaped further disaster today when the morning tide failed to break through the sea wall again.

Near Kings Lynn, on the Lincolnshire coast, a barge carrying 30 RAF officers and men was swept through a 40-foot breach in the bank of the flooded River Ouse. The airmen, who were helping sandbag the protective walls, were rescued from their stranded barge by row-boat.

Gales Rage

Gales raged on the North sea, but along the English coast the highest wind velocity reported Wednesday night was 38 miles an hour. Rain or snow with fresh winds up to 25 miles an hour were predicted for the east coast today. Antwerp.

The Dutch Red Cross announced that it had already received sufficient donations of clothing to supply flood refugees and that no more would be needed. It added, however, that there still was a great need for blankets and mattresses.

Across the Dutch border near Antwerp, Belgium, a new gap opened in a dike in the Lillo area. The slowly-rising water cut the last road between that town and

Plans to Evacuate

Plans were being made to evacuate the last 1,000 inhabitants of Lillo. Nearly 500 others already have fled in the wake of last Sunday's storm, which killed two persons in the area.

In The Hague, where U. S. mutual security administration officials are conducting their own survey of damage to Holland's economy, the Dutch economic affairs ministry announced the country's industrial setup was virtually undamaged.

The ministry said there were almost no industrial plants in the disaster area—primarily an agricultural section. It added, however, that losses there would gravely affect the national economy as a whole.

Picture Given

Officials gave this picture of the situation on the flooded southwestern islands, which together constitute an important sector of Holland's fertile farmland:

Schouwen-Duiveland — four-fifths under water.

Tholen — one-third under water.

Noord Beveland — one-eighth flooded.

St. Philipsland — all under water.

Goeree-Overflakkee — four-fifths under water.

South of the Schelde estuary, in the mainland sector known as Seeuwslaanderen, nearly all gaps in the dikes have been fixed and the water is receding.

The one relatively secure island in the area was Walcheren, where a heavy allied bombardment deliberately blasted the dikes in the fall of 1944 in the campaign to drive the Nazis from their fortifications and thus open the port of Antwerp to Allied shipping.

Completely Rebuilt

Following the war, the dikes were completely rebuilt on modern lines. Officials attributed the islands safety to these new seawalls, which far outclass the 300- and 400-year-old barriers in the rest of the region.

Officials in the waterways ministry were already drafting ambitious plans for an entirely new concrete seawall along the North sea coast to completely seal off the area from the sea. Under this plan, the only sea entrances would be the Schelde estuary and the Nieuwe Waterweg (new waterway) canal to Rotterdam port.

Senate Committee Sponsors Charter Despite Opposition

OTTAWA (CP)—A Senate committee recommended Wednesday that Parliament grant a charter to a Netherlands-controlled bank for operations in Canada despite opposition from four top banking officials.

The bankers objected to chartering the Mercantile Bank of Canada on grounds that the need for an 11th chartered bank does not exist, that competition now is stiff and that further applications will follow resulting in curtailing branch banking in smaller centres.

However, Graham Towers, president of the Bank of Canada, told the Senate banking and commerce committee that he feels a "little new blood doesn't do the public any harm."

"While competition is strenuous among the present 10 banks, it isn't in the same league as the cloak and suit trade."

The committee voted 16 to 4 in favor of recommending parliamentary approval for the new bank.

The proposed new bank would be controlled by the Dutch banking firm Netherland Handelsbank N.V. of Amsterdam which will advance $1,000,000 in capital if Parliament grants a charter. Another $500,000 will be raised in Canada.

At earlier hearings sponsors of the application said the bank aimed at operations mainly in international trade, particularly in the Far East. The first office probably would be opened in Vancouver.

Oppose Applications

Opposing the application were James Muir, president of the Royal Bank of Canada; Robert Rae, president of the Dominion Bank; H. L. Enman, president of the Bank of Nova Scotia; and James Stewart, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Stewart, replying to questions from Senators John T. Haig (PC—Manitoba) and W. D. Euler (L—Ontario), said that this is the opening struggle between two different types of banking—branch banking as conducted in Canada and unit banking.

Unit banks, operating only in larger centres as the Mercantile Bank proposed to do, would "feed off the cream of the banking business. We can't afford to operate branches in smaller centres without that cream of the larger centres. We might have to restrict operations in smaller centres."

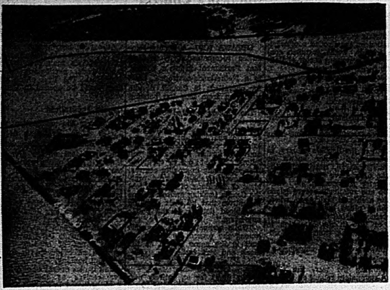
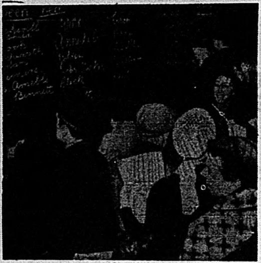
Hurricane Subsides, But Floods Remain in Europe

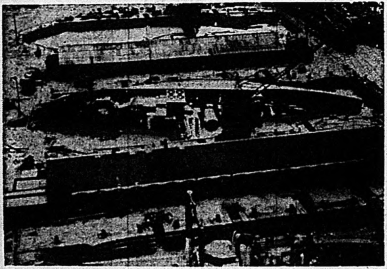


An aerial view reveals two-thirds of Canvey island in the mouth of the River Thames under water; the hardest hit in the great salt water floods which have swamped Britain's east coast. The island had a population of almost 13,000 before floods began. Of this number, 100 are known dead and from between 400 and 500 are believed missing. Elsewhere, in Britain, The Netherlands and Belgium, many more lives were reported lost bringing total up to 1,400 dead. Although hurricane has gone, tides still surge with sullen force through holes in sea walls and on through villages and towns destroying everything in its path. — Central Press Canadian.



The names of evacuees from Canvey Island are seen being posted on a blackboard at the country rest home on mainland at Benfleet. The horror struck suddenly at Canvey, caving in the stout seawall built by the Dutch. A wall of hungry water rushed in and reached the ceilings of many one-storey dwellings almost without preliminary warning. — Central Press Canadian.

Many boats were among the victims of raging seas. One such craft, the Irish sea ferry Princess Victoria struck by storm of hurricane force, sank in the Irish sea. Of the 178 passengers aboard only 45 were able to stay afloat long enough for rescuers, among them Petty Officer Wilf Warren from the destroyer Contest, to reach them. Warren, seen above, dived into boiling seas to rescue survivors clinging to a life raft.—Central Press Canadian.



The overturned frigate Berkeley Castle in background lies on its side at naval dockyard in Sheerness, on the south side of the Thames estuary, after it was struck by greatest hurricane to hit eastern Atlantic in over 500 years. The dock wreckage where the submarine Sirdar sank can be seen in foreground. No lives were reported lost on either of the ships. An RAF meteorological expert gave the technical explanation behind the floods. Gale-force winds which hit the east coast of England drove a great pressure of sea water into estuaries and inlets in the same way snowdrifts pile up in valleys. Combined with a high tide the result was a great rise in water levels. — Central Press Canadian.

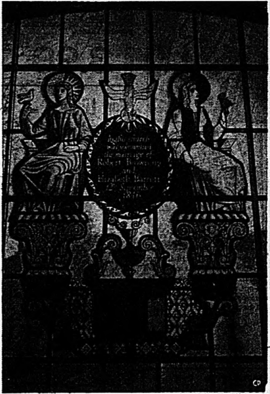
Edmonton Girl Hopes Surgery Will Extend Her Life

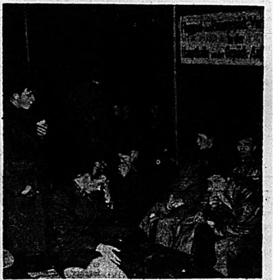
Five-year-old Susan Sutherland is greeted by Nurse Pat Heath following her arrival at Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto from her home in Edmonton. The youngster, who has a one-half-inch hole in a partition of her heart, will undergo an operation, which may lengthen her life for a good number of years. Her mother, Mrs. George Sutherland, wife of a school teacher, says Susan suffers no pain from her heart condition, but has always been susceptible to illness because of it. The youngster spends from October to April in bed suffering from colds, measles or other illness. Last fall she had an attack of chickenpox and just about died. "After that episode," said Mrs. Sutherland, "we decided something would have to be done, hence the trip to Toronto." — Central Press Canadian.

Browning Memorial



A gift of the Browning study groups of Winnipeg, a new memorial panel has been placed in the Browning chapel of St. Marylebone parish church, London. It commemorates the centenary of the marriage of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett is St. Marylebone Church, Sept. 12, 1846, and was designed by Harry Stammers, York artist. The memorial panel is an inset to an existing window and contains the figures of life and death on either side of the inscription. — (CP Photo.)

Tide of Refugees Continue to Flow to W. Germany

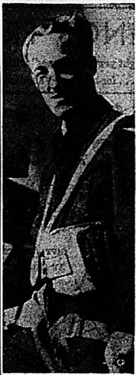


Close to 30,000 persons of all ages and religions poured into West Berlin during the month of January, and an average of 1,000 persons a day are still arriving, straining West Berlin's emergency facilities. After fleeing the Soviet zone, the refugees must prove that they are bonafide before being transferred to West Germany. Top is a typical scene at Templehof airfield terminal, where a crowd of refugees having been cleared, await flight, above, to safety and resettlement. — Central Press Canadian.

Murdered

Orbert D. Haughen, 38-year-old oil company executive, was slain in a downtown Edmonton parking lot as he left his automobile on his way to work. Five shots were fired at him, two as he lay in the snow. A 25-year-old university student, Loran Sorum, found by police in a semi-conscious condition in a barricaded garage, has been charged with the murder. He will undergo mental tests before appearing in court next Saturday. Police are attempting to find a motive for the shooting. — (CP Photo.)

Only Survivor



Pilot James J. Siddle of Vancouver, 36-year-old former bush pilot, is the sole survivor so far of a plane crash in northern British Columbia. Seven men were aboard the Central B.C. Airways plane when it crashed into the sea near Butedale, B.C. One body has been found. Capt. Siddle was discovered huddled on the beach. He had swum ashore from the sinking craft. A total of 27 persons are missing from four recent plane crashes in B.C. and Washington state. — (CP Photo.)

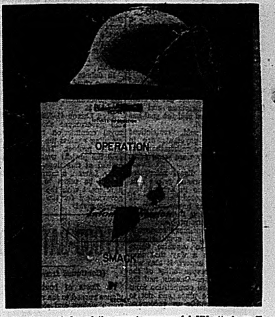
On Wanted List

Harry Duguid, 45-year-old Toronto manufacturer wanted for two Toronto bank robberies and for escaping custody, has been placed at No. 10 on the RCMP's list of Canada's most-wanted criminals. The previously-listed criminals all moved up one notch when Hugh Kennedy, alias Hugh McIntosh, 35, of Winnipeg and Toronto — and listed as No. 1 — was shot in Salt Lake City, Utah. —(CP Photo.)

CONSIDER TOBACCO TAX

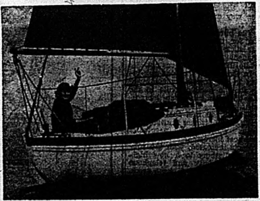
TILLSONBURG (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott, in a letter received Tuesday by Mayor Roger Hawkins, said he would consider suggested changes in the tobacco tax structure during preparation of Canada's 1953 budget. The letter was a reply to a recommendation by district tobacco growers that the federal tax on cigarets be lowered to the point where a package of 20 could be retailed at 30 cents.

A Grim Reminder of Latest U.N. Losses in Korea



A grim reminder of the recent unsuccessful UN attack on T-Bone Hill in Korea is this elaborate mimeographed "program" for "Operation Smack" hung on a roll of barbed wire near the scene of the action and topped by a battered Communist helmet. The operation in which a number of American lives were lost is object of much discussion in Washington, Korea and London. U.S. Congress has promised a probe to determine whether U.S. soldiers were needlessly sacrificed in the attack, launched in the presence of invited guests, who were supposed to have been given copies of time-table to help them follow progressive stage of the raid. The attack faltered within 15 yards of the crest, and the troops finally pulled back to their own lines. The operation was named Smack because commanders were convinced that the air and artillery support literally would smack the Communists to smithereens.—Central Press Canadian.

Woman Sails Atlantic Alone



Mrs. Ann Davison, 38, is shown in her 23-foot yacht, Felicity Ann, in which she sailed the Atlantic alone, thus becoming the first woman in history to do so. She set sail from Plymouth, England, last May 18 and has reached the West Indies. Her first attempt to cross the Atlantic — with her husband — ended in disaster. Their 70-foot ketch sank in a storm and he was drowned. She vowed she would make the crossing alone. — Central Press Canadian.

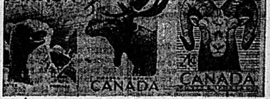
New Stamps



A new stamp issue designed to emphasize the importance of wildlife conservation programs of the federal and provincial governments has been designed for the post office and will go on sale April 1. The two-cent stamp showing a polar bear and colored blue, was designed by John Crosby, an artist of the National Museum at Ottawa. — (CP Photo.)

Finnish Tanker Carrying Fuel To Red Chinese

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Finnish tanker loaded with 7,000 tons of strategic jet fuel from Romania is reported on its way to Communist China today despite U. S. government efforts to stop it.

Informed officials disclosed this today amid speculation that President Eisenhower may eventually consider a naval blockade of the China coast to shut off such strategic shipments.

The tanker Wiima was said to be in the Suez canal area after picking up its strategic cargo at a Black sea port last week.

The state department tried unsuccessfully to persuade the Finnish and Turkish governments to stop the vessel.

Finland, it was understood, pleaded that it could do nothing to cancel registry of the vessel. The Turkish government replied it could not legally intercept the ship when it passed through the Dardanelles straits several weeks ago because an international convention guarantees freedom of transit for all ships.

The Chinese Nationalist navy may possibly challenge the vessel when it passes near Formosa.

A Chinese embassy official said in reply to a query there have been cases where Nationalist warships have intercepted at sea satellite Communist ships suspected of carrying strategic cargo to the Chinese Reds.

At its present speed, the tanker will be near Formosa in about two weeks. Communist tankers often unload cargo at the Russian supply port of Vladivostok where facilities are available to handle petroleum shipments.

The United Nations banned shipment of all strategic items to Communist China and North Korea May 18, 1951. Neither Finland nor Romania, however, is a member of the UN.

Body Recovered From Glen Airy Lake at Whitney

WHITNEY (CP)—The body of an 18-year-old girl was recovered Monday from 28 feet of water in Glen Airy lake near here. She was one of five persons in an automobile which sank through thin ice while they were on a fishing trip Sunday night.

Frances Lazinski was one of five young people from Whitney who drove on the ice of the lake to fish. When the vehicle broke through inch-thin ice near rapids at one end of the lake, Edmund Kuiack, 18, pushed the others from the car to the ice.

When the car had sunk out of sight he found Miss Lazinski was missing.

After searching unsuccessfully for signs of the girl, the four, Wallace Palubski, driver of the car, Kuiack, Marilyn Bolt, 12, and Jeanilene Levine, 14, stumbled four miles through sub-zero cold to this town 70 miles east of Huntsville.

Kuiack said his companions wanted to lie down and rest on the shores of the lake where the car vanished, but he persuaded them to keep moving.

Once inside a house at Whitney the Levine girl collapsed, her clothes frozen solidly to her body. She had lost her shoes in getting free of the sinking vehicle and had walked the four miles through snow and ice with little protection for her feet.

A doctor said amputation of the feet of the Whitney girl and Marilyn Bolt may be necessary.

Boy Will Be Given Chance For Normal Life

KINGSTON (CP)—A three-year-old boy kept alive on liquids since birth because of a displaced stomach will be given a chance for a normal life.

Doctors said they will operate on Frederick Orton within two weeks to transfer the lad's stomach from his chest cavity to its normal position below the diaphragm. They said his gullet, which carries food from mouth to stomach, will have to be lengthened. Frederick is reported in good health.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Orton of Lombardy, about 50 miles northeast of here, said when their child was born he couldn't eat and was fed small amounts of liquid intravenously every hour.

Syracuse doctors found the child suffered from stomach ulcers as well as a displaced stomach and a short oesophagus or gullet.

When the family moved to Lombardy, the boy's oesophagus swelled and closed the opening to a diameter of only an eighth of an inch. He was taken to Kingston General Hospital for observation and doctors decided to operate.

Prime Minister Gives Praise To Commonwealth

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said Tuesday that the Commonwealth of Nations, with the Queen as its head, "is an effective instrument for the good of free mankind throughout the whole world."

It is a "magnificent thing," he said, that Commonwealth peoples across the globe can look upon each other as equals without regard to color or creed. That was the kind of unity, based on equality, which has welded Canada into a nation.

The prime minister spoke movingly of the significance of the British crown, of the Queen and her role in the Commonwealth, her distinct new designation as head of that Commonwealth and as "defender of the faith.'

His address brought applause from all sides of the Commons as he spoke on a government bill to change the royal style and titles.

John Diefenbaker (PC - Lake Centre) said as the Commons listened to the prime minister it became "a cathedral of devotion to our history, our heritage and our common pursuit of freedom."

The bill—which was given final approval—is a result of the recent prime minister's conference in London, attended by Mr. St. Laurent. The conference agreed that each Commonwealth country use a title style for the Queen best suited to its own purposes but that designation of Her Majesty as "Head of the Commonwealth' be retained in all titles.

The bill adopts for Canada this title:

"Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom, Canada and her other realms and territories Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith."

The previous style, unchanged since the Statute of Westminster in 1930, was:

"Her most excellent Majesty, Elizabeth the Second, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, Queen, Defender of the Faith."

The debate brought from Mr. Diefenbaker the suggestion that Canada inform the Queen that Canadians would like to see the Duke of Edinburgh designated as "Prince of the Commonwealth" as another link joining these countries in a common bond.

After approval of the bill members sang "God Save The Queen."

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said he welcomes the title changes and said Canada should officially proclaim Canadian citizenship for the Queen. The Queen has the loyalty and affection of the free world and embodied light and hope for enslaved peoples.

VINCENT TO STAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department has decided to let minister John Carter Vincent remain at his post at Tangier, Morocco, until State Secretary John Foster Dulles decides whether there is "reasonable doubt" as to his loyalty. Press officer Michael J. McDermott said Tuesday that signals were changed during the week-end. He had said Saturday that Vincent had been ordered home.

OSHAWA TOMORROW!

Walt. Gerow's palais de glace should ring with the shouts of the best crowd of the season tomorrow evening when the powerful Truckers of Oshawa, current senior "B" group leaders will be the guests of the Glen Roys—or so it says here. At least that is the latest information received by Glen manager Don McNevin after a couple of weeks of bickering between the managements and the O.H.A.

The Glens have won one of their three starts with the Truckers and will be out after victory blood in this tilt. A win will hoist them to top spot in the eastern section of the group or at least help them maintain a tie. The Truckers, who boast a neat lead at the top of the heap, won't be in any Alphonse and Gaston mood especially since they suffered a decisive 12-3 shellacking at the hands of the Orillia Pontiacs.

In any even,t win, lose or draw, the game should be another senior "B" thriller with the Glens having returned to their former stride as was evidenced in the 5-3 victory over the Petes the other evening.

VALLEY LEAGUE!

City hockey fandom will get its first glimpse of hockey "as she is played" in the Trent Valley League tonight when the Point Anne squad tangles with Turland's Trentonians in Memorial Arena. Bill Turland, who is the playing coach for the "Admirals" from the town west o' here, will be seen in action, as will 14-year-old Bobby Hull, midget sensation, who lines up with the Ox Pointers, occasionally with "Dad." Young Hull is going great guns in the league and is getting a lot of valuable experience in higher company.

ON THT SPOT!

Bill Spafford's Belleville Moiras face elimination from Ontario Intermediate "B" basketball playdowns when they meet the Trenton Flyers in the second game of their best-of-three league playoff finals on the station court tonight. The Moiras came through with a lethargic display in the first game, dropping the decision by a 54-34 score. The boys couldn't get untracked all night, and they'll have to be on their best basketball behavior tonight. The third game, if necessary, will be played here next Monday night.

HAWKS AT PETES' 'LINKS' TOMORROW!

What should be a right lusty junior "B" tussle takes place tomorrow night in Peterborough when the Hawks travel up thataway to tangle with the Triple Links. The Peterborough youngsters who dropped a costly four-pointer to the Oshawa Buzzers the other night need this victory badly as the Motor City kids are practically breathing down their necks. It looks like it's going to be a battle for that third slot with every Oshawa win from here in counting double. The Hawks, who coasted to an easy 12-2 victory over the Cobourg Jays are still well out in front of the pack but they'll be out there battling for another win tomorrow night.

WIN AND LOSE!

Belleville members of the beak-busting fraternity split the decisions in Toronto Tuesday night. Eddie Schamerhorn lost a five-round decision to Francis Belanger in one of the semi-final bouts, while Jackie Lucas pounded out a win over Doug. Foxton, of Toronto, in a three-round preliminary.

Want a free trip to Bali-Bali, Malekula, India, and a number of mysterious ports of call off the beaten track of shipping? Then don't miss this film in technicolor of Captain J. Braidwood's world cruise in a 90-foot schooner, being shown at the Collegiate auditorium Saturday night. Reports have it that the picture is one of the best, most colorful travelogues ever to grace the screen. It is being shown under the auspices of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club. Even that "old salt" Elwood Wickerson, who has braved the briny in various parts of the world, not to mention the Bay of Quinte, says the film is one of the best.

THE PLASTER LINE

New York Rangers call their new forward unit of Don Raleigh, Aldo Guidolin and George Senick, the Plaster Line. Reason for this unusual moniker is due to the fact all three players are favoring injuries. Raleigh is playing with a cast on his left wrist; Senick, recently called up from Saskatoon, wears a cast over a broken left thumb; and Guidolin is swathed in adhesive tape to protect a sprained right wrist. The late season success of the Plaster Line will have a lot to do with the Rangers bid to make a playoff berth.

Indians Fail to 'Hold That Tiger'; Tireless Tabs Bare Claws for 2nd Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stratford Indians have found out—for the second time this season—that Hamilton Tigers can still scratch.

The Tigers, deep in the cellar of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series all season, pounced on the second-place Indians Wednesday night and fought to a 6-5 victory, their second in 42 outings.

That other Hamilton win was at the expense of the Indians too, a month ago in Stratford.

The pair of losses may mean the difference between first and second place to the Indians. While they were losing, the league-leading Owen Sound Mercurys increased their margin to five points by blasting Kitchener 8 Waterloo Dutchmen 8-3.

In the only other clash, Chatham Maroons moved into sole possession of fifth place with a 5-0 shutout against the sixth-place Sarnia Sailors.

At North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians upset North Bay Trappers 6-3 in a Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group game.

Veteran Ab Conick led Hamil-Bill Hammond, Hugo Bolzon, Steve Divinski and Gord Peebles scored the others. Tommy Walker tallied twice for the Tribe. Billy Flick, Bruce Burdette and Moose Walsh added the others.

Bill McComb and Jerry Reid scored twice for Owen Sound while Roy Leckie, Ray McCallum, Jack Ingoldsby and Mike Bukacheski notched the others. Pete Jacklin clicked for a Kitchener pair and Howie Lee tallied the third.

Joe Carveth and George Edwards each fired two goals in Chatham's win with playing-coach Black Jack Stewart getting the other. It was goalie Dick Piatowski's fifth shutout of the season.

Vip Palladino paced the Sault Ste. Marie attack with three goals. Dean McBride came through with two and Laurie Peterson one. Jack Hill, Alf Guarda and George Gosselin were the North Bay marksmen.

Three games are scheduled in OHA play tonight. Stratford moves into Brantford whilé Hamilton is at Chatham and Sarnia plays host to Kitchener.

'Boom-Boom' Joins Hurt List; Leafs Minus Bentley, Meeker, Both Clubs Bring Up Reserves

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Injuries, that eight-letter word which gives hockey coaches nightmares, could well decide tonight's National Hockey League clash at Montreal.

Although the Leafs and Canadiens aren't the only teams doing battle in tonight's full schedule, their hospital list is by far the most impressive. Both clubs have had to reach into their farm systems for replacements.

Latest to join the league's crippled corps is Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, the Habitants' high-scoring rightwinger. Injured Wednesday in practice when he crashed into a goal post, he is feared lost for several weeks with a separated shoulder.

The Leafs will be minus Max Bentley, their dipsy-doodle centreman who has sparked their drive to third place. Brains and spirit of the club since Captain Teeder Kennedy failed to return from his Boston injuries, the ex-Black Hawk will be sorely missed.

Bring Us Help

Canadiens have brought up Eddie Litzenberger, the 20-year-old Regina forward who has scored 20 goals this season with Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior circuit. Toronto has shunted familiar Danny Lewicki into the breach from Pittsburgh of the American Hockey League.

The Leafs will also lack Rudy Migay and Howie Meeker, both suffering long-standing injuries, but Montreal may get veteran centre Billy Reay back in time for the clash. He is suffering from an injured elbow.

In tonight's other games, the league-leading Detroit Red Wings play host to the tail-end New York Rangers while Chicago Black Hawks, fighting to hold fourth spot, move into Boston for a tussle with the fifth-place Bruins.

The last time New York played in the Motor City the Blueshirts upset the mighty Wings 8-2, much to the horror of Detroit general manager Jack Adams.

However, you can be sure the Red Wing prexy will have his club up for this one, especially after having to mail league president Clarence Campbell a $500 cheque It paid his fine for violating the sanctity of referee Red Storey's dressing room during a game Jan. 18.

GASOLINE PRICE CUT

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—McColl-Frontenac dealers cut prices 3½ cents a gallon Tuesday in what Joseph Crocelli, who said he was a spokesman for the group, called a resumption of the gasoline "war" waged here on and off for about a year.

Mr. Crocelli said the McColl-Frontenac dealers, after a special meeting, dropped their prices from 42 and 40 cents to 38½ and 36½.

Canuck Gals Not Invited

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Basketball Association headquarters in Montreal has a question to answer — why were Canadians not invited to the women's world tournament set to open in Santiago, Chile, March 7?

It will be the first tournament for women held under men's rules and the United States and several European countries, together with Russia, will have teams entered.

"I can't understand why we haven't been invited," Ebbie Bowering, western CABA representative, said Wednesday.

Bowering and Ruth Wilson, another western representative of the CABA, have sent a wire to headquarters in Montreal asking why Canada was not asked.

Sports Back On Varsity Paper

TORONTO (CP)—Despite efforts to place less emphasis on sport by elimination of a sports page, the editors of The Varsity, University of Toronto student newspaper, have allowed sport to take up almost one third of their daily coverage, R. W. Shephard, member of the editorial board, said Wednesday.

The December ultimatum by the editorial board, doing away with the sports page, brought about resignation of the sports staff.

Mr. Shephard said sports coverage had been assumed by other editorial members and while sports had often taken up half the paper, it now seldom ran more than one third.

Barrie Flyers Breathe Down Marlies' Necks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers are burning up the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Rated an even chance of making the post-season playoffs a scant month ago, Hap Emms' youngsters have been flying high ever since.

Wednesday night they moved to within two points of the league-leading Toronto Marlboros with a 6-3 victory over Guelph Biltmores, defending Memorial Cup champions.

In an exhibition game, third-place Toronto St. Michael's pulled off a 5-4 upset against Sudbury Wolves of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group at Sudbury.

At Three Rivers, the cellar-dwelling Montreal Royals fought to a 2-2 tie with third-place Three Rivers Reds in a Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association clash.

Orv Tessier and Tony Poeta paced the Barrie attack with two goals each, the others going to Doug Mohns and Mel Carver. Blair Graham, Doug Ashley and Art White scored for Guelph.

Roger Dubuc scored both of Three Rivers' goals with Kenny Naylor and Sandy Morrison coming through for the Royals.

St. Catharines moves into Guelph Friday night while St. Michael's plays at Barrie and Galt goes to Kitchener.

Say 'Racial Slurs' Reason For Series Washout

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Bob Pirie of the Young Men's Hebrew Association basketball team said Wednesday he has cancelled a two-game exhibition with Tillsonburg Livingstons because of racial slurs made at a game there last Saturday.

Pirie was referring to a match between Nortown Tri-Bells and the Livingstons. He said a few of the players and manager Alex Fisher were attacked verbally for their racial background.

"It was the lowest show of sportsmanship I've ever heard of," Pirie said.

In a letter to the Ontario Amateur Basketball Association, Fisher said the fans, a couple of the players and club president Gerry Livingston took part.

Fisher said after he slipped behind the timer in the late minutes of the game Livingston came over to him and made "repeated derogatory remarks" about his racial background.

Reached in Gravenhurst, Livingston said:

"Well, I may have been a little hot about it. But if any on the team (Nortown) think we have to run the clock on them to beat them, I stand behind what I said. If that's the case I'll say it again tomorrow."

Giants Official Says Batting Slump Due to Sluggers Trying for Fences

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—The talk in the office of New York Giants had for some time concerned that vanishing type of baseball player known as the .300 hitter. There had been various interesting theories as to why this once-flourishing breed is going the way of the passenger pigeon and the buffalo.

One member of the seminar insisted that they simply are not turning out the kind of batters they used to, when almost any club boasted two or three players who consistently bettered the figure which separates the men from the boys. Another felt equally certain that improved pitching has steadily taken its toll.

Eddie Brannick, secretary of Giants for more than 50 years, listened patiently to the amateurs and then told them as follows:

"There's really no mystery about it, there arent as many big, husky fellows in the game as there were 20 or 25 years ago. At least, it seems to me there are a lot more little guys, and every last one of them is standing up there swinging for the fences.

"They've learned that homeruns pay off in money, so why should they waste their time trying to hit singles and doubles the way the old - timers did. Take Ross Young, one of the greatest outfielders we or anybody else ever had. You could see plainly that all he wanted to do was punch that ball safely—anywhere just so he got a hit.

"A batter like that was difficult to fool. He was out there trying only to meet the ball squarely. He wasn't trying to outguess the pitcher and get that one fat ball he liked and could murder. Today's pitchers know exactly what is going through the mind of the batter and all they have to do is keep him crossed up. I think maybe the average catcher today is a little smarter than they used to be, too, in calling for what the batter isn't expecting."

There was a brief pause at this point while Brannick was asked if he would concede that there might just possibly have been an overall improvement in pitching skill in the past two decades. After all, there were men who clubbed the oldtimers for averages around .380 and still didn't win the batting championship of their league.

"I honestly don't believe pitching has improved that much, if at all," he said. "In those days you're talking about almost any club could throw a couple of good pitchers at you, and many of them were great ones. Are there any greater pitchers today than the Groves and the Johnsons and the Hubbells?

"You were talking about sliders and the fact that almost every pitcher uses this quick - breaking little curve today. A lot of the batters, themselves, blame the slider for lowering their averages. They say it breaks just enough to throw them off in their timing. That again is because they're shutting their eyes and trying to hit homeruns.

"The old time batters had plenty to contend with. They were looking at the same curves and fast balls the batter sees today, and there were spitballs and a lot of other tricky stuff, too. Any pitcher will tell you that all the legislation for years has been aimed at helping the batter, not the pitcher."

With this final shot, the Giants' secretary handed around advance copies of his club's roster for the coming season. A quick rundown of batting averages disclosed that one Giant regular, shortstop Alvin Dark, hit over .300 last season. He hit .301. Yet Giants chased Brooklyn almost to the wire in the National league. See what Branneck means?

Barons, Hornets Share Top Spot In American Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Barons today are back in a first-place tie with Pittsburgh Hornets for the American Hockey League lead, thanks to a 4-4 tie Wednesday night with Syracuse Warriors.

In the only other game played, Hershey Bears broke a five-game losing streak by defeating St. Louis Flyers 4-2.

At Syracuse, goalie Johnny Bowers' amazing netminding for the Barons halted Syracuse's hope for a third straight victory. He was credited with 51 saves, against only 19 for Syracuse's Gordie Bell.

Cleveland scorers were Bob Bailey, Eddie Olson, Glen Sonmor and Ike Hildebrand. Bill Gooden connected twice for Syracuse. Armand Lemieux and Bronco Horvath fired singles.

At Hershey, Sam Bettio tallied two for the Bears, Arnie Kullman and Dunc Fisher firing singles. Motto McLean scored both Flyers' goals.

Dean of American Sulky Drivers Marks 80th Birthday 'In Training'

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) —Ben White, dean of United States sulky drivers, began celebration of his 80th birthday today by arising at 6:30 a.m., to train and drive the trotters at city-owned Ben White Raceway.

The mild-mannered octogenarian born Feb. 5, 1873, at Whitevale, Ont., has been doing that since 1895, and he said he said he saw no reason to retire just because he had another birthday.

White was tipped off by a blacksmith in 1920 that Orlando would be a good site for a winter training track. He's been coming here since.

White is aided by his son, Gibson, who drives in the races now, but Ben still climbs into the sulky for the morning training spins.

"Just getting into a race is not everything — it's training these young horses and bringing them into full bloom that counts," said Ben.

Bug Bites Early

Benjamin Franklin White, never much of a talker about himself, was the son of a farmer who wanted Ben to become a miller.

However, young White was bitten by the harness racing bug when he drove his first race behind Jenny Dean for his sister at Markham, Ontario, in 1888.

In 1895 Ben visited Buffalo, N.Y., and went to a nearby trotting track. "I took one look at the horses," he recalled, "and decided this was for me."

Young Ben took a job as handy man in the village farm stable at $18 a month, worked up to a groom and finally become second trainer.

He was a well-known trainer-driver more than 40 years ago, but became nationally prominent in 1914 when his fellow trainer, Bill Andrews, entered a hospital.

White took over Andrews' horses among them Lee Axworthy, which became the world's champion trotting stallion in 1916 and held the title until 1941.

Ben has driven in 19 Hambletonians, winning four times—more than any other driver—with Mary Reynolds, 1933; Rosalind, 1936; The Ambassador, 1942; and Volo Song, 1943.

Quebec, Maritimes Rinks Victors In Quebec International Bonspiel

QUEBEC (CP)—The 40th Quebec international bonspiel gathered speed today as rinks from Quebec and the Maritimes entered their second rounds in competition for the top award—the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy. The remainder continued play in eight other competitions.

Six Quebec province rinks, four from Quebec City and one each from Montreal and Ormstown, Que., and two Maritime aggregations, one from West Saint John, N.B., and the other from Halifax, won their first-round matches Wednesday night in the lieutenant-governor's play.

Three women's teams, meanwhile, continued to give veteran male curlers in the 'spiel a tough fight. They have caused a certain amount of rivalry among the men, who claim that the curling classic has always been traditionally a man's competition.

Ladies Win

The latest victory for the fair sex came Wednesday in the second round of the Holt Renfrew International section, when Mrs. A. F. Mutch skipped her underdog Quebec Victoria quartet to a 7-5 victory over Adjutor Dussault's Quebec Winter Club rink.

West Saint John, N.B., skipped by Dr. R. M. Pendrigh, bowled over R. Wilson's London quartet by an 11-7 score, while A. Demers' Quebec Curling Club team defeated O. Bigford's Westport, Ont., quartet, 13-10 in the lieutenant-governor's event.

Semi-finals get under way today in the Chateau International and Omega International trophies as well as in the Francois Jobin International Gold Cup.

In second-round matches in the Holt Renfrew event, Mel Stonehouse of Ottawa Glebe, last year's winner of the top event, handed V. A. Selkirk's Peterborough quartet a 9-4 beating.

A. Lafrance's North Bay crew defeated Bourlamaque Sigma, R. Ash, 10-5. But G. Von Zuban's Sudbury four lost 11-3 to Quebec Jacques Cartier.

In the Val d'Or event first round, a Midland, Ont., crew skipped by H. Hartman put out Col. A. Bell, Quebec Victoria, 12-8.

J. P. Ellwood's Smiths Falls, Ont., rink was defeated by Quebec Victoria, skipped by Fred Blackadder, 14-10. But D. Aboud's Smiths Falls four downed Mrs. Barbara Patterson's Quebec Winter Club, 9-8.

'Lotta Bucks For the Bucs'

PITTSBURGH. (AP) — The Pittsburgh Post Gazette says today representatives of Fred Saigh, owner of St. Louis Cardinals, have offered Saigh's majority holdings in the National League club to a Pittsburgh syndicate for $4,250,000.

The Post Gazette says the syndicate is headed by Charles Morris, prominent Pittsburgh realtor.

Saigh announced he would sell his baseball stock shortly after his recent sentencing to 15 months in prison for income-tax invasion.

Ezzard Charles Wins by TKO

DETROIT (AP)—Sharp-shooting Ezzard Charles methodically cut down Tommy Harrison of Los Angeles Wednesday night and stopped him in the ninth round to continue his bid for another shot at the heavyweight boxing title.

The dead-game Harrison took a terrific punishment all the way as he was floored for an eight count in the eighth and was cut about the nose, mouth and left eye when manager George Parnassus signalled that his fighter was through.

Harrison, who came in at 181¼ for this 10-round bout, gave away 5¾ pounds to the more experienced former champion.

Raiders, Hotshots Win Y Court Games

Two games of the Youth Basketball House League were played at the Y Tuesday night. The Red Raiders outscored the Shrimps in the first game by 89-50 points, and the Hotshots won over the Aces 56-42.

Lineups:

Red Raiders: Stanley Jackson 41 points, George Parkhurst 36, Bob Bateman 12, Bill Mason, Bob Day.

Shrimps: Don Smith 30 points, Bud Bird 18, Carl Hall 2, Lloyd Kellet, Bob MacDonald.

Hotshots: Ted Batchelor 27 points, Don Harris 16, Peter Annis 12, George Beebee 1, John Fuke, D. Moon.

Aces: Jack Doig 20 points, Dennis Farnsworth 10, Jack Kane 10, Jim Hill 2, Jack O'Neil, Jim Ramsbottom, Stewart Robertson.

'Le Gros Bill' May Turn Pro

BOSTON. (AP) — President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League says Jean Beliveau, the fabulous young star who played three great trial games this season for Montreal, may turn professional.

The N.H.L. president said Wednesday that Beliveau's playing status fluctuates with the size of the crowds that turn out to watch him perform with Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior League.

"Since the crowds there are down now," he added, "there is a chance Beliveau will sign with the Canadiens, possibly before the end of the season."

Landy Slashes Seconds Off Two-Mile Mark

MELBOURNE (AP) — John Landy, Australia's sensational miler, took a crack at a longer distance Wednesday night and slashed 14.4 seconds off the Australian two-mile record.

Running in muggy weather over the Geelong oval grass track, the 22-year-old farming student travelled the distance in nine minutes, 1.2 seconds.

It was the fourth terrific race in less than two months for the Aussie comet, who has run three straight mile races in less than 4:05.

He excited the track world by running the mile in 4:02.2, only 8-10ths second off Gundar Haegg's world record, on Dec. 14. On Jan. 3 he covered the mile in 4:02.8 and on Jan. 24 he won the Australian championship on a grass track at Perth in 4:04.2.

Although he bettered the Australian two-mile mark Wednesday night and won his race by 90 yards the lean speedster failed by 5.2 seconds to break the British Empire record held by Chris Chattaway of England. He was 20.8 seconds short of cracking the world mark held by Belgium's Gaston Reiff.

Landy said he was troubled by the heat.

Granite Rink Takes Tankard

PETERBOROUGH, (CP) —Mrs. L. E. Wooley skipped her Toronto Granite Club rink to an easy 12-4 win over Mrs. R. H. Rieve's Toronto High Park four Wednesday to take the Ontario Ladies' Tankard for the second consecutive year.

Mrs. Rieve conceded her rink at the end of the ninth after the Granite rink took a three-point lead at the start of the fourth end and acontinued to lead through to the finish.

Mrs. K. McLaren's Hamilton Thistles won the Northey Trophy consolation event of the tankard, when she scored on a last throw in the tenth for a close 10-8 win over Mrs. J. Rutherford's Kingston Club.

The Granite Club advanced through the playdowns Tuesday in fine style but played a tight 7-6 game with Peterborough Wednesday morning in the semi-finals. The High Park Club Oakwood 12-6 in the semi-finals.

The Kingston Club entered the Northey Trophy semi-finals with Brantford and emerged with an 8-6 victory, while Hamilton Thistles won 10-7 over Lakefield.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Willie Hoppe, long-time world billiards king, will attend the second annual sports celebrity dinner of the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association, it was announced Wednesday.

Hoppe's name was in a preliminary list of celebrities the association issued for the March 5 event. Another from the United States is Otto Graham, quarterback of Cleveland Browns of the U.S. Professional Football League.

The Canadians are: George Genereux of Saskatoon, trap-shooting expert who was Canada's only gold medal winner at the 1952 olympics; two old track stars, George Goulding of Toronto and Bill Sherring of Hamilton; Canada's three living Diamond Sculls winners, Jack Guest, Sr., Bobby Pearce and Joe Wright, Jr.

It is expected that Canadian football will be represented by Vince Mazza of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, winner of the Jeff Russel Memorial Trophy as the outstanding player in the Big Four Football Union last season.

The $25-a-plate dinner has a two-fold aim: to raise as much money as possible for the Ontario Society for Crippled Children and to boost the country-wide Easter seals campaign for crippled children which opens March 5.

Gerry Kesselring, chosen by the association's members as Ontario's outstanding athlete of 1952, will receive his award at the dinner.

WELLAND (CP) — Secretary-Treasurer H. D. Ovenden of Wainfleet announced Wednesday playoff dates for teams in the Ontario Rural Hockey League. Senior series playoffs will begin Feb. 16. Intermediate play will start Feb. 23, owing to delays in finishing schedules due to lack of natural ice. Players who have played OHA Senior B hockey must obtain approval of the ORHA before they are eligible to enter the playoffs.

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Holman, owned by Karl Wells of Aultsville and driven by Percy Robillard, scored a hard-earned double-heat victory in the featured harness attraction, a class AA pace, at Dufferin Park Wednesday.

Tulyar, Aga Khan's Racehorse Sold for Quarter Million Pounds

CANNES (AP) — The Aga Khan has sold his famous horse Tulyar to the Irish national stud for £250,000, his secretary announced today.

The purchase price is the highest ever paid for a thoroughbred in Britain.

Tulyar is a beautifully-bred colt by Tehran, which won the 1944 wartime St. Leger Classic, out of a mare whose sire was Nearco, winner of the Italian derby and French Grand Prix in 1938.

Nearco was syndicated as a stallion in England in 1941.

Tulyar is regarded in British racing circles as the best stud proposition in horse racing since Lord Derby's 1933 Derby winner, Hyperion.

Is Unbeaten

Tulyar was unbeaten in seven races last year as a three-year-old. His successes were the Epsom Derby, the Doncaster St. Leger, the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Stakes at Ascot, the coronation Thurs bgt Eclipse Stakes at Sandown Park, the Derby Trial Stakes at Lingfield, the Ormonde Stakes at Chester, and the Henry VIII Stakes at Hurst Park.

He has already won £76,717, a British record.

If Tulyar is kept in training this coming season he will race under the colors of the President of the Republic of Ireland, Sean T. O'Kelly, to whom all Irish national stud horses are leased.

In Britain, the Queen has first call on racehorses from the national stud.

Tulyar was bred at the Gilltown stud in County Kildare, not far from his new home, the Irish national stud at Tully, County Kildare.

What Price Championship Glory? Yankees Find Titles Come High

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Yankees have close to $1,000,000 to ladle out in salaries—the largest payroll in baseball history—but no club is having more trouble getting its employees under contract.

"You dont realize what a problem it is to sign up a ball club that has won four straight world championships," says George Weiss, general manager of the Yankee empire.

"I don't think there's an organized holdout campaign or anything like that. Each of these fellows figures he was greatly instrumental in our success and he wants his reward on the pay cheque."

Only Two Signed

The Yankees have signed only two of their regulars for the 1953 season. They are catcher Yogi Berra, who signed for a reported $40,000—a $5,000 raise—and infielder Gil McDougald, who signed for what's believed to be around $20,000.

Allie Reynolds, who has had two successive big years with the world champions, failed to get any satisfaction in his second conference with Roy Hamey, assistant general manager.

The righthander, who had a 20-8 record last season and 17-8 the year before, is said to be demanding at least a $7,000 raise over the $35,000 he collected in 1952. Vic Raschi also is asking an increase for his 16 victories last season.

Also yet to be dealt with are Mickey Mantle, the 1952 world series hero, and his outfield mates, Hank Bauer and Gene Woodling; big John Mize, and the slugging first baseman, infielders Phil Rizzuto, Billy Martin and others.

NO ALLAN CUP ENTRY

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton will not enter a team this spring in competition for the Allan Cup, the trophy awarded Canada's senior hockey champions. Al Ernst, manager of Edmonton Pats who reached the western final last year said Tuesday night that all attempts to form a similar team this year have been abandoned. Plans were being made for next season to set up a Northern Alberta Senior League including Red Deer, Camrose, Wetaskiwin, Ponoka and Edmonton.

Olson Withdraws From Tournament

BOSTON (AP) —The scramble for Sugar Ray Robinson's vacated middleweight title took on the aspects of a soap opera today with Carl Bobo Olson's withdrawal from an elimination tournament designed to find a new champion.

The Hawaiian boxer is the No. 1 U. S. contender, but he said Wednesday night he wants no part of the tournament — arranged by the National Boxing Association and the New York State athletic commission.

Olson meets 21-year-old Norman Hayes of Boston Saturday night in a 10-rounder in Boston Garden. Both Hayes and Olson were on the list of U.S. contenders in the NBA's elimination series and this fight was to have been the second clash of that series.

The opener is Friday night's New York bout between Pierre Langlois of France ond Rocky Castellani of Luzerne, Pa. The victor was to have met Ernie Durando of Bayonne, N.J., with thatw inner taking on the Hayes-Olson winner. A flock of other fighters also are on the elimination list.

Former champion Randy Turpin of England and France's Charles Humez are in the European phase of the elimination.

NHL Governors No Exception To League Rule

BOSTON (AP)—President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said Wednesday the loop's board of governors will be no exception to the rule against team representatives entering the officials' room during games.

Campbell cracked down hard recently on such a practice by imposing $500 fines on Bill Tobin and Jack Adams, the respective general managers of the Chicago and Detroit clubs.

"That regulation was put into effect last summer," Campbell told Boston hockey writers. "Previously a club officer could visit the referee's room to make a legitimate inquiry, if he had the referee's permission to enter."

"Too often the visit was for the purpose of abusing or intimidating the referee. We just won't stand for that."

Asked what action would result if a club representative on the league board of governors insisted on making these protests during the game in spite of fines, Campbell answered:

"I don't think he would be on the board of governors very long."

Royals Down Flyers 3-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Westminster Royals, under new playing-coach Max McNab, tied Edmonton for sixth place in the Western Hockey League Wednesday night by downing the Flyers 3-1.

Gord Fashoway scored the Royals' third and clinching marker with 28 seconds left. The Royals took a 1-0 lead when Gerry Cabana slapped in Fashoway's pass early in the first period. Flyers knotted the count when Leon Bouchard scored. But the Royals went ahead again on a goal by Pat Coburn.

Fain Signs For $30,000

CHICAGO. (AP)—Ferris Fain, American League batting champion, today became perhaps the highest paid player ever signed by Chicago White Sox, coming to terms for a reported more than $30,000.

Fain, who earned $28,500 last season with Philadelphia Athletics, needed just a two-minute phone conversation with a Sox general manager, Frank Lane, to agree on a 1953 contract.

Guesses were the Sox gave Fain a $2,000 or $3,000 boost over his Philadelphia salary.

FRANKFORD

Hockey Team Leads League

Frankford—Frankford's entry in the Frankford District Hockey League is away to a flying start this year, and is currently heading the loop. Tuesday night in Marmora, a very short-handed Frankford team edged Springbrook by a 9-8 count.

In the first period, both teams battled on even terms, notching four goals apiece. Frankford had things pretty well their own way in the second period, scoring four goals, while Springbrook could only counter once.

The third period saw Frankford's lack of reserves take its toll, as Springbrook scored three times. However, Frankford came back with the winning goal to give them their second win in as many starts.

The league standing to date:

	Won	Lost	Pts.
Frankford	2	0	4
Springbrook	1	1	2
Glen Miller	0	1	0
Johnstown-Cen.	0	1	0

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A hand that looks like a slam is often barely able to make a game. If so, how is it that good players know where to stop? There is something in the bidding that tells the story.

There was the tournament deal shown here:

NORTH
♥A 7 4
♦A K J 10 5 3
♣K 7

WEST
♠J 9 4
♥10 9 8
♦8 6 2
♣A 9 5 2

EAST
♠K 7
♥K Q 3
♦Q 9
♣Q 10 8 6 4 3

SOUTH
♠A Q 10 8 5 3
♥J 6 5 2
♦7 4
♣J

The bidding goes like this:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 D	2 C
2 S	Pass	3 D	Pass
4 S	Pass	Pass	Pass

There are some players who like to open the south hand with an interference bid of three spades. They are more concerned with the shutting out of opponents than the accuracy of their bids. . . .

Such players will spend much of their time extolling the hot virtues of this pet foible of theirs. They have no patience with you if you remind them of the numerous bad results to them.

In the bidding shown above, the first bid by north admits five tricks. His raise in number on the second round admits a sixth trick. The jump by south says he sees 11 tricks; enough for game of some kind. So, south must have five.

North has a re-biddable diamond suit. Why does he neglect to bid it a third time? His hand contains only six tricks. He showed that many in his first two bids He lacks a seventh trick.

Why does north refrain from probing for slam when he can do so by bidding four no-trump? Two reasons. One is that he has not yet seen 12 tricks in their pair, the other is lack of trump support.

These details may seem to strike you as being too exacting for a card game. But, whether you realize it or not, bridge exactness is there if you care to learn it and the sooner the better.

It is later than you think.

FRANKFORD

Frankford—On Saturday evening, about 60 friends neighbors and relatives invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Terry as a surprise, on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary, of February 1st. Helen was completely overwhelmed by the friends all arriving at the same time, and her better half, Harold, was paying a friendly visit to a near-by town. He finally wended his way homeward about nine o'clock, and was happily surprised at the reception he received.

Mr. Walter Morrow, a good friend of Harold and Helen's acted as master of ceremonies, and in his jovial and efficient manner, asked the couple to take honored seats. Helen was presented with a beautiful corsage of carnations by Sandra Morrow, and Harold with a boutonniere by Cheryl Utman.

Entertaining Program

An entertaining program consisted of a solo by Cheryl Utman, piano solos by Sandra Morrow, Barbara Stickle and Thelma Stickle, readings by Mrs. Charlesworth, Mrs. K. Stickle, Mrs. B. Jandrew, Mrs. Vera Montgomery, a solo "I Love You Truly", by Mr. Arnold Stickle, two song selections by Johnstown friends, accompanied by Mrs. K. Stickle on the piano, lyrics being composed by Mrs. Fred Meyers.

Mrs. Walter Morrow, a friend indeed, read an address to the honored couple, and they were presented with a beautiful wall mirror and chocolates from friends and neighbors of Frankford. Johnstown friends presented them with an automatic toaster, and nieces and nephews gave as their gifts, silver cake plates, pie plate and knife, flower basket, salt and pepper shakers. A lovely bouquet of 'mums, with a silver table centre, was received from Mr. and Mrs. Boyce of Colborne. Harold gave his bride of 25 years, a chest of silver.

Both Harold and Helen responded fittingly and invited them all to come again at the same time, the more the merrier.

Games and contests closed a fine program.

Most bountiful refreshments of sandwiches salad, cookies, cake and tarts were served, and Mrs. Morrow presented a beautiful cake, decorated beyond words, with the traditional touches to the bride and bridegroom to cut. Each guest then shared a piece of the cake.

This will be an evening long to be remembered and cherished by Helen and Harold, as they look forward to many more years of happiness.

Many thanks go out to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Morrow, and Mrs. Mildred Ketcheson, and all others for their efforts in making it a perfect evening.

Guests were present from Hamilton, Stirling, Oshawa, Johnstown, Frankford, Glen Miller and Colborne.

Frankford's membership in the Trenton Community Concert Association has increased somewhat this year, following the fine series of concerts last year. As is always the case, several have come along a few days too late to obtain memberships, and this is greatly regretted. The memberships were sold out well before the week finished.

3M Club Meeting

The 3M Young Adult Club of Frankford United Church held its regular meeting in the church hall Monday evening. In the absence of the president, vice president Myrtle Poland did a fine job taking charge of the meeting.

Correspondence was dealt with. Main item of correspondence, was the confirmation of arrangements for the concert featuring the Video-ettes and their troop from Toronto; this concert to be sponsored by the 3M Club. The date was set for April 10.

50 Hymn Books

The club plan for each member to donate enough money to purchase a hymn book for the church by each member was next dealt with. Contributions were accepted by many members and other donations are to be received this month. It is hoped that the club will be able to donate approximately 50 books.

The March meeting was discussed and final plans are to be completed by Sid and Evelyn Martin's group. Wooler will be guests of this meeting, and Lieut. Gardner of Trenton will be the guest speaker.

Ethel Vosborough was in charge of the devotional period. Following quiet prelude music, Ethel read the call to worship from John 3:16. Scripture passage was taken from St. John. Claude Moran and Myrtle Poland each read passages on "Love."

Fine Program

A fine program consisted of the following numbers: A humorous reading by Ruth Beach, an accordion instrumental by Marilyn Spencer, a humorous reading by Harold Vosborough entitled "Are You Ready, Dear?", the story of St. Valentine by Myrtle Poland.

A contest of scrambled words on the theme of "Love" was conducted by Harold Vosborough. Claude Moran took charge of a newspaper contest. A third contest on composing songs was carried on by the three groups which were formed from the main group of the club. Two of the groups expect to leave shortly for New York under contract to Irving Berlin, while the other group were "Without a Song."

A bountiful buffet luncheon was enjoyed, with the Vosboroughs' group being hosts and hostesses. Four beautiful heart-shaped cakes adorned the serving table.

The Vosboroughs' group of the 3M Club met at the home of Jim and Myrtle Poland Tuesday evening to carry out a project which they had taken on as part of their donation in church work, namely the repairing and mending of damaged hymnaries. It was a full evening's work, and it is questionable as to whether there was more glue on the books, or on the workers' hands. However, the task was successfully carried out, and all were quite happy to sit down to refreshments served by Myrtle Poland.

Herb Rankin is current high single holder in Babcock's Bowling Derby, held fortnightly at the milk bar. A box of chocolates goes to the winner.

The Mission Band of Frankford United Church held its weekly meeting in the church hall Monday afternoon, with a fair turnout in spite of the very cold weather. Most of the meeting was spent in business discussion, and completion of project works which they began at the first of the year. Under the capable leadership of Mrs. Jim Poland, and the leadership in music of Mrs. Walter Morrow, the Mission Band is flourishing this year.

Euchre Party

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Frankford branch of the Canadian Legion, No. 387, held its weekly euchre in the Legion hall with the largest turnout of the season. Perhaps the big attraction was refreshments will be served after the card parties each week from now on.

Ladies' 1st went to Mrs. Herman Chard, with Mrs. Albert Fox coming second. Men's first went to Mrs. Jim Genereaux, playing as a man, and Mr. Geo. Harris was the second prize winner. Lone hand prize has been discontinued, and a special monthly prize is to be given for February.

Everyone is welcome Tuesday nights in the Legion hall.

Mrs. Clarence Lohnes and Bruce spent the dinner hour with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes on Wednesday.

Frankford folks will be interested in knowing that Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ketcheson, the latter formerly of Frankford, are the proud parents of a baby girl.

The scene is from "Scaramouche," M.G.M.'s exciting, romantic adventure version of the famed Rafael Sabatini novel, continuing today, Friday and Saturday, also starring Janet Leigh and Mel Ferrer. A new and highly amusing Tom and Jerry Cartoon, is an added attraction.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)— Tall, rangy Chuck Connors is faced with a decision: He's either going to pursue a movie acting career or continue as first baseman for Los Angeles Angels.

Pretty soon the baseball player will have to decide on which phase of his double life he wants to pursue. Spring practice is just around the corner. Baseball fans will groan to hear that he is leaning toward a choice of the movie life.

"I'm in the twilight of my baseball career—I'll soon be 32," remarked Chuck, who played for Brooklyn Dodgers, Chicago cubs and Montreal Royals in other years.

"At best, I'll have two or three years left in baseball. Supposing I get hurt this year, as I did a season ago. The Angels would have every right in the world to drop me from the team."

The movie outlook seems brighter. He now is playing his fifth screen role, his biggest part to date. He has the third most important role in "Sulu Sea" with Burt Lancaster and Virginia Mayo.

"It's a terrific part," enthused Chuck, a talkative lad who sounds like a ball player out of Ring Lardner, except that he's shrewder. His sense of economics is causing him to favor grease paint over the baseball diamond.

"The baseball season is 26 weeks, including spring practice," he said. "I am making as much from seven weeks on this picture as I do during a full season for the Angels.

"I love baseball, but I've got two sons who love to eat, and another one on the way."

Chuck's start in the movies is in keeping with the Hollywood legend. He was picked right off the baseball diamond. Baseball fan Billy Grady, head of MGM casting, was impressed with Connors' clownish antics and offered to test him for pictures.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Women are the same all over the world, and I say God bless them," says Fernando Lamas, the Latin lover.

Lamas made a hit co-starring with Lana Turner in "the Merry Widow" and continued with a real-life romance with her that was short-lived but torrid.

His steady date these days is luscious Arlene Dahl, with whom he is starring in "Sangaree." (By curious Hollywood logic, Lana is being squired by Lex Barker, recently divorced from Miss Dahl). An amiable and talkative fellow, the Argentinian reflected at length about women here and abroad.

Little Difference

He observed that women are the same everywhere in the world, differing only in degree.

"American women are slightly different from Latins because they have more freedom," he remarked. "I take my hat off to them; the women here have earned their position of equality with men. They can influence men by direct means, whereas the Latin women cannot. The Latin women have to remain in the home, and the man is the master. Whatever influence they have must come by indirect means.

"The women in the United States have the advantages of equality with men, but they also have disadvantages. In gaining their position, they have had to get in and work elbow-to-elbow with men. Thus they lose a certain quality of softness.

"Ah, softness! That is the thing I look for in a woman. Arlene possesses it to a remarkable degree. But that is probably because she is a second-generation American."

Asked how American and Latin women differ physically, he said:

"I read this once in a book and I believe it is true: 'From the waist down, the American woman is the best; from the waist up, the Latin woman is the best.'

"That is how I feel. American women undoubtedly have the most beautiful legs in the world. The women are also more striking looking, because they are bigger. But for classic beauty, the Latin women have the most beautiful faces."

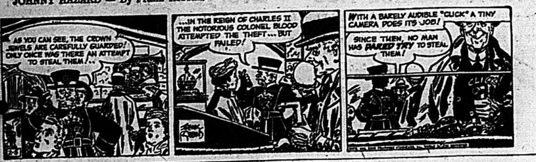
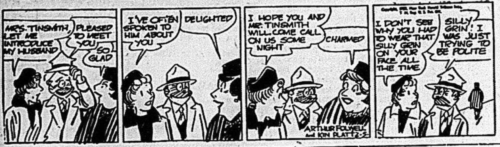
JOHNNY HAZARD — By Frank Robbins



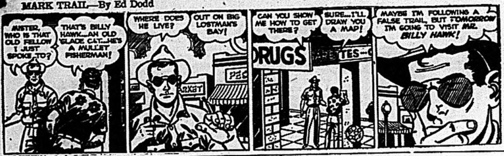
AS YOU CAN SEE, THE CROWN JEWELS ARE CAREFULLY GUARDED! ONLY ONCE WAS THERE AN ATTEMPT TO STEAL THEM!..
...IN THE REIGN OF CHARLES II THE NOTORIOUS COLONEL BLOOD ATTEMPTED THE THEFT... BUT FAILED!
WITH A BARELY AUDIBLE "CLICK" A TINY CAMERA DOES ITS JOB!
SINCE THEN, NO MAN HAS DARED TRY TO STEAL THEM!
CLICK!

MR. AND MRS.—By Arthur Folwell - Kin Platt



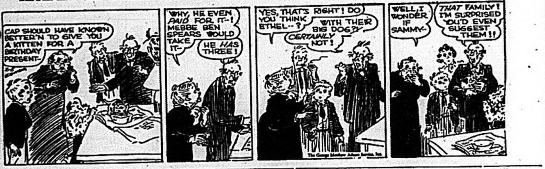
MRS. TINSMITH, LET ME INTRODUCE MY HUSBAND
PLEASED TO MEET YOU
SO GLAD
I'VE OFTEN SPOKEN TO HIM ABOUT YOU
DELIGHTED
I HOPE YOU AND MR. TINSMITH WILL COME CALL ON US SOME NIGHT
CHARMED
I DON'T SEE WHY YOU HAD TO WEAR THAT SILLY GRIN ON YOUR FACE ALL THE TIME
SILLY GRIN! I WAS JUST TRYING TO BE POLITE
ARTHUR FOLWELL and KIN PLATT 2-5

MARK TRAIL—By Ed Dodd



MISTER, WHO IS THAT OLD FELLOW I JUST SPOKE TO?
THAT'S BILLY HAWK...AN OLD 'GLADE CAT...HE'S A MULLET FISHERMAN!
WHERE DOES HE LIVE?
OUT ON BIG LOSTMAN'S BAY!
CAN YOU SHOW ME HOW TO GET THERE?
SURE...I'LL DRAW YOU A MAP!
DRUGS
MAYBE I'M FOLLOWING A FALSE TRAIL, BUT TOMORROW I'M GOING TO VISIT MR. BILLY HAWK!

TIPPIE and "CAP" STUBBS—By Edwina



CAP SHOULD HAVE KNOWN BETTER'N TO GIVE YOU A KITTEN FOR A BIRTHDAY PRESENT-
WHY, HE EVEN PAID FOR IT-! MEBBE BEN SPEARS WOULD TAKE IT-
HE HAS THREE!
YES, THAT'S RIGHT! DO YOU THINK ETHEL--?
WITH THEIR BIG DOG?! CERTAINLY NOT!
WELL, I WONDER IF SAMMY-
THAT FAMILY! I'M SURPRISED YOU'D EVEN SUGGEST THEM!!

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, FEB. 6, 1953.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Indications show gradual upward trend, with p.m. stimulating for most well managed affairs. Don't over-force issues, especially in costly undertakings.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Your stability and natural industry are big stalwarts for today. No unfriendly aspects but day may need extra urge, impetus if you have much to do.

May 21 to June 20 (Gemini)—How about finishing incompleted matters, getting things in order for next week's stimulating days? If urgent, new undertakings could be handled now with careful effort.

June 21to July 23 (Cancer)—Ingenuity, plus initiative, could pay big dividends this interesting period. It may be just that twist, that new angle that is needed to succeed.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—You can profit by following Gemini advice. Try to clear up unfinished business. Home affairs sponsored.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Your innate conservative side could be more elastic now to your advantage. Make use of your talents and critical ability to further progress. Good rays.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Similar indications to Virgo now. Of course, method and tempo will have to be guided by amount of work and the importance and urgency of other tasks.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Interesting, challenging day for one with intelligent daring. That's you! Be better guided by common sense in day's demands.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Management, efficiency and speed highly favored. Be mindful of obligations, particularly to family.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Examine duties for today's schedule, then unworriedly set about completing tasks to best of your ability.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Much good to be done, but it may take extra exertion and no little finesse. Don't falter, have faith in you and your honest work.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Let no one.. nothing hold you down; not even a little indisposition. If rightly ambitious and careful, you can accomplish much today.

YOU BORN TODAY! Very talented but inclined to be too fond of extra comfortable living. Important you keep spiritual development apace with the temporal. Attach yourself to steady occupation early as possible in life. Remember that prayer is ever our need. Birthdate: Aaron Burr, U.S. Veepee; Sir Henry Irving, noted actor.

SIX HOMELESS

SARNIA (CP)—Six persons, including two small children, are homeless after flames gutted their new 1½-storey home Tuesday night in the St. Clair river community of Froomfield. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Grubin, recent immigrants from the Netherlands, were sitting down to supper with their son Hendrick and their daughter Jenny Bornia and her family when the fire broke out.

The Netherlands, Britain Face Serious Problem

LONDON (Reuters)—Thousands of farmers in flood-stricken Britain and the Netherlands face a problem unknown in inland river flooding—salt.

Miles and miles of once-rich farmland have been poisoned by the sea water driven in by last week-end's hurricane.

It will be years before crops can be raised again.

The effect of salt poisoning on farmland can be seen in the heaps of earth worms, washed up dead.

Sea water contains about four ounces of salt to the gallon. Once drained the land is rank and unfertile.

Gypsum can be used to counter the salt but heavy rainfall is needed to dissolve the gypsum and carry it through the soil. Most of the flooded lands are in low rainfall areas and the gypsum cannot be used, anyway, until the topsoil has been drained.

The sudden floods, swamping eastern England, ended harvest hopes this year on hundreds of farms which were green with winter wheat only a few days ago.

Salt water is penetrating deep into the soil, and experts will be forced to wait until late summer or early autumn before they can test the ground for salt contamination. Agriculture ministry scientists believe four years may pass before much of the flooded land returns to normal. With heavy soil it may take longer—up to 20 years for some fields to regain full fertility.

Some of Britain's best arable land has been lost to the life-destroying salt waves.

In Lincolnshire, which produces a sixth of Britain's potato crop and a large part of the wheat crop, 17,000 acres are under water. Farmers are ready to write off the wheat crop as a dead loss in many areas.

In Suffolk, 10,000 acres are under water, seven feet deep in places. Norfolk, Britain's biggest sugar-beet country, reported 12,000 acres flooded, and in Essex farmers surveyed 30,000 ruined acres.

Two Men Killed

ST. JOACHIM, Ont. (CP) — Two men were killed Wednesday and two others injured when a car collided with a truck at an intersection three miles east of here.

Dead are Wilfred St. Jean, 37, and Omer Gangnier, 42, both of Tilbury. Robert McCullough, 24, also of Tilbury, suffered critical injuries and Murry Balsam, 25, of Coatsworth received undetermined injuries.

Police said the car in which the four men were riding smashed into a truck driven by Glenwood McGehan, 35, of Windsor, as the truck crossed No. 2 highway. The truck was thrown 35 feet from the crossing.

St. Joachim is 20 miles west of Chatham.

RAWDON

Business Meeting

RAWDON —— Mount Pleasant Young People's Union held a business meeting at the Allan school on Friday evening.

The pastor, Rev. R. R. Bonsteel, installed the new officers: president — —Miss Ruth Sharpe; vice-president — Ralph Johnson; secretary, Eleanor Smith; treasurer, Bert Sharp; pianist — Betty McConnell; program committee — Ray Sharp, Robert Hoard and Miss Ruth Linn.

The next meeting will be held on Friday evening, February 13th at the school house, and following a business session, the group will journey to St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, where a special rally will be held under the auspices of Stirling, Rawdon and Marmora township Christian Education Department.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sadler and Doris of Glen Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clancy spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Barlow, Bonarlaw.

Mr. and Mrs. Orno Sharp; Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Townsend; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McConnell; Mrs. Carleton Potts, and Mrs. Herbert Smith attended a teacher training course at Sprnigbrook last Wednesday evening.

Rev. George Puttenham, Trenton, and Mr. Ernest Tummon, of Foxboro, president lay association of Belleville Presbytery, paid their official visit to St. Paul's, Carmel, official board meeting last week.

The regular meeting of Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Auxiliary will be held on Wednesday, February 11th at 2 p.m. Mrs. John Holmes will be hostess and Mrs. Percy MacMullen will be in charge of the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Murney Scott.

Two former pastors of Mount Pleasant appointment on Rawdon circuit who were directly associated with the Baptist work have accepted invitations to attend the special service in July.

Rev. W. H. Clarke and Mrs. Clarke, of Deseronto, have happy memories of their association with the Baptist people of Rawdon. In Mr. Clarke's boyhood days on the Oak Hills, the Eggleton Methodist Church and Sidney Baptist congregations were always friendly.

Not Definite Members

When Mr. Clarke came to Rawdon in 1907-08 he noted that a large number of young people were always at church and Sunday school but they were not definite members of either Baptist or Methodist churches.

The Baptist pastor, the late Rev. W. H. Stevens, had the same conditions in his church. The two pastors planned a special mission of week-night services which lasted four weeks, despite snow storms and cold weather. At the close almost 60 people were received into membership in both churches.

When the late Rev. W. H. Stevens was appointed elsewhere, no new pastor was given to the Baptist people so they worshipped mostly with the Methodist folk.

Mr. Clarke is quite active for his age, and one Sunday in January he taught a Sunday School class at Selby and another Sunday he was in charge of the service in Deseronto.

Accepts Invitation

Rev. F. C. Joblin, Port Perry, in his reply [illegible] invitation said, "Health permitting it will be both a pleasure and a privilege to have a part in the program of this praiseworthy project." Mr. Joblin served Rawdon charge for 12 years and it was during his ministry that the old Baptist Church was purchased and then moved to the hill top to become a church hall. Mr. Joblin gave assistance on various days as the men held innumerable bees in order to get the building moved to its new location.

Rawdon folk are delighted that these two ministers directly associated with Baptist work are planning to be in attendance and have small parts in the service.

Mr. Fred King is ill at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow.

Mrs. Paul Sharp and Jack spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharp and Bert.

Harry Morrow, of River Valley community, and reeve of Sidney township, officiated at the ribbon-cutting ceremonies when the new Coca-Cola plant in Belleville was officially opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunham visited Mr. and Mrs. Redy Dunham, Tweed, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brooks are holidaying with relatives in Rochester, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Phillips, Belleville, spent a week at Carmel, at the Brooks' home.

At a recent official board meeting of Carmel United Church, and her sister appointment, it was unanimously decided to pay the minimum salary of $2,700 plus $400. for travelling expenses to the minister, Rev. A. E. Baker.

RAWDON — The River Valley Women's Institute recently sponsored an informal dance at the school house. There were 50 adults in attendance which included 12 visitors from Stirling. The conveners were Mr. and Mrs. Percy Utman, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Utman and Mr. and Mrs. Don Scott.

Music Provided

The music for the evening was furnished in relays with the following people contributing their talent: banjo, Ernest Rosebush; violins, Harry Philp and Kenneth Belcour; piano, Jean Utman, Ivah Thain, Lenora West and Kenneth Morrow.

Birthday prizes were won by Mrs. Charles Davidson and Mr. R. Coombes. Spot dance prize was won by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davidson.

The group enjoyed a series of old-fashioned round dancing and Mr. James McDonnell called four squares.

Refreshments were served and Mrs. Edward Heasman voiced thanks for hospitality.

Next week another euchre will be held with Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen donating the prizes. The president and entertainment committee will convene the party.

CARMEL

CARMEL — Congratulations to Miss Kay Homan, as a member of Hastings County Junior Farmer debating team which took first place in the contest held at Kemptville on Friday.

Free From Rheumatic Pain, Backache; Praises Syntona

Condition Followed Several Years Trouble with Stomach Disorders. Got Dizzy Spells, Nervous, Couldn't Sleep. Tells of Grand Relief.

MRS. LILLIAN ANDRESS

Time and again people have said: "Syntona helped me when I needed it most," or "It is the first medicine that ever gave me any real relief." And that is the experience of Mrs. Lillian Andress, 6 Kenneth Avenue, London, Ontario, as told in a recent report.

"For a number of years I have suffered with stomach disorders having large quantities of gas with bloating, indigestion, and sour acid risings after my meals. I often couldn't eat my meals, became extremely nervous and couldn't sleep.

"But, I really became worried when recently I began to suffer from awful backache and rheumatic pains in my limbs, joints and muscles. I would be so lame and sore that many days I didn't see how I could do my work.

"A few weeks ago a friend advised me to try Syntona and I cannot begin to tell you how pleased I am with the results I have had. I am now free of the aches and pains, backache has gone away and my stomach troubles are relieved for the first time in years. I have no trouble with the dizzy feelings now, sleep more soundly at night and am not nervous as I was before.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by Dolan, the Druggist.

Second Man On The Ticket

By Edwin Lanham

"Mason, did you say?" said John Mills. "You the fellow who wrote that book?"

I winced and said I was, and he said, "My office is just down the street, two doors after the bank."

I left the booth and walked through the lobby to the street. There was much more life in Hydetown now, but if you analyzed it you saw that a large percentage of it was traffic passing through town on the highway. Two doors beyond the bank I saw a window lettered John Mills, Real Estate and insurance, and a solid man with a rosy face pleasantly creased from an uncritical outlook on life was waiting in the doorway.

"Mr. Mason?" he asked, and put out his hand. "Come in, come in. What do you hear from Willie Warburton?"

"Left him last night," I said. "He's making a great campaign."

CHAPTER VIII

I sat down and said. "I wonder if you have a copy of a paper that carries Clyde McDonald's column?"

"Got it right here," he said, and passed me a newspaper folded to the column. I read it through quickly. It reprinted my paragraph from the book and made malicious sport of our efforts to play down the adventures of Willis G. (The Great Hippologist) Warburton at the race tracks.

"Oh, don't let that Great Hippologist stuff worry you," John Mills waved a hand. "People are more broad-minded than they used to be, and for that matter, we never made any bones about horse racing hereabouts. When we were boys racing quarter horses was a great sport."

"Mr. Mills," I said. "I'll tell you why I'm here. Clyde McDonald is on the track of some sort of information discreditable to the Governor and he expects to find it here in Hydetown."

"Discreditable?" said John Mills.

"All I know about it is that Melvin Fisher sent McDonald a telegram telling him that if he came to the reception for the Governor in Hydetown he'd have something juicy for his column."

He frowned. "That I don't like. Mel Fisher is a pretty cagey customer. He doesn't go off half-cocked." He shook his head.

"And you haven't any idea?"

"No idea at all." He leaned back in his chair and gazed out at the steady stream of traffic. Thoughtfully, he said, "I don't suppose it could have anything to do with Hattie Perkins."

"Hattie Perkins?" I said weakly. "A girl?"

He grinned at me. "I guess she was a girl once, but it was before my time. No, Mr. Mason, Harriet Perkins taught school out of town a ways."

"Yes," I said. "Now I remember the name."

"You ought to," he said, "You had her in that book."

"But what could Miss Perkins have to do with it?"

"I'm wondering," he said. "I'm wondering about that myself. Miss Hattie told somebody she wasn't coming to the reception Wednesday. It's all over town that Miss Hattie won't be there."

I sat up straighter. "Why not?"

He grinned. "I reckon you can take the blame for that, young fellow. It's that book. She don't like it."

• • •

There were prickles along my spine, and I swallowed hard; it seemed that everything came back to my book.

"But I barely mentioned her," I said. "Do you have a copy of that book?"

"I sure have." He produced it from the top drawer of his desk and passed it to me. "Page 76," he said. "I looked it up myself when I heard how Miss Hattie felt about it."

I read the paragraph as if I had never seen it before.

> Governor Warburton's schooldays were typical of the rugged hard-working community in which he lived, yet among the fondest recollections of his boyhood is Miss Harriet Perkins, from whom he received his early education. To this day he recalls her affectionately as "Hatchet Hattie," and his memories of her and the little red school house warm his thoughts of boyhood. Governor Warburton walked two miles to school every day, after doing his chores, yet his marks were the highest in the class in spite of the many afternoons that "Hatchet Hattie," a strict disciplinarian, kept him after school for minor juvenile misdemeanors. He recollects today that Miss Perkins had predicted a great future for him, but thinks that even she would be astonished to find him a candidate for Vice President of the United States.

"We all called her Hatchet Hattie," he said. "I don't know that she ever objected to it, but maybe she didn't like seeing it in print. And besides, reading that paragraph you'd get the idea Miss Hattie had moved on to greener pastures. It might be that, too."

I sighed unhappily. "The truth is, Mr. Mills, it never occurred to me that she might still be alive."

"I think we ought to go out and see her," he said.

His car was parked at the curb, and after he had hung a Back Soon sign on his door, we drove out to Miss Harriet Perkins' home a half mile from the centre of town. On the way he said, "I'm thinking you're right. We're off the track. It couldn't have anything to do with Miss Hattie."

Miss Perkins lived in the sort of white cottage with green blinds and rambler roses that I might well have described in the book, so hackneyed was my literary vein, and so trite was the cottage. There was even a girl among the roses, under a trellis, a girl with honey-colored hair and deep blue eyes and a trace of freckles.

"Ginny," he said, "let me make you acquainted with Mr. Mason. Ginny is Mis Hattie's grandniece, Mr. Mason. Miss Virginia Perkins."

I said, "How do you do?" and I thought that for the first time in years I was looking at something original, a product without make-up or artifice, a raw material that required no processing.

"My friend wants to talk to Miss Hattie," John said.

She looked at me. "Then you'd better take it off," she said. Her voice was low and very clear, with no sorghum in the Southern accent.

"Take what off?" I asked.

"The button," she said. "The "The button," s ehsaid. "The campaign button. She'd throw a fit if she saw that Warburton button."

"Better take it off, Mr. Mason," John Mills said.

"Mason?" the girl said.

"Yes, I wrote the book," I interrupted.

"Oh, well," Ginny Perkins said, and spread her hands. "Then I'm afraid Aunt Hattie won't want to see you."

• • •

CHAPTER IX

Ginny returned within a minute, spreading her hands gracefully and smiling at me. "I'm so sorry," she said. "Aunt Hattie says no, very emphatically no."

I frowned. "If I could only explain to her."

The girl shook her head, and her blond hair moved along her shoulders. "Aunt Hattie said, Mr. Mason, that she did not wish to see you, or any other emissary from Willis G. Warburton, now or at any time."

"If she said that, Mr. Mason, Miss Hattie means it," John Mills said, and shrugged. "All right if I walk around and say hello to her Ginny?"

Ginny smiled. "I'm sure she'd never close the door to you, John. But I wouldn't mention Mr. Warburton, if I were you."

I dropped onto a bench under the trellis of roses and gazed unhappily at my feet. I heard John's step on the gravel as he went away, and then Virginia Perkins said softly, "It's too bad, Mr. Mason, but Aunt Hattie has a real mad on Willis G. Warburton. I don't think there's anything you can do."

"I'd like to find out why," I said.

"I'm afraid it's the book you wrote."

"Did you read it? I never wrote a more harmless little paragraph."

'I'll tell you what she said," said Ginny. "So he thinks Miss Hattie is dead, does he? So he thinks he can say what he pleases, does he? Well, he'll find out."

"But it's not the Governor's fault," I protested. "I wrote the book. He didn't write the book. He didn't even okay it. He's never even read it himself."

She said softly, "You've written a lot of books, haven't you?"

• • •

I looked up into her blue eyes, became aware that I was sitting and she was not, and quickly stood up. "Yes," I said. "A couple."

"I haven't read the others," she said. "I just read this one. I can see you're awfully devoted to Mr. Warburton."

"I am," I said.

"I suppose youve been with him a long, long time."

"Just this campaign. But I've known him a good many years." Her smile returned, provocative and lingering. "I imagine you'll be going to Washington, too, with him. I suppose you'll be in his Cabinet, or something."

"The Vice-President doesn't have a cabinet, Miss Perkins," I said. "My one hope is that he will go to Washington."

"I'm anxious to meet him," she said. "Aunt Hattie isn't going to the reception, but I certainly am. I wouldn't miss it for anything. He's very handsome in his pictures, and even on that button. Is he coming to the dance, too?"

"I guess so," I said. "Is there a dance?"

"At the high school gymnasium. I guess the whole county will be there. They're running special buses and it's a school holiday and all that. I hope he does come to the dance."

"If I should ask you for a dance Miss Perkins," I said. "I hope you won't turn me down."

"Why, Mr. Mason, I'll save one for you," she said. "I surely will. I just hope you can find me in all that crowd."

"I'll find you," I said. "Depend on that."

It occurred to me that my tone had been somewhat fervent, and I was embarrassed. I suppose being brought up in New York City had something to do with it. When I was a kid I lacked that casual, graceful life of a small town. At least I had always supposed it was casual and graceful, and moving to a small Middle Western city had not cured me of the notion.

"I'm sorry you're unwelcome to Aunt Hattie," the girl said. "I just don't dare ask you to lunch. But, anyhow, I'll be seeing you at the dance."

John Mills returned then. He met my eyes, shrugged. "No use, Mr. Mason. She just won't talk to you."

"There are ways to get around Aunt Hattie," Ginny Perkins said. "You can't just meet her head on. The thing to do is to meet her casually, when she doesn't know who you are, and then work into it."

"Sure," said John Mills. "But where is he going to meet her casually?"

"Oh, anyplace," said Ginny. "In church, or at the bingo game at the firehouse tonight. Aunt Hattie and I are going."

• • •

I walked to the car with John Mills, and as we drove away Ginny Perkins was standing by the garden gate.

"Well," said John Mills. "I couldn't get anywhere with Miss Hattie myself."

"That's too bad," I said. "But there's no juicy item in Miss Hattie."

"I'm not so sure," he said.

"What do you mean by that?"

"I couldn't get anything out of her," he said. "But I did make mention of the big blowout Wednesday. You know, this town is going to be crowded, Mr. Mason. The Chamber of Commerce has asked the homeowners to let out their spare rooms, and most of 'em are doing it, even Miss Hattie. You know who came around to see her about taking somebody in?"

"Who?"

"Melvin Fisher," John Mills said, and pressed his lips together. "And you know who that somebody is?"

I groaned. "You don't mean Clyde McDonald?"

"That's right," he said. "Clyde McDonald."

CHAPTER X

There was no mistaking the firehouse. It was on a side street, opening off the highway, and floodlights shone on the red apparatus drawn up outside the door polished bright for the occasion. A big sign said: Bingo Tonight. Benefit Hydetown Vol. F.D.

Ginny had left her handbag on the wooden bench beside her to hold a seat. I approached and said, "Excuse me Miss, Is this seat taken?"

"Yes," a voice said quickly.

It was my first sight of Harriet Perkins, and I was surprised by what I saw. I had expected a tiny, brittle woman, but Miss Hattie was quite fat, with that shapeless, voluminous obesity which disguises almost all trace of the human figure. Her face was thinner than would be expected, and her nose sharp.

"Aunt Hattie, I doubt if Mr. Mills is coming," Ginny Perkins said and picked up her handbag. She said to me, "We were saving this seat for a friend, but you may as well sit here until he comes."

I said, "Thank you, miss," and stepped over the bench to sit beside her. A fireman appeared at my elbow and said. "How many? Dime apiece. Three for quarter"

"I'll take three," I said. I pulled out a handful of change, paid him a quarter, and dropped the change in a pile on the table.

"I hope I have some luck tonight," Miss Hattie's thin voice said, in a whispering tone that excluded me.

"You'll have luck, Aunt Hattie," the girl said. "I just know you'll win that reading lamp."

On a table against the wall the prizes were arrayed, in different categories. If you won a game of bingo you received a ticket. Some prizes were awarded for one ticket, but others required two, and even three. I spotted the reading lamp in the three-ticket category.

The wheel was spinning and I dropped a kidney bean or two on my cars on the first number called. Miss Hattei's fingers kept rolling a bean over and over and she stared fixedly at her card.

"Pretty good crowd tonight," I said conversationally.

"Sh," said Miss Hattie, and Ginny's elbow nudged my ribs.

I sat silent, trying to think of a conversational gambit and keep track of my three cards at the same time, and suddenly Ginny called out, "Bingo!"

Miss Hattie turned her head quickly and said, "Oh, fine."

"Not me," said Ginny. "Him."

• • •

I looked at my card and saw I had bingo. A fireman attendant took the card, called the numbers aloud for checking, and gave me a winner's ticket.

"I only had two numbers covered," Miss Hattie said. "That's lucky, winning the first time."

"I guess this is my lucky night." I said. "I was taking a walk and saw the firehouse all lighted up, so I stopped in. Glad I did."

"Selling?"

"Yes," I said. "Yes, indeed."

Miss Hattie nodded, as if she had me pigeonholed in a common place corner, then she said quickly, "Sh. Here we go again."

We all bent to our cards as a fireman spun the wheel and called the numbers. This time I kept careful track and the same card won a second time. I shouted "Bingo!"

Miss Hattie turned her head, and the lines around her eyes had tightened up. She shifted her bulk on the hard bench.

The fireman checked the card. gave me another ticket. "I never saw such luck," said Miss Hattie, wooden-faced. "I was about to go bingo myself."

"I must have the lucky card," I said. "I won each time with the same card." I dropped it in front of Miss Hattie. "Want to trade?"

"Oh, no, I couldn't do that."

"Go ahead," I said. "I've won twice already. That's enough for me."

Miss Hattie passed her card over and took mine, saying, "Well that's mighty nice of you. It is. indeed. You know what I'm going to do, Ginny? I'm going to make a little mark on the back of this one, so we can find it next time."

She marked an X on the back of the card and reversed it hastily when the man began calling numbers again. She immediately snatched a bean and whispered excitedly, "I've got that number!"

"That is the lucky card, Aunt Hattie," Ginny said.

Miss Hattie Squealed. "N-37. I have that, too."

I also had the number, and put down a bean.

"In the N," the fireman called. "Number 96."

"N-96," Miss Hattie cried. "I've got N-96!" She gave me a smile.

The next number was G-24, which I had, then 1-9, and I also had that one. Two more numbers were called before Miss Hattie put another bean on her card. She was exultant she needed only one number to win.

• • •

The next number was B-8. I put a bean on the number and saw I had a line of beans across the top of the card. I had bingo. I sat looking at the row of beans as the next number was called, then a friendly voice said over my shoulder, "Say, you've got bingo. Speak up."

I looked up into the eyes of the fireman, sighed, and called out, "Bingo."

EISENHOWER ENDS ALL WAGE, SALARY CONTROLS

Defiant Holland Resumes Battle To Reclaim Soil

Evacuation of Thousands Now Largely Completed

By JOSEPH DYNAN

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Flood-ravaged Holland—facing a $1,000,000,000 damage bill—fought back today against the North Sea. Determined officials said every inch of Dutch soil would be reclaimed from crop-killing salt water.

A few areas where the angry ocean threatened to punch through weakened dikes still were in danger, but officials reported the evacuation of thousands of persons from the flooded southwest lowlands has been largely completed.

Rescue efforts were concentrated today on saving about 1,000 persons huddled in the town of Noorgouwe. A new break in a nearby dike already has engulfed one previously evacuated village.

As Holland, Britain and Belgium added up the staggering damage bill from the week-end storm, the three-country death toll rose to 1,919.

British List 546 Dead

Britain listed 546 dead, Belgium 23 and Holland—by far the worst afflicted of the three—counted 1,350. But this figure did not include hundreds of missing. Many of their bodies, it is feared, still lie trapped in homes several feet below sea level. Unofficial estimates of the Dutch toll alone have reached as high as 2,000.

House of Lords Shaken by Jap Tartan 'Whisky'

LONDON (CP) — Regretfully, the House of Lords concluded Thursday that some products are not what their advertisers claim them to be.

Lord Mancroft, a government supporter, informed an appreciative audience that before the debate he had been given half a bottle of whisky.

"The label," he said, "is printed on the background of the clan McGregor tartan.

"In the lefthand corner is a stalwart Scot declaring defiance to all comers.

"In the righthand corner is written 'Pride of the Glen gold label liqueur whisky.'

"In minute letters at the bottom is the legend, 'Made in Japan.'

"The word 'Scotch' does not appear anywhere," Lord Mancroft said.

"But that is the impression the label is intended to convey to the unwary drinker."

Shaken to the core, the Lords gave an unanimous second reading to a bill aimed at tightening trade-mark regulations and imposing stiffer penalties for faking.

Place of Horse Racing, Midway Ends in Draw

TORONTO. (CP) —A discussion on the place of horse racing and midways at country fairs ended in a draw Thursday at the annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies.

M. L. Tory Gregg, of Wingham, and Mrs. Alex Henderson of Stratford, took the view that many fairs offered poor racing cards and little in midways.

They held that many fairs got along without either, but Ray Wilson of Avonmore said the races and midway helped pay for the prize money given in the agricultural classes.

Charlotte McCullough of Georgetown said she thought the small games of chance in many midways are educational, teaching farm lads they couldn't get something for nothing.

New Series of Bills

OTTAWA (CP)—The Bank of Canada plans to start issuing an entirely new series of paper money bearing the figure of the Queen late in 1954.

Graham Towers, the bank's head told a press conference Thursday the new bills will not be ready in time for the Coronation June 2.

The bank currently is working on designs for the new bills, but it will be some months" before they are ready, said Mr. Towers.

We hope to have them ready for circulation toward the end of 1954. All denominations will be changed."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: A small disturbance in Missouri developed into a major storm Thursday night which recurved sharply northward through Lake Michigan and carried warm air northward into most of Ontario. Only scattered showers occurred in this warm air ahead of the storm but considerable snow and rain has fallen on Northern Ontario during the night. Cooler air moving southeastward behind the storm centre will enter Southern Ontario today bringing very strong gusty winds and slightly cooler temperatures tonight. However, temperatures in all regions will remain much above normal tonight and Saturday.

Fire Destroys $60,000 Church

ALBAN (CP) — A $60,000 fire early today destroyed Our Lady of Lourdes Roman Catholic Church in this farming and tourist village 60 miles southwest of North Bay.

The blaze broke out in the frame church about 3 a. m. and flames enveloped the 19-year-old structure and the adjoining priest's quarters in less than half an hour.

MORE

Rev. Ovila Campeau, parish priest, was awakened by smoke in the rectory. He summoned aid from Alban and called the fire brigade at Noelville, 12 miles to the north.

Alban has no central water supply. After half an hour's firefighting, a fire ranger's pump and line exhausted the water in nearby wells.

The furniture from the rectory was saved but all the furnishings of the church were lost. Attempts to remove the blessed sacrament from the altar tabernacle were in vain.

HURT BY HOMEMADE BOMB

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Richard Jakubowksi, 21, was critically injured Thursday night when a homemade bomb he was working on exploded in his basement. No explanation was given as to why Jakubowski was fashioning the bomb.

Britons Demonstrate Fidelity to Queen Who Completes First Year of Reign

By ALVIN STEINKOPF

LONDON (AP)— Cannon boomed in London today — 41 bangs in sunny Hyde Park and 62 at the Tower.

In many other ways Britons demonstrated their fidelity to 26-year-old Queen Elizabeth II, who completed the first year of her reign.

Flags were unfurled, the troops paraded and the press was filled with laudatory references to the sovereign who is expected to introduce an Elizabethan era of enterprise and adventure.

The Queen didn't hear the salutes. She was at Sandringham in Norfolk, where her father, King George VI, died one year ago today. She was making the most of the final days of a long holiday, before her return to London and Coronation duties this year. There were indications that she was thinking more of her father than of the anniversary of her reign, and she made it another day of dedication.

The Queen and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, attended a private celebration of holy communion, motoring in cold but bright weather from Sandringham House to the little parish church, where her father lay in state a year ago. The communion service, for the Queen and Duke alone, was conducted by the Rev. H. D. Anderson, domestic chaplain of the Queen.

Britons, reflecting on her first year as Queen, generally agreed that she had conducted herself with the dignity and poise expected of a British sovereign.

The newspapers today stressed her human attributes — Queen, but woman too.

RECORD REVENUES FORECAST IN GAGNON BUDGET

No New Taxation In Budget Address

QUEBEC (CP) — Estimates of record revenues highlighted Finance Minister Gagnon's budget, brought down Thursday in the Quebec legislature.

He forecast revenues of $280,766,300 during the fiscal year ending March 31 and of $288,494,009 for 1953-54.

No new taxation was announced in the 15,000-word budget speech although an anticipated over-all surplus of $1,851,756 for the current term failed to materialize.

Capital expenditures amount to $81,145,000, instead of an anticipated $43,206,000, turned the anticipated surplus into an over-all deficit of $38,905,700.

An ordinary account, however, Mr. Gagnon reported a probable surplus of $42,239,300.

Here are the figures given by Mr. Gagnon for the current year: Total revenue, $280,766,300; total ordinary expenditure, including debt charges, $238,547,000; capital expenditure $81,145,000.

His estimate for the term beginning April 1:

Total revenue, $288,494,900; total expenditure, including debt charges, $267,999,800; capital expenditure, $48,905,000.

The estimated expenditure for the current year means it will reach the unprecedented level of $319,672,000. The final figures will only be known next August.

Most sources of revenue were expected to yield more money in the coming year. Big revenue producers like corporation, sales, motor vehicles and gasoline taxes will, as usual, form the bulk of revenues.

On the spending side of the budget, health, education and roads will make up most of the expenditure.

Mr. Gagnon said he was proud to state that health and education will take up one-third of the entire budget.

Tracing a broad picture of the province's economic situation, the finance minister outlined prospects for Quebec's prosperity through development of its natural resources.

Financially, Quebec is healthy, he said.

The province's net debt was reduced from $308,243,440 in 1945 to $248,776,843 in 1952.

Funded debt of the province was $328,292,000 in 1944 and now stood at $330,418,000, an increase of $2,126,000 in eight years.

Turning to federal-provincial relations, Mr. Gagnon said Ottawa has "encroached" into provincial taxation fields. Quebec was the only province that did not sign a taxation agreement with the federal government.

The government was "fully aware of the difficulties faced by corporations owing to the fact that Ontario has signed an agreement with Ottawa" and continues "carefully to study this question in a spirit of justice for all taxpayers."

COLD IN NORWAY

OSLO, Norway (Reuters)—Thursday night was the coldest of the winter in many parts of Norway. Drevsjoe, near the Swedish frontier, registered 43 below zero.

Soviet State Security Police Arrest Three Men, Woman, All Russians, on Spy Charges

By THOMAS P. WHITNEY

MOSCOW (AP)—Pravda reported today that state security police have arrested three men and a woman, all Soviet citizens, on charges of spying and alleged that the U. S. intelligence service had especially trained one of the men for espionage.

The Communist party paper identified the four as:

T. A. Sas, "an agent schooled for spying by Americans in Germany."

S. D. Gurevich, a "veteran Trotskyite."

E. A. Taratuta, a woman formerly employed by the Soviet Union's academy of sciencies.

K. F. Romanov, a former teacher who once tried to steal from a cartel.

Said Secrets Passed

Pravda said all four had passed secrets to foreign governments. Their activities, the paper said, make it evident "that foreign intelligence services use as agents all kinds of criminals and rotten elements."

The paper called again for intense vigilance against Soviet enemies. It backed its spy charge with this account:

Sas, a Soviet railway worker during the Second World War, deserted to the Germans and reported to the Gestapo on other Soviet citizens, two of whom were hanged on his testimony.

Complete Special School

After the war, the Americans enlisted him in their service and "after having completed a special school he was sent back by American intelligence into the USSR as a repatriate."

In Krivoi Rog, an iron-ore centre in the Ukraine, Sas "tried to conduct subversive and anti-Soviet work, enlisting all kinds of rotten and criminal elements."

Gurevich established a friendship with Trotskyites while in the U.S. from 1914 to 1917.

"After his return to Russia, Gurevich became an active participant and active member of an anti-Soviet Trotskyite group.

Practised Deceit Claim

"In 1927, Gurevich submitted to the party organization a declaration of renunciation of Trotskyism — this was deceit and double dealing.

"Remaining a hidden Trotskyite and an inveterate enemy of the Soviet people, Gurevich established in 1939 ties with a foreign intelligence service and for a number of years supplied it with espionage information. . .

"Gurevich drew into the espionage work a former worker at one of the institutes of the academy of sciences of the USSR, E. A. Taratuta, whom he entrusted with obtaining information on the attainments of the society of scientists.

"As a result of carelessness and the gullibility of certain workers of the institute, Taratuta succeeded in stealing a number of secret documents."

Romanov, who allegedly was caught trying to pass information to a foreign power, was drawn into espionage by his "criminal past."

While working in Vilno as chairman of a "strength" cartel, he "tried to steal a large sum of state money but was exposed and, fearing arrest, fled the city."

Premier Naguib Heralds Early End British Occupation of Egypt

CAIRO (AP) — Premier Naguib today heralded the early end of British occupation of Egypt and the Sudan but called upon the Egyptians to increase their efforts toward building a new Egypt after the "victory over imperialism is won."

The soldier-premier, speaking to an estimated 30,000 jamming big Abdin Square outside the royal palace, stated "we are on the point of ending the occupation."

"The struggle for evacuation needs development and organization. We must be careful not to become drunk with triumph. The days ahead will be as dangerous as today. We must not allow ourselves to take it for granted that victory will be on our side."

Naguib was talking from the balcony of the royal guard barracks which has become headquarters of the "Liberation Rally."

The occasion of Naguib's speech was the inauguration of the rally. This will be the only political instrument in Egypt for a three-year transition period. Dissolution of all political parties was announced in January.

Substantial Aid for Dutch People Pledged by Dulles

The Hague (AP) — John Foster Dulles arrived in Holland today for a first-hand survey of damage wrought by the flood disaster and its impact on European defence planning.

President Eisenhower's four-motored plane brought the U. S. secretary of state and foreign - aid chief Harold Stassen safely to Amsterdam's Schipoli airfield after an hour's flight, part of it through fog, from the West German capital at Bonn.

Their departure from Bonn had been delayed an hour and 16 minutes by ice on the plane's wings and they took off in fog, giving rise to a report that theplane had developed icing "difficulties."

Dulles assured the Dutch of U.S. aid for their recovery from the flood disaster.

In a statement at the airport, he said:

"May we extend again on behalf of our government and the American people our most heartfelt sympathy for your plight. We also renew our pledge to assist in relieving the suffering of your people. I am glad to know that our armed forces in Europe have already been able to give substantial aid."

"En route here, the two U.S. officials flew over part of Holland's flooded southwest, where more than 1,000,000 persons are in distress, a fourth of the country's arable lands are ruined by salt water, and damage has been estimated in the neighborhood of $1-000,000,000.

Dulles described the situation there as "terrible" and said, "we feel very badly about it."

Four Children Burned to Death, Tank Explodes

MONTREAL LAKE, Sask. (CP) Four children were burned to death Wednesday on the Indian reserve here, about 60 miles north of Prince Albert. Their home was gutted by a fire caused by the explosion of a gasoline tank.

The children were aged 3 and 4. They belonged to three families. Mother of two of the children, Mrs. Robert Campbell, is in hospital at Prince Albert receiving treatment for extensive burns. Her condition was reported fair.

Mrs. Campbell's husband is stationed at an army camp in British Columbia.

Unfit for Trial

TORONTO (CP)—A 19-year-old youth, charged with shooting three persons Nov. 14 after seeing a movie called "The Sniper," was judged Thursday "unfit to stand trial because of insanity."

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer ordered Donald Edward Fisher, arraigned on three charges of attempted murder, to be kept in custody until the lieutenant-governor decides he is fit to be tried.

Fisher was arrested after police said he had fired at least a dozen shots with a .22-calibre rifle.

GOVT. FEELS FORMOSA SHOULD BE NEUTRALIZED

--Pearson

'Concerned' With Action Taken by Eisenhower

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government believes the island of Formosa should be neutralized, so far as possibile, while hostilities continue in Korea.

External Affairs Minister Pearson told the Commons Thursday that the Canadian government is "concerned with" the action of President Eisenhower in deneutralizing Formosa. He stressed the action was taken on the "sole responsibility" of the U. S. government.

He recalled that the U. S. government ordered the U. S. 7th fleet to Formosa June 27, 1950, following the outbreak of war in Korea. The fleet was instructed to prevent any attack on Formosa from the Chinese mainland and to ensure that the island would not be used as a base for operations against the Chinese Communist mainland.

The defence of Formosa was not part of the United Nations obligations shared by Canada in Korea.

"Our consistent position has been that this island should be neutralized, so far as that is possible, while hostilities continue in Korea," said Mr. Pearson.

View Remains

"Our view has been and remains that the final disposition of Formosa should be a subject to be discussed at a conference on Far Eastern problems which should be held when the fighting ceases in Korea . . ."

The Canadian government, he added, will follow developments with the "closest possible attention and take appropriate action to make our views known whenever the occasion so warrants."

Then in a statement somewhat similar to one made in the British Commons by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, Mr. Pearson said:

"Meanwhile, I think it would be unwise and premature to jump to dogmatic or critical conclusions concerning the step taken by the United States government, and announced in a statement by President Eisenhower, which contained so much that was wise and heartening to us all."

Purpose to End War

Mr. Pearson said he is convinced the purpose of President Eisenhower is to end and not to extend the war in Korea. The President had stated clearly that modifying the fleet's orders "implies no aggressive intent on our part."

The fleet had been ordered to Formosa before Chinese Communists had entered the struggle in Korea. Mr. Pearson said he supposes the order gave the Communist forces in China a feeling of immunity from attack from Formosa.

This situation became increasingly unacceptable to the people of the United States, especially since the Chinese Communists continued their aggression in Korea and rejected efforts to end the war.

Mr. Pearson said he does not think it need be assumed that revising the fleet's orders will mean that Nationalist forces of China soon will launch large-scale operations on the mainland.

House-to-House Search on Canvey As Britons Mop Up After Flood

LONDON (Reuters). — Retreating waters permitted police to start a house-to-house search today for bodies of flood victims known to be still in the rubble on Canvey Island, worse hit spot in Britain's flood disaster.

Forty-seven bodies have already been recovered from the island in the Thames estuary, once London's closest seaside resort and now a seven-mile stretch of desolation.

An unknown number of islanders are missing and police said it would be several days before Canvey's final death toll would be known.

The official total of known deaths for the entire east coast region is 264, Home Secretary Sir David Maxwell Fyfe told Parliament today, but unofficial estimates put the toll as high as 377.

In addition, 169 drowned in three ship sinkings.

Fyfe also said that nearly half the gaps torn in protective sea walls along a 160-mile stretch of England's coast have already been repaired.

Thousands of troops and volunteer workers, aided by bulldozers and other engineering equipment, are working to restore the broken sea walls before the next high spring tides, due Feb. 14.

British firemen volunteered through their trade union today to work an 84-hour week instead of their normal 60-hour week to help pump water out of flooded areas.

Fyfe said the coastal walls wrecked by last Saturday's floods had only once before been seriously breached — in the 14th century.

Also Orders Prices Lifted On Wide Range Of Goods

Employers and Employees Free to Make Agreements

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today ended all wage and salary controls in the United States. He also ordered price controls lifted from a wide range of consumer goods, including all meat products.

A White House statement said the President took the actions in a move "toward eliminating in an orderly fashion the price and wage controls under which the American economy has been required to operate for the past two years."

The end of wage and salary controls means employers and their workers are free to make any agreements they wish about pay matters.

Government regulations have, in some instances, restrained employers from granting wage increases despite mutual agreement.

The controls were part of the government's efforts to battle the inflationary rise in prices and wages which set in sharply after the Korean war broke out in 1950.

The announcement as to price controls said the office of price stabilization was issuing orders removing price curbs immediately from "a wide and varied list of consumer goods, including all meat products, all furniture, all apparel, all meals sold in restaurants and public eating places."

It said the price order affects "nearly all of the thousands of items normally sold in department stores, and many more."

Passenger, Pilot Uninjured In Plane Crash

KILLARNEY, Ont. (CP) —A plane crashed and partially burned here Thursday, but its pilot and a passenger climbed out uninjured before it caught fire.

Moe Sears said he was taking off from this community about 100 miles southwest of North Bay, when a ski hit a large chunk of ice, spilling fuel from the gas tank. Mr. Sears and Mrs. Maude Roque climbed free before flames enveloped the cabin.

Nine persons who had planned to board the craft for later flights now are stranded at this Georgian Bay port since planes provide the only winter transportation to Little Current, 23 miles southwest. Another plane from Sudbury will fly in repairs for the damaged plane and complete the passenger run.

REPAIR JOB FREE

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Norman Brandt found pieces of metal in a flat tire he was fixing at his service station Thursday. He fitted them together. It was a ring he had lost two years ago when he sold and installed the same tire. Brandt made no charge for the repair job.

Lives Too Long, Peer Apologizes To Beneficiaries

DOLTON, Eng. (AP) — Ninety-year-old Charles John Robert Hepburn-Stuart Forbes-Trefusis, the 21st Baron Clinton, apologized to his heirs today for living so long.

To prove that he means it, he said he is going to take care of three of the beneficiaries in his will without further delay. It will cost him £6,000.

"I should have popped off long ago, and here I am still feeling quite fit," the Baron told a reporter.

"Away back in 1930 or so I made bequests in my will of £2,000 each to the three Episcopalian diocesan councils with which I have been connected. The money was to be used to aid the 'poorer living' clergy.

"I think they have waited quite long enough for it, and I have decided to let them have their bequests immediately.

"I am really feeling quite guilty about my surprising longevity."

The clergymen are those of the Brechin, Aberdeenshire-Orkney and Exeter dioceses.

Police Probing Deaths of Four Treaty Indians

EDMONTON. (CP) Royal Canadian Mounted Police are investigating the deaths of four treaty Indians on the Rocky Mountain Forest reserve, near Nordegg, Alta., 130 miles southwest of Edmonton.

R.C.M.P. officials Thursday identified the dead as Moses Wesley, 72; his wife, Mary, 70; and two grandchildren, Elsie Wesley, 19, and Earl Wesley, 16.

It was believed the four may have died of food poisoning.

Police said the four had gone to sleep Monday night in one cabin while the father of the children, Tom Wesley, slept in another cabin: Tuesday morning, Tom found his mother dead and the others critically ill. A doctor from Nordegg reached the party late that day and found the grandfather had died. The two children were taken to hospital at Nordegg where they died.

DOGS IN POUND

Three dogs are serving durance vile in the local dog pound today, Charles Thorn, 44 Cannifton Road, has informed the Ontario Intelligencer.

One, which was described as merely a black and white dog of varied parentage, was picked up Thursday. Another, a black spaniel, also entered the paddy wagon Thursday.

The third, mostly black with brown spots on its paws, is caricatured as part collie and part spaniel, the spaniel side of the house predominating in this case.

All three are males. Mr. Thorn advises the public that impounded dogs are kept for 72 hours, then destroyed.

FOREMEN'S CLUB PLANS CHARTER NIGHT

Eugene E. Sparrow, chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario and a strong supporter of the Canadian Foremen's Club movement will be the guest speaker, of the local Foremen's Club, on Wednesday, February 18.

The organization committee held its second meeting at the YMCA. This group is composed of two foremen from 12 different industries and is responsible for making all the plans necessary for a "charter" meeting. Among the tasks facing the members of the committee are: drafting a cstitution; presenting a slate of officers for the coming year; enlisting members for the club and making a rough draft of the program for the next few months.

When the club duly organizes on the 18th. it will become the first Foremen's Club organized in 1953.

Family Assisted By Red Cross, Salvation Army

Ever ready in the time of need, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross have donated clothing and furniture to the Damon King family of Foxboro, who earlier in the week lost their home by fire along with all furniture and personal possessions.

The morning following the fire the Salvation Army took clothing for the family and yesterday took out articles of furniture, including a Quebec heater, bed and mattress and dishes.

Also on Thursday, Mrs. A. H Ketcheson and Mrs. Herbert McCabe as members of the Emergency Committee of the Belleville Red Cross, took out new bedding, pillows and clothing for the entire family.

Rooms have been secured at Foxboro for Mr. and Mrs. King and their two small children.

This is the fourteenth family suffering loss by fire who have been assisted by the Red Cross within the past year. Several other unfortunate families have also been aided.

H. Smith Heads C.S. Association

BANCROFT — The annual meeting and election of officers of the Bancroft branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario was held at Barry's Bay on Wednesday evening.

Harry Smith, Dept. Highways, of Bancroft, was elected president succeeding Ed Burke who thanked the members for their cooperation throughout the past year.

Re-elected as secretary was J. A. Hutchinson, Bancroft, who will assume the additional office of treasurer on a motion of the members to combine the two offices.

John Hawkins, Milton Brough and John Thur, Bancroft, were acclaimed to vice-presidencies.

The organization, representing 170 provincial civil servants in the Counties of Hastings, Renfrew and Lennox-Addington, plans to hold quarterly meetings.

A report by the secretary, John Hutchinson, on the provincial council and annual meetings of the Association held in Toronto, was adopted by the branch.

Don Russell acted as chairman of the meeting and conducted the election of officers.

Order Necessary In Life of Blind Says Stenographer

"That order is heaven's first law is a maxim fully agreed upon by the blind," said Miss Gabrielle Allen, blind stenographer with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. "Dear knows what would happen if we didn't adhere to this rule in the stenographic department," she continued. "It is all right if papers of a different texture, like onion skin and bond, get out of order, but should we place headings the wrong way round in our drawers, some peculiar-looking letters and memos might result."

"Then there is the matter of different letterheads. We may have as many as half a dozen. These are arranged by compartments in our desk drawers, the order memorized and held to. When we need a fresh supply we know exactly where to find each heading in the stenographic cupboard."

Applies to Lives

"This rule of order applies in our lives generally," said Miss Allen. "We are one group of women who must have order in our handbags, or else! Our dollar bills are folded one way, two dollar bills another way, and so on. A friend of mine who is manager of the C.N.I.B. Cafeteria at Westeel, tells me he keeps his one dollar bills in the drawer, two dollar bills in one pocket, five dollar bills in another pocket and ten dollar bills in yet another pocket. Cents, nickles, dimes, quarters and half dollar pieces have their respective places in the series of wooden bowls provided for them. It sounds complicated but he makes change quickly."

"My great hobby,' Miss Allen confided, "is acting. I don't know what we should do without order on the stage, probably walk into the footlights and maybe end our lives as well as the play. Because a recognized order is so carefully followed, I can't think of any serious accidents and I have been acting quite a long time. The first play I took part in was a religious play in the convent in which I was placed as a little girl in Ireland.

"This is how we do it. There is a rug placed in front of the footlights. We know where we are when our feet touch it. There is usually a fireplace, or at least a mantel, on which a clock ticks, not loudly, but clearly, centre stage. We have memorized the positions of chairs, tables, etc., and the centre of the stage is left clear as possible. O course," Miss Allen said, "we learn the value of order early in our blindness but we learn by degrees how to apply this knowledge to the various departments of our lives most successfully. We think out other applications of the maxim as we need them. In many cases, however, we have to depend on our sighted friends to help us in keeping the familiar workable order."

It is to aid the blind of Belleville to attain the order so necessary to their lives that the city is contributing to the Building campaign for the new centre in Kingston. The proposed Home and Service centre is so designed as to make it possible and easy for the blind residents to achieve the independence, social life and relaxation they need, just as do their sighted friends.

SOIL-SAVING DRIVE

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP)—Agriculturists meeting here recommended that the Portage la Prairie fair board sponsor a "save the soil" campaign in this district. The aim is to encourage farmers to follow proper crop rotation practices and other methods of combatting erosion.

Obituary

MRS. EMILY G. BROCKHURST

Following a brief illness, Mrs. Emily Grace Brockhurst, 36 Hillside Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday. A resident of this city for the past 43 years after arriving from England, Mrs. Brockhurst made many friends with her genial disposition and kindly smile. She was well known in the city and was highly regarded by a wide circle of friends, who will sincerely regret her death.

The late Mrs. Brockhurst was born in Sussex, England, 78 years ago, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gordon. She came to this country 43 years ago, and settled in Belleville, where she has continuously resided. She was a member of Bethel Hall, and surviving are one daughter, Mrs. J. F. (Gwendolyn) Lockhead, of this city; one son, Eric Brockhurst, a member of the Ontario Intelligencer staff; one sister, Miss Catherine Gordon, of Brighton, England; two brothers, Norman Gordon, of Croydon, England; Colin Gordon, Eastbourne, England; three grandchildren, and six great grandchildren.

MRS. HATTIE M. CARNRIKE

The funeral of Mrs. Hattie Morris Carnrike was held from her late residence in Ameliasburg township on Thursday afternoon to Salem United Church. The service was conducted by Rev. W. Kingerley, assisted by Rev. F. Whitely, of Picton, and Rev. T. F. Townsend, of Rednersville. Mr. Kingerley also conducted the service in Salem cemetery.

The bearers were Clifford Smith, George Benway, George Gallop, James Wilson, Harry Herlikey and Morley Baker, all sons-in-law of the deceased.

Chicken House Blaze Causes $1,500 Damage

Tweed (Special) — Damage estimated at $1,500 was caused by fire which twice broke out last night in a large chicken house owned by Wallace Provost.

The blaze, which was caused by a faulty stove, first started about 7.30 p.m., and was noticed by neighbors who raised the alarm. The second fire started about 10 p.m.

Mr. Provost had on order 500 young chickens which are expected to arrive today.

The building is partly covered by insurance.

Europe Has 75 Days to Show Defence Progress

On his swing around Western Europe on a fact-finding mission, U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, left, is seen with French Premier Rene Mayer and Foreign Minister Bidault in Paris during talks on international politics. Dulles has made it clear to the big Western European powers that Congress may balk at putting up more billions of dollars for European aid unless he can report advances in a unified defence project to place troops of six continental nations in one army. April 20th has been established as the deadline, during which time the powers that be in Europe are to show real progress in defence project or risk cuts in American military and economic aid. — Central Press Canadian.

Allan LeBarre, New President Of Lions Club

A seventh service club came into being in Belleville yesterday with the formation of a Lions Club.

Charter president of the new club is Allan LeBarre, who is associated with the Personal Finance Company, secretary, is Bill Bray, with the Dominion Bank. Approximately 20 potential club members turned up for the organizational meeting held in Lattimer's tea room. Members will meet again in two weeks' time to make arrangements for their charter night.

It is not the first time that this city has had a Lions Club as one operated in Belleville many years ago. However, the club ceased to function 31 years ago, and was never revived. Several members of the Lions Club from Trenton were on hand for last night's organization meeting. Other clubs in the immediate district include Frankford and Deseronto.

Formed in 1917 at Dallas, Texas, the Lions have now spread throughout the world. There are 430 clubs in Canada and 10,000 in 42 different countries.

The original service project of the Lions was sight preservation and helping the blind and this is still their main project. However service work has branched out to include boys' and girls' work.

Special representative of Lions International, Mr. Will Houston, of Orillia, was on hand for the organization meeting of the new club.

MARRIES 12-YEAR-OLD

COLUMBUS, Ind. (AP)—A 25-year-old evangelist was arrested Thursday on a charge of encouraging deliquency by marrying a 12-year-old schoolgirl. Released for a court appearance Monday, Spencer Lunsford said: "I'll leave it up to the Lord; whatver He says will be right." The girl, Emma Ferguson, was charged with delinquency. Her mother was charged with encouraging delinquency by permitting the marriage and falsifying the girl's age.

Board Thanks Unknown Person Who Gave Alarm

An unknown person who last Saturday night turned in a fire alarm and by so doing saved the Belleville Collegiate from heavy fire damage came in for a vote of thanks from members of the Bay of Quinte High School Area Board this week.

At a special meeting of the board held to make arrangements to start repairing the fire damage, board members moved a vote of appreciation to the unknown party who was responsible for turning in the fire alarm.

Fire started in a box of shavings and sawdust in the basement, and ate its way up into the woodworking room and on up to the second floor drafting room. A passerby noticed the flames through a window and turned in the alarm.

£8,000 FOR BULL

LONDON (AP) — Argentine cattle king Alfredo Fortabat disclosed Thursday he was the buyer of Perfect Prince, 10-month-old champion bull that brought the top price of £8,000 at the Aberdeen-Angus sales in Perth, Scotland.

Dutch Immigrants Will Help Aid Flood Victims

Trenton (Special) — Trenton people are going to be asked to give aid to Dutch flood victims.

Last night the Church Board of Ebenezer Christian Reformed Church discussed means of collecting money and clothing for Hollanders affected by recent storms and flooding. Most of the 120 immigrant families attending the church established here last year came from The Netherland lowlands and three or four of the families directly from the islands now covered by salty seawater. One Dutchman from inundated Walcheren Island remembered how the same island was flooded in 1945 when the retreating Germans opened the dikes. It seems that Walcheren is level with the sea and when the gales die down the floodwaters will recede and life will again resume as normal. The Dutch people here feel sorry for the parts of Holland lower than sealevel particularly if the dikes fail to hold the battering sea.

Trenton and district people can give as much or little as they wish. Every gift will be deeply appreciated and dispatched to the stricken areas with all possible haste.

Rev. C. Witt minister of the Ebenezer Church, organized the relief work.

Blitz Canvass For the Blind Opens Tonight

Trenton (Special) — Chamber of Commerce manager Ezra Smith, chairman of the campaign to raise funds to build a home and service centre for the blind in Kingston expects to lead nearly 100 collectors in the blitz canvass of the town here Friday night.

Some money has been donated to date but not the amount expected. Trenton's contribution was set at $12,000. The campaign runs through to February 14.

The proposed home and training centre to accommodate the sightless from six counties will be erected on Union Street, West, Kingston.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Uranium stocks took the lead of active speculative issues in forenoon stock market trading today. Other sections of the market showed little change.

Among uranium issues gaining were Acadia Chimo, Nesbitt-Labine with 25 cents, Radiore and Rix Athabaska. New Larder U, interested in Bathurst base metal finds, dropped 16 cents in a turnover of 48,000 shares. Chimo was the heaviest trader, moving 82,000 shares.

Industrials mixed as steels gained and constructions weakened. Agricultures showed some strength in light trading. Most price changes were fractional.

Higher-priced base metals weakened slightly and Cassiar, Quebec Manitou and United Asbestos also slipped. Mindamar added pennies.

Western oils weakened under a list of small losses although Britalta added 25 cents and Bailey Selburn gained. Losers were Banff, Great Plains, North Canadian and Federated.

Senior golds drew little interest but junior producers gained as East Malartic and Cochineur Willans added pennies. Prospects were firm while holding companies mixed.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP)—Cattle prices were 50 cents to $1 lower on steers and 50 cents lower on heifers while cows and bulls were steady this week at the Ontario stockyards. Hogs sold $1 higher than last week's top while lambs gained 50 cents. The holdover at the close was 200 cattle.

Cattle receipts: 6,806. Choice weighty steers $22-23; good steers all weights $21-22; mediums $19-21; good heifers $21-22; choice fed yearlings $23-24.50; medium to good western stockers $20-21.50; good cows $13-14; canners $9-11; good heavy bulls $14.50-16.

Calf receipts: 1,016. Choice veal calves $28-32; mediums $23-27; common downward to $15.

Hog receipts: 4,812. Grade A hogs $25.50; dressed sows $19.

Sheep and lamb receipts: 416. Good lambs $26-26.50; culls $17-24; good light sheep $10-12; culls downward to $6.

DOLLAR RATE

Montreal (CP) — The U.S. dollar was at a discount of 2 19-32 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon, EST today, off 1-16 from noon Thursday.

Butter Shortage Forecast Unless Govt. Releases Some of Stock

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Dairy Council said Thursday night that stores in many Canadian cities will be completely out of butter by next week unless the federal government releases some of its stocks to the trade.

W. K. St. John, the council's executive secretary, said in a statement that a minimum of 8,000,000 pounds of government butter will be required this month "to avoid a butter famine and skyrocketting prices in many areas."

"My understanding," said Mr. St. John, "is that applications have been made for some of this butter and the applications have been turned down."

Mr. St. John noted that Mr. Gardiner had indicated there was plenty of butter in the country.

"Two-thirds of the total stocks are in the hands of the government," he said, "and industry has only a bare minimum required to meet immediate hand-to-mouth needs."

Agriculture Minister Gardiner commented that the government will use its own discretion" as to when it will release 30,000,000 pounds of butter to the trade to keep speculation under control.

Mr. Gardiner was elaborating on a statement he made earlier in the Commons that the government's stock of butter will be available at 62 cents a pound wholesale until May 1 next.

He said:

The government is using its own discretion with regard to when this butter will be released to the trade.

Its endeavor will be to maintain the position announced Dec. 4 to the effect that we will have butter in hand to prevent the kind of speculation which forces up the price of butter to the consumer."

Replying to the St. John statement, Mr. Gardiner said:

Mr. St. John knows as well as I do that the trade has 15,000,000 pounds in storage and that between now and mid-March it will get another 15,000,000 pounds across Canada in positions to be sold anywhere.

They have just as much butter which can be sold within the next month as we will have to take care of our obligation to deliver butter in March and April at 62 cents a pound wholesale."

Indian Guilty On Lesser Charge

VALLEYFIELD, Que. (CP)—A Court of Queens Bench jury Thursday convicted Lawrence Sundae, 34-year-old Indian from nearby St. Regis reservation, on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the knife slaying of Frank Buckshot July 19 last.

The jury included a recommendation for clemency in its verdict. Sundae had originally been charged with murder in the slaying of Buckshot, a neighbor on the reservation.

The slaying took place during an argument. A medico-legal expert testified Buckshot died of a wound caused by a sharp instrument.

The St. Regis reservation includes territory in Ontario near Cornwall, and in the United States as well as in the Quebec section where the slaying took place.

In his address to the jury, Mr. Justice Andre Monpetit said there were three possible verdicts — guilty of murder, guilty of manslaughter or acquittal.

A verdict of murder could be returned only if the jury found Sundae stabbed Buckshot without provocation.

VEEP ON RADIO, TOO

NEW YORK, (AP) — Former vice-president Alben Barkley, who started his own television show a few days ago, also will have a radio program starting Sunday on NBC. The program will have the same name as the TV version "Meet the Veep", and will consist of tape recordings from the video show. It will be broadcast each Sunday at 6:15 p.m. E.S.T. from Washington.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged here today.

The egg market was steady and prices were unchanged. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 43-44; A medium 41-42; A small 39-40; grade B 37; grade C 34. Wholesale to retail: A large 48-49; A medium 46-47; A small 44-45; grade B 42; grade C 39.

Butter solids: first grade 62½; no price established on second, third or western butter.

Brothers Guilty Of Manslaughter In Father's Death

MONTREAL (CP)—Two youthful brothers who shot and killed their father and wounded their mother were convicted Thursday of manslaughter by a jury in the Court of Queen's Bench.

Yvon Bedard, 16, and his 14-year-old brother Robert were originally charged with murder. At the opening of the trial the Crown agreed to the reduced charge. Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure postponed sentence until the end of the court term.

The jury confirmed the guilty plea of the boys and a charge of attempted murder arising from wounding of their mother, Mrs. Marguerite Bedard, was dropped.

John Bumbray, chief crown prosecutor, said the boys left their home at 3 a.m. Oct. 30 last, intending to break into a nearby store. Their mother noticed they had left and waited up for them. When they returned, she saw they carried a revolver. The father came from his bedroom to remonstrate with them for staying out so late and to ask about the revolver.

The younger boy fired five bullets at his father. When the mother ran for help her older son seized the revolver, shot and wounded her.

Mr. Bumbray said there was no doubt in the Crown's mind that murder was committed but we must consider that at 14 and 16 reactions are different from those of mature ages."

'Robbie Burns Night' at Lodge Enjoyable Affair

Although belated, 'Robbie Burns' Night' was fittingly observed by members and many visiting brethren at the Belleville Lodge meeting held at the Masonic Temple on Thursday evening. Worshipful Master of the Lodge, Russell Woodley, sincerely welcomed the guests, while Rev. Duncan McTavish, as special speaker, delivered a splendid talk on the Scottish bard. There were more than 150 present in the banquet hall, while the visitors present represented 25 lodges in the city and district.

Mrs. Alex Williamson of Foster Avenue, prepared the haggis for the banquet and it was ceremoniously carried into the banquet room by Bro. Jack Johnston and piped by Bro. Douglas Burns. Walter Fowler delivered the address to the haggis and then each was supplied with a taste of this dish dear to the Scottish heart. A committee of Bros. Douglas Burns, Walter Fowler and Ralph Plumpton was responsible for the splendid evening and was congratulated by the Master for the fine effort

Burns' grace was given by Rev. H. H. Hillis, after which several selections on the pipes were given by Piper Burns. The speaker was introduced by Very Wor. Bro. Rev. Everett Smith, while Rt. Wor. Bro. Carl Crosby voiced the appreciation of the gathering for the fine address. The toast to the visitors was proposed by Wor. Bro. George Stanley and replies were given by Rev. W. Pace of Madoc and Wor. Bro. Harold Mott, master of Temple Lodge.

Life of Burns

"Everyone knows the tragedy of Burns' life of 37 years, but we remember his virtues and not his vices," said Rev. Duncan McTavish in speaking of the Scottish bard. "It is true that he sank to a low level and some of his poems reflect that mood yet he was the one man who is remembered for his philosopy and his ability to see the finer things of life." The speaker said that Burns was a great lover and a philosopher yet in his humor he took a crack at the wife, who was always hen-pecking her husband. He showed in his poems that the world was full of people who look into the future with fear.

Mr. McTavish stated that Burns had the gift of satire to a large degree and in his poems he showed something of the proverbial Scottish nature by stating that a person cannot give what [illegible] not. He also showed that despite his life of drinking [illegible] lous times, he was not irreligious and that he was reared in a good Christian home. At various times the speaker recited snatches of Burns' poetry to bring out the points of his talk, especially referring to Tam O'Shanter and the Cotter's Saturday Night. The talk was much appreciated by the large gathering.

The junior warden's toast closed a most delightful evening.

Husbands Guests Of Kiwanis Ladies

The regular monthly meeting of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary took place Thursday night at the Kiwanis Centre with husbands of the members as guests. During the supper hour Mrs. Don Punchard led in a lively singsong period. Later there was a brief business session during which final plans for a Valentine bridge and tea were discussed.

Guest soloist was Mrs. Catherina Hendrickse, who delighted her audience with three numbers in English, German, and Italian. She was introduced by Mrs. E. Fairman with Mrs. J. Wood expressing thanks of the club members. The evening was concluded with dancing and cards—prizes going to Mrs. D. Punchard, Mrs. E. Fairman and Mrs. F. Creeggan.

BRITONS

The pro-Labor Daily Herald recalled the experience of a photographer making pictures of the Queen at Buckingham Palace. He asked where her children were. The Queen is reported to have replied in cockney idiom:

"Oh, just mucking about in the nursery."

The Queen's deep concern over distress caused by the present floods and her visits to stricken areas won warm approval. Her support of relief measures was prompt and practical. Loads of fuel from the Queen's Sandringham estate were for some flooded communities the first sign of help coming from outside.

The Queen is generally credited, but without official confirmation, with having struck another blow for the people in the matter of television at her Coronation in Westminster Abbey June 2. At any rate someone of high authority over ruled ecclesiastics and peers who wanted to keep television cameras out of the abbey.

Of the immediate royal family only Queen Mary was in London on the anniversary of the King's death. Her health improved, she drove around London parks Thursday, and hoped weather would permit another outing today.

The Queen Mother, Elizabeth, and Princess Margaret were at the Royal Lodge, Windsor, one of the late King's favorite retreats.

POLICE BLOTTER

City and provincial police have been asked to assist in locating Gladyse Palmer, age 14, of Tweed, who was reported as missing from her home since mid-morning yesterday. The girl was described as being five feet tall, slim, and with dark hair and blue eyes. She was wearing a gray station wagon coat.

A hydro pole on Mary Street was reported broken when a truck accidentally backed into it. William Latchford, R. R. 5, Belleville, was turning his truck around when he failed to see the pole.

New 1953 Nash Canadian Statesman

Sleek continental design by Pinin Farina, renowned European custom body stylist, highlights the 1953 Nash Canadian Statesman shown above. Major mechanical advances are included in the new model, including the new Nash "Powerflyte" engine with a 100-horsepower rating made possible by a new and improved induction system.

The Canadian Statesman is available in a wide range of exterior colors, upholstery and trim selections. All models are equipped with the famous Nash Weather Eye conditioned air and heating system. Extra luggage space is provided as well as front and rear seats 65 inches wide, widest in the automotive industry.

The famous Nash-pioneered "Airflyte" body construction, similar to that of modern trains and planes, provides greater strength and lower body weight, contributing to the exceptional fuel and operating economy of Nash cars.

HIT FUNERAL CAR

LINDSAY (CP)—Bus driver Ken West was fined $25 Thursday for careless driving after he collided with the rear of a funeral procession. The bus caused $900 damage to the last car in the procession and damaged two other cars.

ANOTHER CASE OF HYSTERIA

Before the flood disaster crowded the headlines this week, news from Britain gave prominence to the hanging of a 19-year-old youth which had caused a public uproar of protest to the point of last hour attempts in the House of Commons to save his life.

The youth, Derek Bentley, had been found guilty of murder of a policeman. Yet Bentley had not fired the gun that killed the policeman. Christopher Craig did that and Christopher Craig is still alive—because he is only sixteen. Bentley, in fact, was under arrest when the shot was fired. This rather strange circumstance, along with sentiment stirred by opponents to capital punishment in Britain, produced the unusual demonstration of protest at the scene of the hanging—an affair which the press services gave full coverage for this side of the Atlantic.

That the incident aroused comment and sympathy in some quarters here was not surprising for it was only some weeks earlier that a parallel case here involving the gangsters, Jackson and Suchan, had been the subject of a sob-sister's field day. In reporting the mob scenes and maudlin drama of the British case the dispatches from London ten days ago dwelt on the spectacle of the "innocent boy" being "murdered" on the gallows as demonstrators chanted the twenty-third Psalm and sang Abide With Me. They neglected to recall the circumstances which led to the murder.

Now that these circumstances have been recalled by correspondents reviewing the incident later, we have another case where uninformed comment and ill-considered sympathy obscured the facts upon which both youths were found guilty but Craig, being under the age of 18, could not be hanged. The law, applying in this case as it did in that of Jackson and Suchan, holds that any accomplices in a crime which results in murder are equally guilty with the murderer.

Evidence at the trial brought out a clear case for the prosecution. The story is told in the following excerpts from the London Daily Mirror:

"Of the Croydon fight in which Miles was shot, after he and other policemen climbed to catch 'two men on a store roof,' Mr. Humphreys said:

"The leader of the attack on the men was Detective Sergeant Fairfax.

"He saw the two accused near the stack on the roof. He went straight up to them—within six feet—and said: "I am a police officer. Come out from behind that stack."

"The answer was in Craig's voice: 'If you want us—come and get us.'

"The officer charged in and grabbed Bentley, and, with Bentley in custody, turned and pursued Craig. Bently got away and shouted, 'Let him have it, Chris.'

"The immediate reply to that command by Bentley was a loud report, and Fairfax was hit in the shoulder with a bullet from the gun which Craig held.

"That cry of Bentley to shoot was, in the submission of the prosecution, a deliberate incitement to Craig to murder Fairfax. That incitement covered the shooting thereafter, even though at the time the shot that killed Miles was fired Bentley was under arrest."

As the prosecution summed up the evidence at the trial, it was further reported in the London newspaper:

"Bentley incited Craig to begin the shooting. Though he was technically under arrest, he was mentally supporting Craig in all that Craig continued to do.

"In English law—and you may think it common sense—he was in every sense a party to that murder."

So Bentley, who had not fired the shot, was sentenced to death. Craig, whose trigger finger actually sent the bullet into the policeman, was sentenced to be detained at the Queen's pleasure. Some day, perhaps 15 or 20 years hence, he will be free again. There was no evidence presented to show that either youth had any regrets at the policeman's death.

What an entirely different light is thrown on the hanging when the evidence has not been distorted by emotional hysteria and contrived sympathy.

THEY AWAIT FURTHER ORDERS

Thirteen Communist leaders in the United States have been sentenced to jail in New York for varying terms after they declined to accept the proposal of the presiding judge that they be sent to Russia or other countries behind the Iron Curtain as an alternative to prison in the U.S.

The choice made by the convicted Reds is regarded in some quarters as an indication that the Communists we know in the U.S. and Canada are too smart to want any part of life in Uncle Joe's own backyard. The novel proposal of the New York judge is even hailed as a nice stroke of propaganda for our side.

This is a naive view to take of the preference shown by the American Communists. To be sure the last thing that they might have looked for was any such choice being extended to them but had it been known beforehand that this was a possibility it is quite conceivable that all them would have accepted the offer. To believe anything else is to entirely misunderstand the Communist mind or Communist discipline. Whether in custody, or at large, enjoying their freedom as citizens, Communists of the select type involved in this case, are always under orders of the Party. If any such situation as this could have been contemplated, the orders might have been different.

Chosen leaders of the Communist party, whether they are here, or in the United States, or behind the Iron Curtain, do not act on their own volition under any circumstances. Their private or personal preferences in any matter whatsoever where the Party is concerned—and the Party is the first consideration at all times — are of not the slightest importance.

Before the thirteen finally tried and convicted were caught in the anti-Red dragnet thrown out nearly three years ago, a number of more important key leaders had escaped the round-up. Is it suggested that they are not now serving the Communist cause elsewhere, and if need be, behind the Iron Curtain?

It is not for the privilege of remaining to enjoy again upon a release from prison the American way of life that these Reds declined to go abroad. They remain to serve their sentences and to be ready to resume the work of the party upon the orders which will await their return to freedom and to further usefulness in the Communist cause wherever they may be needed.

BEWARE OF SECULARISM

Do you have a church home? There are many homeless people in the world—that is homeless as regards the Church. When someone in the family dies or a daughter is to be married, there is a great scurrying around to find a minister to perform the necessary services. Sunday is sleep day, fun day, any old kind of a day except holy day.

Some time ago I encountered the following, and I pass it on to anyone who might profit from its reading:

"The greatest path in the world is the path from your door to the door of your Church. If all of us faithfully used this path and were guided by its radiant influence, the nation would be safe and all hearts have peace. For this path was made by the Son of Man for the sons of man, that walking humbly into His Holy Presence, in the Church, they might afterwards walk together as brethren in the world. Are you using the greatest path?"

We happen to be living at a time when it is perfectly evident that most of our pressing problems are moral and spiritual in their nature. If there was ever a generation which could not get along without the gracious ministry of the Church, it is this generation. Don't be fooled by the glamor of secularism. It is false and hopeless.

BASERUNNER COMFORT

One winter joy of long ago
That now no more remains,
Was seeing beds of coal aglow
Through mica window panes.
At evening, coming from the street,
My father used to say:
"'Tis good to toast your shins and feet,
After a busy day.

"What more could any man desire
Returning from the town
Than this, a chair before the fire
In which to settle down;
Upon a rail his feet to place—
The heels, the toes, the soles,
And watch the flames leap up and race
Above a bed of coals?"

The stove has long been put away,
From view the fire is hid,
Not many toast their shins today
As once my father did.
But since for all that men create
There is a certain cost,
I'm sure when stoves went out of date
A pleasant thing was lost.

Letter to the Editor

Big "IF" in Farm Supplies

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I was impressed plenty by those 30 points in your news columns ("Business and Financial Outlook for 1953" by Roger W. Babson) and have always admired the above expert's ability to deliver thoughts on economic and technical and political problems of the first order in language which the layman can get.

This farm reader, therefore, was particularly struck by the following brace of the above "points": "20. Do not forget that there is always a big IF in the supply situation with regard to farm products. Severe drought could cause havoc. One is already long overdue. Scan closely weather reports from the nation's bread basket, and as farm gross income will strengthen along seasonal lines during the first four or five months of 1953. If we then avoid drought, I look for a lower farm income in the second half of the year." (Dec. 31 issue.)

Just ten days later, therefore, I was the more interested in the following paragraph in the course of a market story from Chicago: "The winter drought continues in the southwest with no immediate prospects of relief and in some sections the crop of winter wheat is now in the dormant stage. Precipitation in the northwest and western Canada was extremely light and of little importance." (N.Y. Times, Jan. 9.)

Fortunately if I remember correctly, there are generous stores of the breadgrain in both U.S. and Canadian bins, but the fact remains, as indicated by your columnist, "there is always a big if in the supply situation with regard to farm products." Certainly it seems desirable to recall the fact that, if the U.S. department of agriculture's December winter wheat estimate—indicating a [illegible] per cent shrinkage from the 1952 outturn—materializes in the nation's bread basket, the weatherman may already have cut deeply into tomorrow's "in store" wheat reserves.

Judge Could Be Wrong

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

A British divorce court judge who has separated about 1,500 couples in the course of his career, addressed a men's social gathering the other day, and out of his experience he named four kinds of women a man should not marry. He named and described the catty, the gabby, the fun-mad type and the stupid type.

Maybe the judge [illegible], but woman is unpredictable, and it sometimes turns out after marriage that the catty woman becomes saintly, the gabby woman likes her man, the fun-mad woman becomes a stay-at-home, and the stupid one develops an unexpected amount of commonsense in running a home and knowing how to hold her man.

Their dogs drinks too, he added. Schultz felt that he was a good husband, however, because, "when my wife gets drunk I hold her head, but when I get drunk she calls the police."

The magistrate [illegible] Schultz's fine on condition he and his wife separate. [illegible] settled, but now who buys for the dog?

(Toronto Star)

Jealous Of Visitors

(London Times)

There is something eternally exciting about doing a perfectly dull, ordinary thing in an extraordinary place. Thus to eat a hard-boiled egg with salt in a screw of newspaper presents few attractions in the dining room, but in a railway carriage it is an exquisite pleasure.

When the small David Copperfield first saw Mrs. Peggotty's house made of a superannuated boat he thought it as romantic as Aladdin's palace for the sufficient reason that it had never been designed to be lived in. If it had been it might have been small and inconvenient, but as it was it was perfect.

So many people having a little of that small boy still left in them must feel a pang of envy at the thought of the visitors to the coronation who are to be housed in "floating hotels." They have long been resigned to stay at home themselves and enjoy the milder celebrations of their own villages; they would not say thank you to be installed in all the gorgeousness of the Grand Babylon Hotel; but the thought of these liners diverted from their normal purpose of ploughing the seas to be moored snugly in the river is truly fascinating.

There may well be this disadvantage, that they are too comfortable and do not allow sufficient scope for glorious improvisation; but in spite of this possible lack of hardihood, they [illegible] the spirit of picnic which is the spirit of the hard-boiled egg in the railway carriage.

To dwell thus in a ship, [illegible] to sleep to the sound of lapping waters may have been for many an early ambition, long since stifled and now brought suddenly to life again.

Some of them were probably brought up on that enchanting American book, Rudder Grange. The details may have grown a little dim; Pomona and the boarder, Pomona and the Tree Man and the dog Lord Edward, may now be veiled in a rosy and golden haze, but the mere name, so perfectly combining the land and the water, has still a lovely sound.

What a heavenly book it was! And now there are apparently to be whole new races of Rudder Grangers. It is hard not to be a little jealous.

Cats Alert To Danger

(Windsor Star)

Are civil defence authorities in Canada missing a cue? [illegible] advised householders each to have a cat.

Judging by experiences related by letter-writers to English newspapers, a pussy can detect the advance of a plane in advance of humans. One relates that near the end of the Second World War, his tabby became so alert as to know the difference between a "flying bomb" and a normal plane. On the approach of the former, the cat would scurry under a sofa or chair until the missile had exploded or gone by, but wouldn't worry about an ordinary aircraft.

Another, relating of the First World War, said the feline mascot of his unit would streak for shelter some seconds in advance of anyone's hearing the whine of a shell.

Are cats possessed of some sixth sense about bombs? Or is there some scientific explanation? One writer suggests sounds may travel faster through the ground than through the air, and that the smart cat can pick up the vibration from the ground. But, not being a scientist, he wouldn't be arbitrary about this theory.

If cats are so smart, it might be well to keep one in the house in event of bombing attacks.

He Knows The Words

(Windsor Star)

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill is a man of manifold and varied talents. Statesman and soldier, author and lecturer, artist and bricklayer, and eminent in all. And, as owner of a racing stable, he is a good judge of horseflesh. Now he is to demonstrate his talents in yet another field, that of music.

For 40 years he has had an ambition. That is, to write new words for the regimental march of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars, with which he served and of which he is colonel. Evidently the words have been roaming around in his spacious mind for decades, and now he has promised to commit them to paper.

Well, he knows plenty of martial words to use for martial music and one can expect they will be words which will live.

Personal Health Talks

[illegible]

OXYGENATION

When you think of heart disease, heart failure, weak heart, myocarditis, coronary thrombosis if you must think of it, think of lack of oxygen, insufficient oxygen delivered to the functioning cells. This is sometimes called anoxia or cellular asphyxia.

Every cell in the body must receive an uninterrupted supply of oxygen in order to live, function and reproduce. If the oxygen supply is shut off for seconds, the cell dies.

A victim of submersion or gassing may be resuscitated if rescued and properly treated within minutes—two, three, four, possibly even five minutes after cessation of breathing. The capacity of the victim to recover would depend mainly on the oxygen reserve in lungs, blood, tissues and cells at the moment breathing ceased. Divers who first accumulate a supply of oxygen by a series of slow, deep belly inflations, can stay under water perhaps twice as long as they can without such preparation. On the other hand, a person who dives into the water after having run some distance in the race can stay under water perhaps only half as long as he or she can in ordinary circumstances.

So far as heart trouble of any kind concerns life and growth and physical activity and happiness, remember this one main fact, that the ruling factor is the supply of oxygen to the body cells, or as physiologists say, internal respiration.

The air we breathe is composed chiefly of nitrogen and oxygen. The precise chemical composition of the atmosphere is as follows:

Nitrogen .... 20.96 per cent
Oxygen .... 78.09 per cent
Carbon Dioxide .... 0.03 per cent
Argon .... 0.94 per cent

Besides these measurable gases chemists have found traces of other gases present, such as helium, hydrogen, ozone, neon.

Composition of expired air is as follows:

Nitrogen .... 79 per cent
Oxygen .... 17 per cent
Carbon dioxide ...... 4 per cent

Proportion of oxygen in the air may drop to 15 per cent or rise to 50% (by artificial means) without any apparent effect on health or vital functions. But a candle goes out if the oxygen drops below 15 per cent. In submarines 16 per cent is the signal to replenish oxygen from tanks.

Just as oxygen delivery is the essential factor to consider in appraising heart trouble, so in any kind of anemia the thing to remember is that the chief function of hemoglobin (the coloring matter of red blood corpuscles) is to carry oxygen from lungs to cell and tissue in every part of the body and pick up a load of carbon dioxide to carry back to the lungs to be blown off into the outside atmosphere.

Now if there is anything at all vague or confusing in what I have said here, particularly to the novice, don't fret about it. At worst it can't be so baffling as the mystery which the physiologists and chemists cannot solve—that is, how the hemoglobin can latch onto oxygen at the lungs and let go of it to pick up carbon dioxide for the return trip. Don't think about it! One might as well try to define perpetual motion.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

NEWSPAPER FEATURES

I have devoted two-thirds of my lifetime to the distribution of features to newspapers. I have always aimed to make them of educational and inspirational value. They are not the most essential things to give readers, but they perform a great service to the readers of a newspaper in keeping it in the home. I have always tried to make my contributions clean, wholesome, and uplifting. I have taken pride in my selections.

Many features are household names in millions of homes. Brief features, like those of Will Rogers, Walt Mason, Kin Hubbard's "Abe Martin", and others, were read and enjoyed by millions of readers, and they were missed when they no longer appeared, because of death. Scores of other features still live and are eagerly looked for each day.

Often a feature is cancelled for some reason. Some because they no longer have an appeal, and others are discontinued to save money that the editor feels necessary. Often the editor himself gets tired of seeing it day after day, which reminds me of a statement made by the late William Randolph Hearst—perhaps the greatest of all experts on newspaper features. He said: "My opinion is that when editors begin to get tired of a feature the public is just beginning to like it."

Feature writers wield great influence, often more than an editor realizes. When a worthy one is omitted, it is missed—often by more people than the editor hears about. Readers miss it as they would a friend. But what the writer, or artist, misses most is his contact with those who inspire him to keep doing his work so as to give increased zest to himself for improvement.

Outside a newspaper's function to give the news is its opportunity to educate and inform its readers and to keep them as partners in the enterprise of a useful institution. It may well be said that the daily newspaper is the poor man's college of learning. Certainly there are millions who look upon it as an organ of great worth, probably never to be replaced by any other agency. It can well be termed the Bible of the masses.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Drowsing is a much more pleasurable exercise than sleeping. In sleep we are unconscious. But drowsing allows us all the relaxed pleasure of sleep with enough consciousness, or intermittent consciousness, to permit us to enjoy the sensation of it.

Drowsing requires a certain amount of disturbance. Church is a good place to drowse, or riding on a train. The whole thing is spoiled if you fall asleep. That is why it is more difficult to drowse in winter than in summer. Drowsing in a deck chair in spring or summer, there are the sounds of street traffic, the bark of dogs, the disturbance of children to keep you hovering nicely. In winter, about the only thing we can depend on is the radio.

One of my friends who is practically a professional drowser is quite a connoisseur of radio programs suitable to drowsing. And he says the opera on Saturday afternoons from the Metropolitan in New York are simply ideal for the purpose. In fact, he hurries home on Saturday noons in good time to get the radio carried up to his bedroom, to get his shoes off and a quilt over him precisely as the curtain goes up on Act One of the opera.

He has of course no interest whatever in opera as such. But he finds that, with the radio tuned down to just the right volume, the combination of orchestra and singers can be reduced to a pleasant mutter and mumble. The important thing is that the arias arrive at exactly the right interval, nicely spaced to every few minutes, so that either a soprano screeches or a tenor lets go a wild bugle note which serves to rouse the drowser at the very instant he was about to spoil everything by falling asleep. He has no choice among the operas. Wagner is just as good as Verdi.

The intermissions come pleasantly with the learned blather of the commentator or the quiz program, enough to wake the drowser to the point of going for a drink of water, or a glance out the window. But then the curtain rises on the next act, and our drowser hurries to get snuggled under the quilt again, all cuddled down for another forty minutes of beautiful hovering on the downy edge of slumber.

Criticisms Not Condemnation Of Whole Army But Aimed At Works Services Says Currie

OTTAWA (CP)—George S. Currie said Thursday the controversial criticisms in his report were not a condemnation of the whole army but concerned only the army works services and those responsible for supervising it.

The Montreal accountant's testimony before the Commons defence expenditures committee ended abruptly 25 minutes before the scheduled finish of his second appearance.

The Progressive Conservatives held to their policy of silence and other members ran out of questions so he was excused but told he might be recalled.

Later, Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC (PC—Nanaimo) issued a statement saying that "Mr. Currie has confirmed his report in every detail" and that two days of questioning by Liberal members had left it unchanged.

Asked No Questions

He said the Conservatives asked no questions "because we accepted his findings and took the position there was no reason for him to be called before the committee."

Committee Chairman David Croll (L—Toronto Spadina) himself got these replies from the author:

1. Mr. Currie himself was solely responsible for taking out a phrase which brought officials "at or near the top" under a criticism of indifference to administration and a war-type attitude of putting speed ahead of cost. He decided it would be better to refer to officials "higher-up" because this "more clearly expressed my opinion." He had no specific individuals in mind.

2. His finding of "a general breakdown" in administration, supervision and accounting applied only to the works services—the one branch he was asked to investigate—"and to other personnel in the department of national defence" charged with responsibility for supervising that branch.

3. Virtually every recommendation and proposal he made in his report was discussed earlier with defence headquarters during the seven-months inquiry and many were implemented.

$10,000 Worth Relief Supplies Now on Way

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A national committee is co-ordinating Canadian efforts to help the victims of European floods.

It has already started its task. It sent $10,000 worth of relief supplies late Thursday to stricken coastal areas of Holland which, with parts of England and Belgium bore the brunt of this week's flooding.

Prime Minister St. Laurent asked the Canadian Red Cross Society to help in establishing a relief committee and the Red Cross accepted. The prime minister proposed that the Red Cross buy and distribute the relief supplies with funds donated by the public.

Dr. W. S. Stanbury, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, said later in Toronto that Canadians can help best by gifts of money, rather than donations of clothing or other relief supplies.

Meanwhile communities across Canada set up their own committees to raise funds. They include Hamilton, Windsor, Sherbrooke, Cobourg, the Holland Marsh area near Toronto where many of the district farmers are of Dutch origin, Ottawa and Toronto.

The United Church of Canada, the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire and the Salvation Army are among organizations which have made large donations of money.

The Church of England in Canada has launched an emergency appeal for $10,000.

BOXER INDICTED

SAN FRANCISCO. (AP) — A federal grand jury Thursday indicted former lightweight boxer Jesse Flores, 26, and his wife, Carmen, 25, on eight counts of sale and possession of heroin. The couple was arrested Monday night by narcotics agents who said they had bought heroin from the former boxer on five occasions.

MELROSE

Melrose—Mr. and Mrs. Newton Demille had recently as supper guests Mr. and Mrs. John McLean, Mr. and Mrs. John Cross, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skelly and David, and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cross and Sara Jane.

The Melrose W.I. met at the Lazier home for their January meeting. The district president, Mrs. Roscoe Robson was a guest at this meeting.

The Y.P.U. held its meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Reilly.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Masters Donald and his chum and Karin, were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Macfarlane. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hall and children of Campbellford, were also guests of Mr. and Mrs. Macfarlane.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLaren entertained the Fun-Dun euchre club on Tuesday evening.

Many in the community are suffering from the prevailing flu. School was closed Monday and Tuesday due to the teacher's illness.

Mrs. Ray Chumbley is convalescing at her home following her recent illness in Belleville hospital.

Miss Bessie Beatty is spending this week with her aunt, Mrs. Alex McLaren.

Mr. and Mrs. Willett Casey and Blaine spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Grant McLaren.

BOUNCED OUT WINDOW

NEW ORLEANS. (AP) — A four-year-old boy, bouncing up and down on a soft in his third-floor home, bounced right out of an open window. Police said Carners Harris landed in the yard 45 feet below Thursday and escaped with three fractured ribs and numerous abrasions. He landed in sand, which apparently saved him from serious injury.

Enjoy Ice Follies

About 20 young business women of Zeller's, Kresge's and Eaton's staff, travelled by bus to Toronto, Wednesday afternoon, to attend the "Ice Follies", the Shipstad and Johnson production now drawing capacity crowds to Maple Leaf Gardens.

The group reached Toronto about five o'clock. After the show, which they all described as "wonderful", paying particular attention to the costumes, midnight refreshments were enjoyed before leaving for home.

Charter Night

Charter night of the Campbellford Business and Professional Women's Club was held last evening. Mrs. Marjery Pewtress, of Cobourg, provincial president, was guest speaker. Belleville members who attended were Miss Norma Arkles, Mrs. Simone McFadden, Mrs. Dorothy Brown and Mrs. Irene Raney.

Weddings

WICKETT—WARD

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday, January 31, at three p.m., in the Alliance Tabernacle, when the Rev. Eric Strain united in marriage Jeannette Mae Ward, daughter of Mr. Charles Ward, of Toronto, and the late Mrs. Ward, to George Jay Wickett, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Wickett, of Belleville.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Ambrose Kirkpatrick, who also played "Because", before the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her uncle Mr. Bernard Freeborn, of Bloomfield, the bride looked lovely in a gown of ivory brocaded satin, featuring a molded bodice with net yoke, full skirt, long tight sleeves ending in points at the wrist. A Juliet cap of matching lace and tiny clusters of flowers held her fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of red roses and lily-of-the-valley tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. Ernie Ward, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor, attractively gowned in pale blue crepe, and carrying a bouquet of red roses.

Mr. Ernie Ward, brother of the bride, was groomsman, while Mr. Harry Freeborn and Mr. Harold Lemoire, cousins of the bride, were ushers.

The reception was held at Allisonville Orange Hall, the bride's aunt, Mrs. Bernard Freeborn, receiving the guests, attired in coral and black taffeta with corsage of white roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing grey crepe and corsage of Talisman roses.

About 75 guests partook of a dainty buffet luncheon, the bride's table being centred with a three-tier wedding cake, flanked by candles.

Mr. Bernard Freeborn proposed the toast to the bride, to which the bridegroom made a fitting reply.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was a gold compact; to his groomsman, a cigaret lighter, and to the ushers, leather billfolds. The bride's gifts to her bridesmaid and pianist, were china cups and saucers.

Amid showers of good wishes and confetti, the happy couple left for a short honeymoon to Napanee and Sillsville, the bride travelling in grey suit with navy accessories and corsage of red roses.

The guests attending were from Milford, Napanee, Consecon, Bloomfield, Trenton, Sillsville and Foxboro.

The young couple will reside in Belleville.

Prince of Wales H-S Association Sponsors Valentine Tea, Euchre

The senior class room of the Prince of Wales School was the scene of a most delightful Valentine tea on Wednesday, in the afternoon and a highly successful euchre during the evening to aid in providing playground equipment which is much needed in the school grounds. Mrs. A. Dickens, president of the Association, received the tea patrons at the door.

Charming Creation

The tea table itself was a charming creation in silver, white and red. The centrepiece was a lovely silver vase of white narcissi and fern flanked by tall red candles in silver holders on dainty pansy place mats with the gleam of the lovely silver tea services. Altogether this presented a masterpiece of decoration.

The smaller tea tables for the patrons were gay and charming in dainty cloths and Valentine greeting centrepieces. The room itself presented a scene of gayety with its decorations of cupids and hearts and red and white tapers in keeping with the season.

The tea room was in charge of Mrs. H. Clarke, and those pouring tea for the first hour were. Mrs. E. Bedford and Mrs. D. Cowles; for the second hour, Mrs. Kay Clarke and Mrs. Leona Bailey.

Those serving in the tea room were, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Revoy, Mrs. Sproule, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Burns, Mrs. Luttrell and Mrs. G. Oliver. Replenishing the trays were Mrs. Ruby Vandervoort, Mrs. Mabel Keene. Mrs. A. Gray was in charge of the delicious tea and kitchen arrangements.

The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. Doris Price. The convener of the home baking sale was Mrs. Doris Dickens and those assisting, Mrs. Clapp, Mrs. Dodd, Mrs. Reddick and Mrs. Walker.

Bountiful Supply

There was a bountiful supply of baked products on display as well as pickles and relishes and preserves of many descriptions, the cakes were of many sizes and noted was a large one in lovely Valentine decorations and a handsome chocolate creation which should please some husband who would be lucky indeed. There were also golden buns like the same kind mother used to make for they certainly were much the same, the dainty cup cakes and many, many varieties of cookies should fill up many cookie jars to capacity, lemon pies quickly disappeared in the eager buyer's hands.

As usual the candy sales were under the convenership of Mrs. Douglas Watson, who with her industrious and capable assistants, Mrs. P. Murry and Mrs. T. Flunder, presented two tables of varied and toothsome sweets. The tables were decorated with tiny cupids, hearts and lace, presenting a picture much like an old-fashioned Valentine with its rows of tiny Valentine cups filled with sweets that quickly sold to the small "fry" present. On display were all sorts of chocolates, mallows, jellies, butterscotch and bonbons of every type. As usual this was a very popular corner and these tables were a sellout and a complete success.

Euchre Prize Winners

During the evening the euchre was held and all tables were well filled for the event. The prizes were large boxes of groceries. At the close of the evening refreshments were served.

The prize winners were the following: ladies, M. Jenkinson, Mrs. Crossen, Mrs. Briscoe; lone hand, Mr. McGee; men's, Stan Harris, Mr. McWilliams, Mrs. Corlies; consolation, Mrs. Bedford, R. Kennedy. Door prize, Mr. Andrew Gray.

Mrs. Douglas Watson was press reporter and convener for the tea with the assistance of Mrs. Vandervoort for the evening.

This was a highly successful event for the Home and School Association and much was raised to help with playground fund for equipment.

Many thanks are due all those who helped in any way with the success of the tea and euchre.

Letters from Mexico

By Arnold Meyers

Hotel Canada, Room 31,
Avenida Cinco de Mayo,
December 10, 1952

Dear Mother and Dad:

I have another little, or rather big calamity, to report. I had eight Christmas presents all bought today and was on my way to Sanborn's to eat. Had just set down my main parcel to ask a man how to get there. Having a map in my hand, I turned back in a few seconds and no parcel! Stolen — every present but two. I hope somebody has a nice Christmas.

Christmas Gifts Stolen

I could have sat down and wept. It was just all I needed after a long day of looking at things. The total cost of the stolen articles was 185 pesos, or about $21 in Canadian money. I am going to ask you—though I hate to do this—to replace this money. It simply must be replaced. Could you go to my banker and show him this letter and have him make out a traveller's cheque for $21. Have him take it out of my account. You will probably be able to replace it through the sale of a painting some time before I return.

It's all a crying shame. What a city of thieves One must always keep everything right in his hand. However, don't worry about this as I am not exactly a pauper, but it burns one up to be done out of anything.

The presents will be replaced and they will be received in about two weeks and I think that you will like them very much.

Mejico Chicito.

How this all came about was: I came out of Sanborn's after breakfast and a man came up to me asking if I were seeking information. I replied that I wished to do some shopping for Christmas presents. He suggested that I go to the old city, the ancient part of Mexico City, where they make all their produce by hand, as silver work, copper and brass, leather goods, onyx and pottery.

He showed me his badge, proving that he was on the up-and-up, and offered to drive me there for ten pesos. I thought it a very good idea. He even called back at my hotel so that I could get my camera. It was he who suggested that I take a camera. So off we went to "Mejico Chicito."

Beautiful Handicraft

There is a terrific contrast between the two districts. In Mejico Chicito the people are kind, trustworthy and honest; in the city proper, the opposite is the case. I saw today the most beautiful produce from the skilled craftsmen of these 'factories.' They are not factories in our sense of the word, but simply groups of artisans working together, each man having his part of the operation to perform, but with practically no machinery.

He showed me a man fitting together these tiny silver links to make a chain. What a job! Here, another man was cutting out a design in a sheet of silvery, by hand — amazing. In another place two men were carving onyx. The one was preparing onyx for carving by paring it down, while the other polished it.

One Pesos Per Day

I took pictures of both operations. My guide said, "These poor fellows work hard — do you know how much they get in one day? About a pesos, 11½ cents. I suggest that you give them 40 centavos each for photographing them." This I did, gladly. They both smiled happily. How much is 40 centavos? 46 cents.

In another place there was a display of hand-painted dishes: platters, curios of all kinds, every one of them excellent and worth a really considerable sum in our country. I photographed some of these in color. One fellow followed us around most persistently trying to sell me two leather jackets for boys, aged 9 and 11 years, for 80 pesos; but I ignored him. My shopping was done and what on earth would I do with the things?

Gets a Bargain

After a little while, up he came again: "Senor I give you for 60 pesos." Again I had to say no; darn it, I simply did not want them at any price. We went on for a few minutes, crossed the street when, lo and behold, if he didn't come up again with "Senor," he said in a pleading voice, "I give you for 40 pesos."

"You have a real bargain there," my friend," remarked my guide, casually. So quite desperate, I bought the two little jackets for 40 pesos. Then, fortunately, we went back to my hotel.

Mexico City is a wonderful city as far as beautiful things are concerned, but I can't say as much for some of its people.

As a sidelight, I saw this afternoon a ragged woman cuddling a practically newborn infant beneath her serape. She was standing beside Sanborn's begging for money. I gave her a pesos.

This gives you a preview of some of the things that go on in this metropolis.

Your Christmas gifts will be on their way tomorrow, December 12. Let me know the date you receive these letters and gifts.

ARNOLD.

B.C.I. Night School Art Class Exhibits Attractive Studies

The old adage, "Where there's a will, there's a way," has been most attractively demonstrated these past weeks at the McCarthy theatre in the art exhibit by students of the night school of B.C.I. under the direction of Mrs. H. Robbins.

Among the many pictures shown there were those of still life, autumn scenes, winter scenes and seascapes, all delightfully crisp, depicting appreciation of form, color and composition.

The still life exhibits were mostly of jugs, fruit, and geometrical flowers as Japanese lanterns. One which attracted the attention of the beholder was an exquisitely shaped jug with delicately formed handles, trailing bittersweet blooms and true-toned orange. Another with a more substantial jug in darker color was highlighted by a spray of Japanese lantern.

Nice Form, Color

Two scenes of woodlands in autumn, both of the same subject, showing a study of trunks backgrounded by quiet water, and interspersed with bits of brilliant scarlet leaves, were most attractive in the appreciation of the subject in drawing and in color.

Two seascapes of the same subject, depicting rocks and trees with rolling waves in the distance were pleasingly colorful as well as the snow scenes, one in monochrome handling, depicted evergreens and undulating banks of snow. Most attractive making a pleasing house picture on sultry days in August.

Another picture, which was designated 'copy' also held the interest, both in its execution, which was monochrome, and in the tension felt as the farmer hurriedly carried his forkful of grain to the waiting wagon, while the threatening storm clouds rolled above. A suitable title would be "Racing the Storm".

"Long Vistas" might be another title for a pleasing bit of work, rich in the shaded greens which bordered the curving road beside still waters with the distant hills. This was soft, restful and nicely drawn.

Others included willows in early winter, lively and colorful; the "Church in Winter", with its snowy road, and line of snow-laden evergreens, showed appreciation of the subject, while the "Study in Green" with its thatched cottage, the pond reflecting the rushes, the water-lilies and the snow-white duck showed a love of nature. With application, the creator of this will find many happy hours in store.

In the alcove there were those of still life done in oils, by more advanced artists; a water color of house and trees in tones of sepia and green; village store with its Robin Hood display on the side; a country church; the city hall, and a newcomer, which might be listed as "The Haunted House", with its look of desolation and broken-down fence.

A fine collection of prints, in color, of famous old world artists and some early American artists, were on display also. These included Corot's "Environs of Beauvais"; Czanne's "Man With the Straw Hat"; Gauguin's "Tahihans With Mangoes" (French); Jack Lenine's (American) "String Quartet"; Monet's "La Grenocellere"; "Mademoiselle Sicot" by Pierre Auguste Renoir (French); "The Angel", by Lucas Van Lyden (Dutch), and many others of the French school of artists.

An exceptionally nice exhibit with especial appreciation going to Mrs. H. Robbins for the outstanding work of her night school classes.

Mrs. George Ward Celebrates Her 80th Birthday

Mrs. George Ward, of Picton, was guest of honor, recently, when her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren gathered to celebrate her 80th birthday.

Seated at a long table, which was centred with a bouquet of pink and yellow snapdragons, the guests enjoyed a turkey dinner at Maple Inn, Bloomfield. The climax of the meal was a birthday cake with lighted candles.

Afterwards the family gathered at Mrs. Ward's home where she was presented with gifts from each member of the family.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ward, Jack, June, Rosemary and Patricia, of Picton; Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Ward and Gary, Mr. and Mrs. George Ward and Susan; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hayman, John and Gayle; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Coleman and Bob, all of Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Coleman, of Oshawa.

St. Andrew's Choir Honors Bride-to-Be With Lovely Gifts

Last night, following choir practice, a miscellaneous shower was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church ladies' parlor, in honor of Miss Jean Hiddleston, bride of this month.

A brief address was given by the pastor, the Rev. J. G. Hornsby, who, on behalf of the choir, presented her with a lovely pink wool blanket, for which Jean expressed her appreciation, as well, as for the many separate gifts from her choir associates.

The table was prettily appointed with a lace cloth centred by an attractive arrangement of yellow and white 'mums.

Refreshments were served by choir members and a happy time enjoyed.

ALTAR DEFACED

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—So many tourists have scribbled their names and addresses in ink upon the centuries-old mahogany altar in the UN prayer and meditation room that repairs became necessary. UN workmen have sanded the block, an ancient piece of wood from the Belgian Congo intended to represent the beginning of mankind, and have given it a protective coating. Its top will be covered with glass.

FOUNDATION PRESIDENT

DETROIT (AP)—Henry Ford II announced Thursday the appointment of H. Rowan Gaither Jr., San Francisco lawyer, as president of Ford Foundation. Ford said Gaither, an associate-director of the foundation, has agreed to serve as president until a successor to Paul G. Hoffman is elected. Hoffman resigned to return to Studebaker Corporation as chairman of its board of directors.

Centenary-Aikens H-S Association Holds Euchre Party

Centenary-Aikens' Home and School recently sponsored a successful euchre party in Centenary School.

Guests were present from Bellcrest Home and School, and the 4th Line Community Club.

Winners at cards were, ladies' 1st, Mrs. Ken Jones; lone hand, Mrs. Gordon Wood; consolation, Mrs. L. Sharp; men, Mr. Walters, who also won the lone hand prize; consolation, E. Wells.

The conveners for the evening, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bain, Mr. and Mrs. C. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. W. Spafford served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

OTTAWA (CP)—A jury at general sessions of the peace Thursday convicted R. Albert Lake, 44, of Ottawa of defrauding a 77-year-old Richmond, Ont., farmer, William Green, of $2,500. He will be sentenced Monday. Lake was convicted of obtaining the money through "deceitful means" while the elderly farmer was under the influence of liquor last Sept. 18.

Women's Activities

BRIDGE STREET JUBILEE E.A.

The February meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary of Bridge Street United Church was held Tuesday evening in the church parlors.

Miss Young's group served a splendid supper.

The president, Mrs. Jones, welcomed visitors and conducted the business of the meeting. It was decided to change the supper hour from 5:45 to 6:00 p.m. Money was voted to cover expenses of Baby Band and Explorer Group.

The officers of Explorer Group presented a treasure chest of money to the Auxiliary.

Mrs. Burwish's group was in charge of the program. The theme of the worship service was "Sacrament of the Lord's Supper". Miss Downes explained the Holy Communion service.

The chapter from the study book was entitled "The African Church". The aspects described by Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. Hodgson. Mrs. Jones gave evidence of the real missionary spirit being carried on there.

Miss Houston gave an interesting talk on "Christian Stewardship" pointing out the value of tithing and convenient use of envelopes.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her husband wants one more adolescent romantic binge

The ancient problem of the middle-aged husband who is too immature to take in his stride the fact that he is getting older, and so feels himself entitled to one more adolescent romantic binge, comes up again in the following letter:

"I am a woman of middle age, and have been married for 26 years. A couple of months ago my husband left me for a 20-year-old girl whom he claims he loves very much. He hasn't asked me for a divorce to marry her, but he has a room in the same town that she lives in.

"When we were living together, he was a swell husband. We have a married daughter with two children, and therefore he is a grandfather, besides being 20 years older than this girl.

"I work in the same town that my husband does. Do you think I should move away, get a job in another town and try to forget, or do you think I have a chance of getting him back."

Before we go any further, I must admit that the arithmetic in this letter has me a bit confused. This wife says that the husband to whom she has been married for 26 years has left her for a 20-year-old girl and that he is 20 years older than his new girl friends. If one supposes that these figures are correct, that would make the husband now 40 years old, and if he and his wife have been married 26 years, he could therefore have been no more than 14 at the time of his marriage. Surely there must be a mistake somewhere.

So suppose we forget the figures entirely, and just say that this husband, who is middle-age and a grandfather, has become infatuated with a young girl, and the wife's question is, shall she leave him or not.

Wait Patiently

To that question, my answer is that 26 years of married life to "a swell husband" should not be tossed away too quickly. Admittedly, it is a tragic thing that men in their middle years so often try desperately to recapture their lost youth by reaching out frantically for a romance they imagine will turn back the clock. Such episodes, however, tragic as they are, are usually temporary, and if a wife really loves her husband, and wants him back, then she had better just wait with as much fortitude and patience as she can summon up, for the madness to pass.

While waiting, it might not be a bad idea at all if this wife were to follow out her own suggestion of moving away and getting a job in another town. She should not go too far away, however; just far enough so that she will not have to watch this thing going on right under her eyes, yet near enough so that when her husband gets fed up on young love, and homesick for her, as he probably will do before too long, he will find her close at hand, waiting. (If this seems more than he deserves, we'll let that pass.)

Attraction Not Lasting

Few young women of 20 find middle-age men very attractive for long. It doesn't take too long, either, for a man who is no longer young to be irked by the youthful activities in which he is no longer interested, but which the 20-year-old wants to enjoy. After a brief fling at trying to be young again, the average man who is growing older begins to tire of trying to keep up with the younger generation, and to think longingly of quiet evenings at home and the less strenuous pleasures enjoyed by those in his own age group.

I think my correspondent can rest assured that this is what is going to happen in her husband's case. His reductance to admit he is no longer a young man, has led him to snatch at the hope that he can still outwit his years. Moreover, like many other men of his age, he is flattered by the feeling that a young girl still finds him attractive. On her side the girl herself is flattered that an older men apparently finds her interesting and congenial, and she may also have an eye on what she can get out of the relationship in a material way.

If the wife will leave these two to their own devices, and go about her business as though she were completely uninterested in what is going on, the probable thing is they will tire of each other after awhile and she will have her husband back with her.

QUESTION:

Could you give me some recipes for toasted sandwiches in the sandwich toaster other than cheese? I received a sandwich toaster for Christmas and only know of cheese to toast in it.—Marguerite S.

ANSWER:

Any filling that is good hot is suitable for toasting in the sandwich toaster, such as ham, or bacon (cooked first) and tomato, or chopped egg but other fillings that are particularly good toasted in the sandwich toaster follow: (1) Spread 1 slice bread with butter; spread other slice with mashed liverwurst mixed with a little green pickle relish; put slice together, brush outsides sparingly with melted butter and toast in sandwich toaster. (2) Flake canned corned beef. To 6 oz. of it add 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 1 1-2 tablespoons genuine mayonnaise and 2 1-2 tablespoons soft butter or margarine. This is enough to fill 4 or 5 full-size 2-slice sandwiches. Brush outsides with melted butter as above and toast. (3) Drain 1 8-oz. can red salmon, flake it and add 2 tablespoons drained horseradish, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise and 1-4 teaspoon salt. This will fill 9 or 10 full-size sandwiches. Brush with butter as above and toast. A good cheese filling you may not know is white cream cheese spread sparingly with rich orange marmalade. Keep your toaster clean by using fine steel wool, when necessary, and tissues.

QUESTION:

This is to say I very much enjoy your daily chats. . . you have the happy knack of choosing recipes us "little people" can safely try without busting the budget. . . reading yesterday's Chocolate Ice Cream in bed I could hardly wait till morning to try it. . . I did and my husband pronounced it "out of this world" . . . to keep him happy would you give me other ice creams using (skim milk powder)?. . . I have been cooking three meals a day for 40 years and loved every minute. I never measure accurately, slip a roast or chicken in my big electric oven and leave it till I sense it is done. My sister-in-law who cooks by the book, measures to a line, has a sinkful of dishes when boiling an egg, but wonders how I do it. I laugh and tell her I do it like some people fly, by the seat of my pants. But there is one thing I can't make and that's plain cake. . . I bake bread and buns as light as a feather. . . . I have a very simple recipe for meringues I will give you, they melt in your mouth. . . even cake mixes I manage to mess up and have to serve as pudding with a sauce. . . . as a cake-maker I'm a good carpenter. . . . please also give us many more recipes that will not put pounds on the fatsos. . . my husband weighs 224 lbs. . . . hungrily yours.—Yvonne S.

ANSWER:

Yvonne how well you know I would love to have printed your letter in full. Of course I knew you were French from the very first line. Why should anybody want to make cake who can cook like you? However I have been having success with some of the newlyweds who were making cake flops. I am giving them the stream-lined method—but none of your not measuring accurately. If you don't follow the rules I can't help you—neither will the seat of your pants in this instance. By the way are you sure your oven thermometer registers the heat accurately?

STREAM-LINED STANDARD TWO-EGG CAKE

Sift cake flour and measure 2 1-4 cups (exactly) and put this in the sifter with 1 1-2 cups white sugar, 1 level tablespoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Sift into large bowl. Add 1-2 cup very soft shortening or butter. Measure 1 cup milk and to it add 1 1-2 teaspoons vanilla. Add a little over half of this milk mixture to the bowl. Now beat hard for 2 or 3 minutes or until shortening is worked in and the batter is perfectly smooth. Now add 2 medium-sized eggs and the remainder of the milk and beat 2 minutes hard. Pour into buttered and paper-lined layer cake tins or into 1 pan 13x9 inches. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. Layers require 25 to 30 minutes; square or oblong cake 35 to 40.

I'll be consumed with curiosity to know how you made out. I will give you more skim milk powder recipes; I hope you saw January 30 and 31st. I will remember your "fatso"—how can I forget? The mail is full of such requests. I'll use the meringue recipe you gave shortly.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

FIGURES and FROCKS

Daytime clothes are simple and practical, more so than they have ever been. That, you will admit, is all to the good. There's not much opportunity for overdressing, and overdressing is responsible for most of the frumps in this delirious world. These poor dears don't know when they have donned enough dry goods, so they add a lot of do-dads that have no meaning. A woman is more important than the clothes she wears. If her sartorial draperies are striking and complicated, the observer will regard them first of all.

Simple frocks call for a good figure and vibrant carriage. They do not disguise or hide anatomical defects, as do the fussier numbers. So the skinny girls are busy eating adipose-building groceries, endeavoring to gain curves. Those who make the bathroom scales shiver and groan are seeking means of reducing their weight and measurements.

The ideal feminine figure has a neat waistline, a firm, high bust, hips that measure the same as the bust. The effect is that of rounded slenderness. No sharp elbows. Pleasing curves at the calves. Ankles small and trim. The girls whose silhouette comes up to this standard is marching along the beauty road.

There are few figures that are not improved by a perfectly fitted foundation garment that will tuck the hips back and under, give support to the breasts and flatten the tummy. It will be a constant reminder that good posture creates the snappy shape, gives style to the clothes one wears. You can't fold up very well, or have a wrong pose of the spinal column, if you are encased in a snug, comfortable cylinder.

Slouchy carriage is a common good-looks defect, especially among young girls. Maybe they think it is arty to slump. Among middle-age women, rounded shoulders and drooping figures impact an air of depression, as if keeping erect and looking high spirited were just too much trouble. No woman finds life zestful, who is moving along in a current of interesting activities, will let her chest cave in, her steps lag, her shoulders slump forward.

How you feel has a lot to do with how you look, and how you look has a lot to do with your mental state. Daily habits contribute toward appearance, and so does the disposition. The lazy, selfish woman, who demands attention from every member of the family, reveals these character defects in her face and her figure. Usually she gains weight, because she hates activity. The high-strung, nervous woman, hard working and hard driving, usually keeps down to skin and bone.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. C. BEECKMAN

She shouldn't be piqued at her friend's unexpected request

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a friend who sometime last fall gave my baby a birthday gift, a very expensive garment once worn by her child. Now just the other day she mentioned to me that she would appreciate my returning it after my baby has outgrown it. I was certainly quite surprised at her request! Since the garment does need some remodelling and "fussing-up," I am wondering if I should venture to return it to her immediately or just go ahead and use it.—Wondering.

I can well understand your being so surprised by your friend's request that you were piqued, as she apparently gave you no previous indication that she wished to have the "birthday gift" returned, ever. But I do beg you not to be sensitive about this request, not to indulge your hurt feelings, and please not to return the garment for some time, even though you don't have your baby wear it as much or as long as you may have intended, fearing it might show more wear. Then refurbish it in as fine shape as possible, and return it with the most gracious thanks and appreciation. Don't be hard on your friend. . . . obviously she has a special fondness for this garment, showed a special wish for your baby to enjoy wearing it, and wants to pass on its delight and comfort to another child she will choose to be the "honored recipient."

When wedding is postponed, presents are not returned

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Shortly after the date was set for our wedding, a very special circumstance arose which meant that we had to postpone our wedding. I want to explain that our engagement was not broken and that the wedding was not called off. . . simply postponed for several months. Although the wedding invitations had not been sent out, I had received quite a few presents, from close relatives and intimate friends, several from my fiance's relatives. Under this circumstance, should these presents be returned?—Mims T.

No. When for any reason the wedding is postponed, even indefinitely, postponed presents, wedding presents or shower presents, are not returned. It is only when the engagement is broken or the wedding is "called off" that presents are to be returned.

Pattern for processional and recessional, with unusual number of attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In our wedding party there will be: three ushers; best man; maid of honor; one bridesmaid; and three flower girls (all the same height). Please tell me the proper order of processional and recessional.—J.

Processional—first, two ushers, the shortest, walking together; then one usher, the tallest; next, the bridesmaid, alone; next, the maid of honor, alone; then the three flower girls, either walking one-by-one, or one pair followed by a single flower girl; last, you and your father, or whoever is to escort you up the aisle.

Recessional—first, bride and groom; then the three flower girls, as they walked in the processional; the maid of honor, with the best man; the bridesmaid, alone; last, the three ushers, as they walked in the processional. (Or the bridesmaid may walk with the extra usher).

Her son's nickname "Robby" or "Robbie"?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband's first name is Robert, and I have always called him "Bobby", spelling it that way. Now we have a three-weeks-old son, and we've named him Robert, Jr.. We've nicknamed him "Robby", and I'd like to spell it "Robby" (to be more like his father's nickname), not "Robbie", as I've been told it should be spelled. Is it wrong to spell "Robby" with a y, like this not with an ie?—"Mrs. Robert".

It's your privilege to spell your little son's nickname just as you wish to. . . but I do think that in a few years, when he goes to school, there may be a confusion in the spelling of his name, and most of his schoolmates will probably spell his nickname "Robbie," as is more usual.

Fashion Flashes

A WEALTH of new finishes makes cotton more desirable, useful and versatile than ever. Cotton damask, with a silken finish, makes a handsome fabric that is used for a softly tailored suit dress in black over rose. Softly molded lines accent the bust and curve out over the hip pockets. Piping of the striped fabric, in reverse, marks notched collar, curved revers, cuffs and pockets.

A BIG SOCIAL SEASON is seen for white furs, with fluffy white fox continuing to make gains. The large boa—fashioned along curved lines and loosely draped over the shoulders—is a favorite at Southern resorts. Since it is a comparatively inexpensive fine fur fashion, it is bound to be seen here, come spring.

THE SOFT WHISPER of taffeta continues to make itself heard in the spring fashion symphony. Paper-thin silk taffeta, printed with tiny roses on black, makes a charming late afternoon dress, with black velvet marking the wide V neckline and edging the brief, draped sleeves. The full skirt is underscored by a nylon net petticoat, fluffy with ruffles.

LOTS OF STRAW in fashion's breeze. Petit point strawcloth, in yellow gold, is used for a hat with a lifted, bonnet brim and a high, cone-shaped crown. Black satin ribbon marks the crown band and continues up the sides to end in a bow at the crown peak.

IMAGINATION and artistry have combined in a series of beautiful handbags from Italy. Black satin is used for an evening bag, a semi-circular shape done all over in a high-relief honeycomb design. The closing is composed of two petals of rhinestones and pearls, and the handle is of twisted satin.

CANADA TRIUMPHS AT LONDON SHOW

ADJUDGED BEST of eighteen bottled beers from Empire and Commonwealth, Labatt's India Pale Ale won first prize and coveted silver medal at British Brewers Exhibition, Olympia, London. Above, Mr. Hugh F. Labatt, President, congratulates Tom Morgan, brewmaster, on receipt of medal. "We are naturally delighted," Mr. Morgan said, "to have brought this outstanding award to Canada." Second and third prizes also went to Canadian beers. Canada was well represented by nine entries from leading breweries. Olands Limited of Halifax won second prize, Pellers of Hamilton third.

If You're TIRED ALL THE TIME

Everybody gets a bit run-down now and then, tired-out, heavy-headed, and maybe bothered by backaches. Perhaps nothing seriously wrong, just a temporary, toxic condition caused by excess acids and wastes. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Rev. Chas. B. Templeton at 38 Evangelist of Great Renown

By HOWARD C. HEYN

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Chuck Templeton says he doesn't know exactly how it happened. He was happy in his job as a sports cartoonist because his chief enthusiasms were athletics and drawing.

Yet, overnight, he became aware of a vastly different field of activity. In it he found a new career and, in due time, renown.

He is now Rev. Charles B. Templeton, at 38 an evangelist whose meetings have attracted hundreds of thousands in Canada, the United States, Mexico and Europe. He is the first evangelist ever engaged by the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States. And he has just completed a country-wide series of television sermons which reached millions.

On Globe and Mail

While visiting relatives here recently he recalled his days with the sports staff of the Toronto Globe and Mail, and the first stirrings of religious fervor which changed the course of his life.

"I certainly wasn't frustrated; I enjoyed my work tremendously," he said, "but one night when I got home I suddenly had a feeling that something was missing. My job was gratifying, but it wasn't satisfying in the deep sense of complete fulfillment.

"The first thing I knew I was down on my knees praying. Up to that time I could not recall any serious religious tendencies or needs."

This was only a beginning. But after that first prayer Templeton knew pretty much what he wanted to do. He became not only a religious man but a preacher—one of the most dynamic in the field today.

Templeton is a good-looking, candid and amiable man who does not dramatize his own sincerity. He has a special dislike for an awesome approach or unctuous manner.

Evangelism First

In his present work for the National Council of Churches, which is interdenominational, he says the principal goal aside from evangelism is to inspire a strong community spirit among the various faiths.

"We do not seek union of the churches," he said. "Neither do we seek uniformity. We do seek unity—a common endeavor in the cause of Christianity.

Theologically, Templeton and the council are making an intellectual appeal "to put evangelism back in the heart of the church, where it belongs." His is the direct but unsensational approach.

"We feel that many excesses have been committed in the name of evangelism," he said. "In some cases the old-time methods have induced an emotional jag which, in my view, is not only confusing but harmful to those who respond."

No Love Offerings

Personal financial gain has been evident in some evangelical work, he said, and elimination of this fault is a primary concern of the council. No "love offerings" are ever collected at his meetings; Templeton is strictly on salary.

A Toronto newspaper man observed waggishly not long ago that his friend Chuck was just about the only member of the old Globe's sports staff who ever became an active Christian.

Templeton began by going to church, after his initial experience with prayer. He took part in youth meetings. Here his cartooning talent found new expression, and Templeton often went along as illustrator when the pastor conducted meetings near Toronto.

"Then I discovered, to my surprise, that I could speak," he related. "I think it was because I was accustomed as an artist to seeing things in the whole. I found I could make pictures with words as well as with crayon or brush."

Magnetic Speaker

This was all part-time work, at first, on behalf of the Church of the Nazarene. But as his interest sharpened and his speaking ability improved he spent less time cartooning sports and more time studying an extension course in theology. Soon he was asked to address out-of-town meetings, sometimes in the United States.

One such meeting was in Stone Mills, N.Y., where he found only nine persons had braved a blizzard to hear him. But in 10 days his meetings there were attracting 400 persons a night. Shortly afterward he was ordained a Nazarene minister and became a full-time evangelist.

On a trip to Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1938, Templeton met Constance Orozco, a young soprano from California who also was doing evangelistic work. In two weeks they were engaged and in two months they were married. She still sings at his meetings and otherwise assists him.

When they returned to Toronto the Templetons took over a church which had been vacant for 14 years. They spent all their money on rent and repairs. But almost at once the meetings began to attract over-capacity audiences to the 1,200 seat edifice.

Went, to Princeton

Templeton spent seven years directing the Avenue Road Church in central Toronto and making evangelistic trips. But during that time he began to feel the lack of formal education, although he had read exhaustively. He wanted a degree. And he got it, at Princeton's theological seminary.

It wasn't easy; Templeton lacked the scholastic qualifications to enter. But President John Mackay allowed him to take comprehensive examinations, and Templeton satisfied all requirements. He continued his evangelism while at Princeton. When he got his bachelor's degree after three years he was engaged at once by the council of churches.

In the year and a half since then, Templeton has travelled almost constantly. "Home base," which is Wheaton, Ill., he seldom sees. He has been back and forth across the United States and in seven provinces of Canada.

At Saskatoon his meetings drew 50,000 in two weeks. Largest crowds approximated 6,000, and as many as 2,000 were turned away from a single meeting. Attendance in Winnipeg was 11,000 and in Calgary 9,000.

Everywhere, he says, he has encountered "a terrific interest in matters of faith."

Army Experiences Interesting Address At St. Andrew's Club

Ivanhoe — The February meeting of St. Andrew's Club, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McInroy on Friday evening, was well attended.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. John McInroy, who read a poem. Luke 11: 1-10 was read by Mrs. Milton Shaw. A piano solo was given by Grant Thompson.

Guest Speaker

Mr. Harold Thompson introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Alex. Cunningham, a captain at the age of 20—he was fortunate to be among Canadian officers, sent on loan to the British army in 1944 prior to "D" Day. Mr. Cunningham held the interest of all present as he told of his thrilling army experiences in England, France, Belgium and Germany.

Mr. Walker, in expressing thanks on behalf of the club members said, "I am sure all enjoyed this interesting address. The detailed account of your army experiences was vivid, clarifying and informative."

Instrumental music was given by Mrs. Arthur Hassall (piano), and Mr. William Donnan (harmonica); a humorous reading, "Mrs. Smart Learns to Skate," by Mrs. Russell Sills, caused much laughter and applause; piano solo was given by Beverely McInroy.

Plans were made for the play, "Raggedy Anne", sponsored by the club, to be presented by Zion's Hill Young People in Ivanhoe town hall Friday, February 6. Refreshments were served.

Injures Hand

Mrs. Keith Bray had the misfortune to have her right hand lacerated in the wringer, while washing on Monday morning. Mrs. Bray was able to release her hand, later she was attended by the doctor, who pronounced there was no fracture.

Mr. William MacMillan, who has spent the past two weeks in Kingston, has returned to his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lain, Sandra and Linda spent the week-end in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl McMaster, Mr. and Mrs. George Wood spent Monday and Tuesday in Toronto.

Mrs. Leo Coveny is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bunn and Debbie, of Toronto, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stephens.

SCOHARIE

Scoharie — Mr. and Mrs. B. Foster and Darlene returned on Wednesday from a week's visit in Toronto. They were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Don Reed, Georgetown. Mr. Foster also attended the implement show.

Neighbors rejoice with Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd on the safe return of their son, Bob, on Friday morning after a year in Korea. Ted Lloyd spent a recent week-end with his wife and baby here.

Mr. John Lloyd, Toronto, spent several days last week with Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd. Miss Lorraine Phillips, of Oshawa, was also a guest at the same home.

Mr. and Mrs. James Huff, of Bloomfield, were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Huff.

Misses Norma Foster and Margaret Parliament and Messrs. Tom May, Laverne Way, Ted MacCauley and Ross Foster attended the Eastern Ontario Junior Farmer Conference at Kemptville Agricultural School on Friday. They enjoyed splendid speakers, a banquet and a dance and a wonderful time was had by all. Laverne kindly drove the group to Bellevilel to meet the bus.

Miss Norma Foster atended a party on Saturday evening at the home of Miss Irene Walter, in Bloomfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hanna are spending a couple of weeks in Picton.

Sunday School Lesson:

The Generosity of God

By ROY L. SMITH

It is hardly surprising that the simple peasants who listened to Jesus were a bit confused by some of the things He said, for wiser men than they were have studied long and carefully over some of the profound sayings that fell from His lips, and they are still wondering. This week's story of one of the most difficult to explain in all the New Testament. But we will take a try at it.

The Story Itself

It seems that a farmer had a heavy crop which needed harvesting and he engaged a crew to help him get it in, agreeing with them at the prevailing wage rate of the neighborhood. Sometime later in the day, seeing that the first workers were not going to get the work done, he went out and hired some more laborers, this time without having any agreement concerning the rate of pay. Twice again during the day he did the same thing. Then when evening came he paid them all the same wages, those who had worked all day and those who had worked only a few hours.' The scriptures say that the early workers "murmured" and one can almost hear them down to this day.

At first glance it would seem that the long-day workers had a raw deal. True, the farmer had kept his agreement, but there was an inequity in the matter if we are to measure payment in terms of labor invested.

Jesus Had An Idea

Jesus was not trying to discuss a labor problem, however. He was not setting up an economic system in which a new theory of wages was to be put forward. Instead, He was undertaking to present a picture of God.

He was trying to teach men that it is impossible to bargain with God, for the simple reason that God's good gifts are not like merchandise—to be had for a price. They are, rather, the free expression of a great heart that loves all men as though they were His children, as indeed they are.

Rare indeed is the father who puts his fatherly interests and goodwill on a bargain basis. Rare is the son who has to bargain shrewdly with his father in order to get his fair share of parental benefits. Every upright and right thinkng father is even more anxious to give to his children what they are to receive at his hands.

> The Uniform Sunday School Lesson for February 8: "Jesus Teaches God's Grace," Matthew 20.

"The thing that disappoints me in my son," the grey haired business man said, "is that he will not accept from me as much as I want to give him. I'd like to pay his way through college, and then on to graduate work, so that he could begin his professional career at the head of the line. But he is not willing to make the effort. I would take him into my business and teach it to him, but he will not accept discipline. He wants all the rewards without being ready to accept any of the responsibilities, and I do not propose to punish him that way."

Can't Bargain With God

What Jesus was trying to make plain is the fact that God is not an employer, who makes an agreement and then sticks with it. Instead, He is a Father who is trying to do more for His children than they want done for them. "You have always tried to make out of me the kind of man I did not want to be," exclaimed a willful youngster, in revolt against his father, and that was exactly the kind of man Jesus had in mind when He told this story.

The goodness and the graces of God are available to men on a generous basis that somehow transcends the relationship of an employer. God's generosity is one of the most amazing things this life knows.

Two Men Killed At Welland Works In Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) —A fire in the Welland works of North American Cyanamid in adjacent Stamford township killed two men and severely burned two others Thursday.

Dead are Milton Raymond Butler, 29, and Mepon Kostescki, 31. Injured are Roy Plane, a welder, and James Freckleton, a steam fitter. All were members of the chemical company's maintenance crew and residents of Niagara Falls.

Company officials said the fire occurred when the men were repairing, from the inside, a tank used for the production of ammonia at the plant about five miles south of here.

They said a leak in the line to a welder's torch permitted acetylene to escape into the tank. When the men tried to light the torch, a fire resulted. The injured men escaped by climbing a ladder inside the tank to a manhole.

OSLO. (CP) — The Norwegian Christian Workers Federation now lists 170 local branches, an increase of 11 over the year previous. During 1952 the federation organized about 3,000 religious services in factories and shops throughout Norway.

Council Will Probe Charges 'Racial Slurs'

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Council of Christians and Jews opened an investigation Thursday into racial slur charges against Gerry Livingston, manager of Tillsonburg Livingstons basketball team, and some of its members and supporters.

Livingston is alleged to have abused verbally Alex Fisher, manager of the Toronto Norton Tri-Bell team and Tillsonburg fans are accused of making slurring remarks about the racial background of one or two players on the Toronto team.

The action against the Tillsonburg manager and its members was brought on by Fisher who sent a letter of protest to the Ontario Amateur Basketball Association after the alleged remarks at a game in Tillsonburg last Saturday.

Richard Jones, secretary of the Council of Christians and Jews, said he would attempt to bring the managers of the two teams together to effect a remedy for what he termed "an unfortunate situation."

In Windsor, president Milt Hart of the OABA announced that body will meet "within two or three days" to discuss the racial slur charges.

"Naturally," he said in a statement, "the OABA cannot condone alleged anti - Semitic utterances made by any of its members but until such time as our executive can meet to hear both sides of the story, we will give out no further statements."

Scenes From Flood-Ravaged England

Queen Mother Elizabeth and Princess Margaret are seen drinking tea while chatting with an aged flood worker at the Benfleet evacuation centre for Canvey Island flood victims. Canvey, an island in the Thames Estuary, was hard hit by the hurricane which touched off the floods, losing over 100 of its 3,000 residents. Some 400 to 500 others are believed missing.—Central Press Canadian.

Huddled together under blankets are some of the flood victims evacuated from their inundated homes in the Thrusthorpe area of Lincolnshire. Rescued at night by army amphibious craft, one couple managed to save their pet dog tucked under their blanket. The estimated dead of three nations, — England, Belgium and The Netherlands — lashed by storm and flood, is fast approaching the 2,000 mark. — Central Press Canadian.

Gadget Locks Plane on Target In Total Darkness

SEOUL (AP)—Pilots of a new U.S. jet night fighter plane — the Skynight — have shot down Red planes in Korea without even seeing them, the Marine Corps said today.

The new Marine plane, the twin-jet F-3D built by Douglas Aircraft Company, made a secret appearance in Korea several months ago. It is equipped with an intricate radar system which locks the plane on a target in darkness.

Unofficial reports said the new jets have destroyed six night-flying Communist MIG's and one propellor-driven aircraft.

Property damage, both actual and potential, was described as "appalling." Some 300,000 Dutch are homeless and destitute and 700,000 others are described as "in distress."

Both Britain and Belgium were in somewhat better shape.

Everything Under Control

In Britain, A. G. Johnson, chief drainage engineer of the British agriculture ministry, reported: "Everything is under control."

Johnson said that 500 holes had been torn in English dikes, but from 100 to 150 of these already had been filled in and repair work on the others was under way.

The water has begun to recede from all except a few of the flooded places in Belgium.

Dutch officials indicated their next big job would be the resettlement on safer ground of whole towns and villages from the devastated southwest part of Holland.

The most immediate danger, said Health Minister Dr. Pieter Muntendam, is that an epidemic of typhoid fever may break out.

Billion Dollars Damage

Although it is still too early for a definite tally of damage to the Dutch homes, farmland and national economy, preliminary estimates placed it at around $1,000,000,000.

Salt water spilled over one-sixth of Holland's land surface, affecting one-fourth of its arable fields. Surveys by the transport and waterways ministry showed that 500,000 acres of farmland and pasture have been flooded.

August G. Maris, waterways director, conceded none of these flooded areas can produce crops this year. They probably will not be able to produce full crops before the summer of 1955.

May Cleanse Soil

With luck, heavy rains at the right time and the use of fertilizers, the soil may be cleansed of its salt in time to produce a 60-per-cent crop in 1954.

Officials warned that many of the more serious economic effects of the disaster will not be felt until later. The country will soon exhaust its foreign exchange supply when its normal agricultural exports fall off and when, as is expected, it has to import sugar. Some 28 per cent of Holland's sugar beet land now is lying useless beneath the sea.

These officials said that losses in personal effects, real property, livestock, ruined crops and potential future farm output plus the cost of rebuilding the dikes added up to more than the Dutch economy could stand.

Situation Swept Aside

Only recently, Holland notified American officials she felt strong enough economically to get along without U.S. aid this year, but this situation now has been swept aside.

Presumably the question of more American aid for Holland, rather than less, was to be discussed today with State Secretary John Foster Dulles and Mutual Security Chief Harold E. Stassen of the U.S. during their visit here.

Despite the immensity of the reclamation problem facing the Dutch Maris defiantly said Holland would never yield an inch of her inundated territory to the sea.

"Not a single piece of land will be surrendered. We will get back every bit."

Canadiens Nip Leafs 2-0 To Edge Within Point Of Hot-And-Cold Wings

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

HOT TIME — TONIGHT

Both Belleville hockey teams swing into action tonight with the Glens providing the home attraction with the Oshawa Truckers and the junior Hawks trekking to Peterborough where they joust with the Triple Links of that city. The Hawks "are in" as far as top spot in the group is concerned, but they'll be out there battling to keep in trim for the playoffs.

What should be one of the most important games of the season as far as the Glens are concerned looms up tonight in the Truckers clash. The Glens are tied with Kinghton for top spot in the eastern section, five points in front of the Peterborough Petes. And, incidentally, the Petes are guests of the Goodyears tonight.

If it is not asking too much, a win for the Glens tonight and again on Monday when they entertain the Goodies here, should put them in the playoffs. In any event, tonight's tilt should be one for the archives and it is hoped a record crowd will be on hand to cheer the Glens to a needed victory.

MINOR HOCKEY

Four peewee hockey games will be played in the Arena tomorrow morning starting at seven o'clok. At nine o'clock the Canadiens play the Red Wings in a bantam league playoff game and the bantam all-stars will practice from 10 to 11 o'clock.

Tweed meets the Wellington team in a juvenile playdown game on the latter's ice tomorrow. The winner of this series meets the winner of the Havelock, Stirling and Madoc series.

BRAINS AND BRAWN!

Next Wednesday night in Chicago, a slim blonde youngster with a couple of college parchments to his credit will make a determined effort to go to the head of the class. He is Chuck Davey, a welterweight with a flicking lethal left fist, whose ambition is to graduate with top honors in the welterweight boxing division.

Chuck writes his final leather-pushing examination against a tough student, a dark-skinned Cuban, who is the darling of Havana, Santiago, the sugar plantations, night-spots and the hinterlands of the "Pearl of the Antilles."

He's "Keed" Gavilan, wily, clever veteran of many a bloody ring brawl and present owner of the bauble symbolic of the welter championship.

If the "prof" with the high I.Q., sees his hand raised in victory next Wednesday it will be the 37th, in his professional boxing career, one that has been perfect except for two draws with Carmen Basilio and Ross Virgo.

In his triumphant march to the seats of the welter mighty, Chuck has brushed aside such big names as Ike Williams, Chico Vejar and Rocky Gratiano, former middleweight champion.

Chuck gave away 12 pounds in that Gratiabo scrap, but he tagged the "Rock" over 600 times in 10 rounds and took but two solid blows. It was the biggest payday ($16,875) in his career and shot him up to the spot of "logical contender." He blew Fitzie Pruden aside last December without getting out of breath, and went into intensive training for the biggest fight of them all.

He learned how to fight at Michigan State, won the intercollegiate 127-pound title his first time out, took time out to serve in the air force overseas and came back to win three championships in a row.

He got the brush-off from the New York fight mob simply because he "had brains and was a southpaw." He went back to Michigan, got two inexperienced college pals to manage him, a flock of shapely coed cheer-leaders to egg him on and started his victory streak.

You know the rest. In February, 1952, he signed to meet Ike Williams, for his first money fight and was coached in southpaw fighting by the ex-forkside star, Lew Tendler. Chuck, always a willing student, listened to Lew and the result was a TKO over Williams in the fifth round.

Davey knocked Chico Vejar down four times with body blows to earn a 10-round decision, then flattened the same senor with one body blow in a return match.

Which sounds mighty impressive if you are a Davey rooter.

The blase Gotham fight "brains" can't see it that way. All they can vision is the "Keed" brushing aside the perambulating professor with the potent punch in his stride. So much in fact they claim if the fight was being held in New York, the odds would be 8-1 on Gavilan "with little or no action."

But the Davey faithful think otherwise. Midwest money, thick bunches of luscious green lettuce, is being banked on the back of Chuck at 2-1. By fight time, it is said, the odds may drop to 6-5.

So there it is, men. Take it any way you like. We're not going to be a "limb-bum", but to follow the usual pattern, we'll take Gavilan, so that Davey should win.

EIGHT "HAT TRICKS" THIS SEASON

Eight "Hat Tricks" have been registered in the National Hockey League up to the morning of January 31st. Two players, Wally Hergesheimer of New York, and Gordie Howe of Detroit, have racked up two "Hats." Other players to score three goals in one game this season are Jean Beliveau and Boom Boom Geoffrion, Montreal; Fleming Mackell, Boston; and Ted Kennedy, Toronto.

SUSPEND CHAIR THROWER

MONTREAL (CP)—Martin Conway, president of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, said Thursday that Phil Watson, coach of Quebec Citadelles of the Junior Amateur Hockey Association, has been suspended for three games. Conway said the suspension was given because Watson threw two chairs on to the Montreal Forum ice Tuesday, after his team lost to Montreal Canadiens 6-3.

McNeil Registers 9th Shutout As Rangers Tie With Detroit; Bruins Drub Black Hawks 4-1

By CRAIG SWAYZE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

James Dickenson Irvin, the grey ghost of Montreal, may yet rate as the miracle coach of 1953—that if, if his Canadiens finish first in the rough, tough National Hockey League race.

Often berated by sports writers, continually beset by injuries to key players and earlier befuddled by a team which started the season like an ancient auto on a frosty morning, the Habitant coach has whipped his cosmopolitan crew into a smooth-skating machine which now threatens Detroit Red Wings' four-year monopoly on the league leadership.

But threatening is not enough for Mr. Irvin. And from the way Canadiens have been going of late, that could mean first place.

While the hot-and-cold Red Wings were barely holding the tail-end New York Rangers to a 3-3 tie Thursday night, Canadiens shut out the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs 2-0 and moved to within a point of the top-seated Detroiters.

Boston Bruins climbed into a fourth-place deadlock with Chicago by downing the Black Hawks 4-1.

Rocket Scores

At Montreal, Maurice Richard and Dollard St. Laurent supplied the firepower for Canadiens as little Gerry McNeil chalked up his ninth shutout of the season.

The teams played two periods of dull hockey before Richard clicked at 6:08 of the final frame for his 22nd goal of the season. Four minutes later St. Laurent scored with a blueline drive on a Canadiens' power play. Jim Thomson was sitting out a tripping penalty.

The Rangers gained their tie with the mighty Wings in the final four minutes of play at Detroit, defenceman Al Stanley tipping in Hy Buller's long shot.

George Senick, late of Saskatoon Quakers in the Western Hockey League, opened the scoring for the Blue Shirts with the first goal of his NHL career. It was a 75-footer that bounced past an amazed Terry Sawchuk in the Detroit goal. John Wilson evened the count and Alex Delvecchio gave the Wings a 2-1 lead before Aldo Guidolin put the Rangers back into a tie.

Howe Gets 38th

Gordie Howes 38th goal of the season put Detroit in front again with 22 minutes left to play. Stanley's marker deadlocked the issue.

Jimmy Peters scored the first goal of the game in Boston at 16:39 of the opening period. It gave Chicago a 1-0 lead and was the first goal the Black Hawks had scored in three games.

Jerry Toppazzini evened the count two minutes later and early in the second period Johnny Pierson gave the Bruins the winning edge. Ed Sandford and Fleming Mackell added the other Boston markers.

No games are scheduled tonight. Detroit meets Montreal Saturday while Chicago visits Toronto.

VERN GOYER

TONY PARISI

Captain Vern Goyer will lead his Glen Roys on the ice tonight to do battle with the group-leading Oshawa Truckers in what should be a senior "B" thriller. Canny custodian of the cage, Tony Parisi, is ready to turn in another outstanding performance against the Motor City trigger-men who are dangerous but plenty when around the opposition's nets. However, the Glens have power of their own and they'll be gunning hard for the victory this evening.

Lack of Entries Will Not Halt Sled Dog Race

THE PAS, Man. (CP)—A racing classic of the north will be run this year in spite of a scarcity of entries.

Officials of the Northern Manitoba Trappers' Festival, to be held Feb. 17-20, said only two entries were in for the 200-mile Canadian open championship sled dog race from The Pas to Flin Flon and back.

Joe Highway, winner of the mushing championship in 1951 and John Marasity, who placed third in 1950, are the two early entrants. Both are from Brochet, 300 miles north of here.

One woman, Mrs. Marie Ouellette, wife of 1950 champion Laird Ouellette, said she will enter.

Major A Loop Sets 3 Records

Jim White (Schwab's) set one of three seasonal Major "A" Bowling League records last night. His high single of 441 (he missed the headpin after eleven successive strikes) is a new mark in that department, while the Belleville Golf team's high triple (3865) and high team single (1425) is something for the rest to shoot at.

Golf (3865) and Schwab's (3446) each took seven point wins over Hardwick Printing (3098) and Moore's Chisellers (3228) while G. H. Woods (3528) and Lawn Bowlers (3121) earned 5-2 wins over CNR (3408) and Upper Canada News (2980).

White had the high triple of 923. Other good scores were: Frank Martin 888, Harry Ridley 879, Joe Kirkwood 773, Evan Barlow 772, Wally Dingman 744, Wilf McLaughlin 741, Bill Rawson 727, Joe Legault 725, Newt Wulbur 724, Les Lennox 716, Bill Bateman 714, Sam Halbert 709, "Doll" Pointer 702, Jim Semark 691, Ted Greenfield 686, D. Hull 684, Dalt Leckie 682, Doug Ashley 674, Jim McKenzie 663, Ken Scovell 662, Charlie Marriott 656, Frank Pailey 652.

Standing:

Schwabs 28, Belleville Golf 25, C. N. R. 24, Moore's Chisellers 18, G. H. Wood's 18, Hardwick Printing 12, Upper Canada News 8, Lawn Bowlers 7.

Quebec Rink Wins In Dramatic 'Extra'

QUEBEC (CP)—Paul Ruel's Quebec Curling Club aggregation came up with a fabulous extra end Thursday night ti win 9-8 over Quebec Jacques Cartier, skipped by Olivier Samson, in the semi-finals of the Chateau International Trophy competition of the Quebec international bonspiel.

Ruel scored with his last stone on a cold draw, for the third extra end to date in the curling classic. His team now squares off against E. W. Spriggs' Halifax Mayflower quartet, which toppled Dr. C. R. Baxter's Moncton, N.B., aggregation 15-3 in the other semi-final game.

In the semi-finals of the Omega International competition, Dr. M.R. Stalker's Ormstown, Que., aggregation whipped Dr. R. C. Rice's Campbellton foursome 13-4 to qualify for the finals against A. F. Muth's Quebec Victoria aggregation. Muth defeated Bathurst, N.B., 10-5 in the semi-finals.

A. Lafrance's North Bay rink reached the semi-final of the Holt Renfrew International competition with a 19-9 victory over F. B. Fowlie's Newcastle, N.B., quartet.

D. Aboud's Smiths Falls, Ont., foursome lost out in the quarter-finals of the Val d'Or International to R. A. Tanner's Lunenburg, N.S., rink, 10-7.

H. Wood's Lindsay, Ont., crew advanced to the third round of the Royal Bank Centenary before losing, defeating S. Rafuse of Halifax 9-8 in the first round and J.R. Creaser of Bridgewater, N.S., by the same score in the second round.

Paul Chaput of Quebec Jacques Cartier then polished off the Lindsay men 11-6.

F. T. Julian's Woodstock, Ont., crew went down 9-6 in the first round of the Royal Bank event to G. MacDonald of Sept Iles, Que.

O. Bigford of Westport, Ont., skipped his rink to a close 5-4 victory over John Caludar of Wauwatosa, Wis., in the opening round of the International Goodwill Shield.

A. Hartman's Midland, Ont., rink defeated C. P. Roper's Halifax four in the first round of the Ronson International. Julian's Woodstock crew defeated R. G. Densmore of Dartmouth, N.S., 11-7.

Two other Ontario rinks went out in the Ronson second round. J. B. Ellwood, Smiths Falls, lost 12-4 to Col. A. Bell, Quebec Victoria. V.A. Selkirk of Peterborough was defeated 8-7 by J. P. Lafontaine, Thetfird Mines, Que.

MUD JINXES RACE

TORONTO (CP)—Officials ruled "no contest" in the first heat of the fifth race at Dufferin Park Thursday when a muddy track made impossible the use of the starting gate. All bets were refunded. In the featured class A pace, Sacramento, owned by Cummings and Chuckrow of Spencerville, Ont., and driven by Bob Bomar splashed his way to an easy double heat win.

Two Referees, Linesman For Junior A Games

TORONTO (CP)—In a movie aimed at cutting down injuries, the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A executive Thursday night ruled that two referees and one linesman will handle all games after Sunday.

The system in force now has one referee and two linesmen, the same as in the National Hockey League.

The league will also abide by last season's playoff system in which the first and second, third and fourth, and fifth and sixth teams meet at the conclusion of the schedule.

The new officiating deal was proposed by Oshawa's Matt Layten and supported by Toronto St. Michael's and St. Catharines.

The executive was almost unanimous in clinging to last year's playoff system although Windsor suggested eight teams be allowed to enter post-season play. The move received no support.

The first and second teams will meet in a best-of-seven series while the next four will pair off in of the best-of-five affairs will then meet in another best-of-five series. The survivors will meet the winners of the best-of-seven playoff for the right to advance into the Memorial Cup hunt.

Teams tied at the end of the schedule will be judged on a goals for and against basis to decide which stands the highest.

Belleville Moiras Drub Flyers 61-39 To Even Basketball Playoff Series

By ED MacDONALD

Close checking and good in-play spelled the difference last night as Belleville Moiras vindicated themselves with a decisive 61-39 win over the Trenton R.C.A.F. Blues in the second game of the best-of-three playoff series for the Quinte Intermediate 'B' basketball crown. The Belleville victory, in front of a partisan crowd at the Trenton Air Force Base, knotted up the series at one game each.

By capitalizing on Trenton lapses and with determined 'in fighting' the Belleville hoopsters jumped into an early lead. The Trents fought back in the second quarter and made motions of taking over the lead. But the locals perked up and put on a rally that knocked the wind right out of the fly-boys.

McLay Stars

Ed McLay showed the way with a terrific demonstration of under-the-basket work. He was grabbing rebounds off the Belleville backboard in a manner which would make one think he had an option on the place, and just to keep his hand in, he kept hovering under the Trenton basket, managing to out-grapple the opposition more times than was funny.

The net result was that McLay potted 22 points for the Moiras, and in general conducted himself as a character who knows his way around a basketball court.

The roomy air force gym lent itself to fast action, quick plays and spirited offensive work. The Moiras took advantage of their abilities and kept the Blues off balance for the better part of the evening. Bill Muirhead and Lou Dowsett stood out in the concentrated Belleville attack. They showed the fire and drive all the way that was noticeable by its absence in the curtain raiser.

With the same effort, including the pot shots of 'Hairless-Joe' Batchelor, the Moiras should have no trouble wrapping up the series in the next game. This final is to be played next Tuesday night, but the locale has not as yet been set.

However even if they have to go up to Yawnin' Creek Alberta to play, it off it should be a hum-dinger. The Trenton lads are far from beaten, and they still have old Mac McLeod leading them on, plus the sharpshooting ace Len Wade, and a bunch of never-say-die basketballers on their side.

The lineups:

Belleville Moiras

Lockyer (2), Batchelor (8), Muirhead (5), Dousett (14), Hayman (2), Soules (2), Garrow (2), McClay (22), Pappas (4), Fitzpatrick.

Trenton R.C.A.F.

Watson (1), Andrews, Herenden (4), O'Hara (4), McLeod (4), Baxter, Blythe, Campbell, W. McLeod (5), LeHay (6), Wade (15).

Western Football Officials Concur With East in Import Salary Slash

By JIM BASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The era of high-priced American football imports may be nearing an end.

This was indicated Thursday when Ken Montgomery, president of Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union said he is concerned with "ballooning salary rolls" and that the western circuit may be forced to follow the example of the eastern Big Four League in putting a lid on salaries.

The Big Four clamped on a limit at its annual meeting in Toronto a couple of weeks ago. Officials were mum on the ceiling price but reports from Toronto and Montreal from "official sources" said it was believed that $8,000 would be tops.

Cut to $5,000

A report from Edmonton Thursday said it was "reliably reported" the figure was $5,000 a year with a $400 bonus for each playoff game.

That would be a far cry from some salaries in past years.

Canadian clubs have offered as much as $20,000 a year to American players and have lured pro stars from the National Football League in the United States. The "richest" find was George Ratterman, formerly of New York Yankees, who played one season with Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four in 1951 for a reported $20,000.

Canadian raids on American talent stepped into high gear in 1947 when Hamilton Tigers, then of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, former New York Giants passer. He later went to the Alouettes on a two-year contract at a reported $10,000-a-year salary, coached Edmonton Eskimos to a Grey Cup final berth in 1952 and has signed to coach Saskatchewan Roughriders this year.

Recently Billy Vessels, University of Oklahoma all-American halfback, was reported to have been offered $14,000 to play for Edmonton Eskimos this year. Eskimo officials denied this.

Montgomery said Thursday that the feeling among western team representatives at the recent annual meeting in Regina was that player salaries are getting out of hand

Several western stars are reported to be receiving as much as $10,000 to $12,500 a season. There probably are some in the East getting that, too.

And, if the reported $5,000-a-year ceiling is correct Canadian teams might not find bright prospects in the US as the NFL pays that kind of money to ordinary players.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—So far as it is possible to detect at this point, Bill Veeck, the gay young president of St. Louis Browns, finally has managed to get himself across a barrel.

His demand for a cut of television profits when his club is playing on the road has caused Yankees, as a retaliatory measure, to chop Brownies off their night game schedule at the Stadium.

This will prove quite a financial blow to Veeck's outfit, which must depend to an important extent upon its "take" in the richer American League ball parks until it improves sufficiently to attract bigger crowds at home. Daytime games between Yanks and Browns at the Stadium are notoriously poor draws.

There appears to be nowhere Bill can turn either for redress or sympathy. His own league voted him down at its recent meetings here and he can get no help from commissioner Ford Frick.

In Boxing

The great middleweight tournament has cracked up even more quickly than was predicted with the withdrawal of Bobo Olson, the nationally known television favorite from the unwieldy field of candidates named jointly by the National Boxing Association and the New York Commission.

Bobo is right. He's already licked most of them and why should he be required to do it again? This one-man commission is prepared to recognize the winner of a talked-about match between Bobo and Randy Turpin of England as the legitimate successor to Ray Robinson as world 160-pound ruler.

Our rival bodies, the NBA-New York cartel, probably would complain, but there wouldn't be much they could do about it. They would, as a matter of fact, look pretty silly.

Claims Mayer Is Top Goalie

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Goalie Gil Mayer tips the scales at a mere 150 pounds but his slick net-minding is one of the big reasons Pittsburgh Hornets are threatening to repeat as champions of the American Hockey League.

The little French-Canadian, now playing his fourth season for the Hornets, is riding the crest of two consecutive shutouts as Pittburgh goes after its ninth straight victory against Providence here tonight.

He's had four shutouts this season and in 44 games has permitted 102 goals, a 2.32 average.

Coach King Clancy has nothing but praise for his 23-year-old star.

"He's the best goalie in the league," says the Hornet skipper. "He never worries whether he gets a shutout or not. He's a great team player. His play has been sensational and that's the big reason why we are tied with Cleveland for the league leadership."

The Hornets and Cleveland share the lead with 54 points each.

Field of 80 Ready for World Skating Titles

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — A total of nearly 80 skaters from nine countries including Canada are warming up on the huge Davos ice rink for the world figure-skating championships, which open here Sunday with the competition for pairs.

Three of the four world titles which will be contested are open because their possessors have turned professional since the world championships in Paris last winter. The fourth title—for ice dancing—is held by Jean Westwood and Lawrence Demmy of England, who will compete here next week.

Canada has seven skaters in the championships, all from Toronto. They are:

Suzanne Morrow, 21; Peter Firstbrook, 18; Frances Defoe, 22; Norris Bowden, 25; Vivi Smith, 20; Mary Kenner, 18, and Peter Dunfield, 19.

BANCROFT

Pontiacs Down Tamworth 10-6

BANCROFT (Special) — The Bancroft Pontiacs downed Tamworth 10-6 here on Monday night in a fast, action-packed, Hastings-Addington league fixture that was nip and tuck all the way despite the high score. The Pontiacs have a tight hold on the first-place berth having lost only one game this year. They remain undefeated on home ice.

One unfortunate incident marred the game when Jim Bruce, the stocky, fast-moving forward, was removed to hospital with torn knee ligaments following a stiff body check in the first period. He will be out of action for the remainder of the season.

Five penalties were handed out with Rumble, Munroe and Marshall of Tamworth getting the nod for holding while Dougall and Hattin of the local squad went off for tripping.

Walthamstowe Ousted By Manchester U.

LONDON (Reuters)—The contest for Britain's Football Association Cup became an all-professional struggle as Walthamstow Avenue, last amateur team in the competition, bowed 5-2 Thursday before Manchester United in a fourth-round replay.

In its first fourth-round encounter Walthamstow, first amateur team to reach that stage of the national eliminations since 1929, drew 1-1 with Manchester, which won the league championship last year.

Manchester United meets Everton in the fifth round.

Shorts Are Barred for Golf Lassies; Edict Meets With Divided Opinions

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—The sports world was sharply divided today on a burning issue: Did the U. S. Golf Association do right in banning shorts for all official women's tournaments.

The fairway fathers issued the edict last Saturday. No more scanty, revealing attire for the links lassies. Conservative skirts only.

"We feel it's terribly unfair," said the golfing Bauer sisters, who taught galleries to appreciate more than a pretty swing. "The decision should be left to the individual."

Another staunch shorts wearer is Peggy Kirk, who could grace a chorus line Says Peggy:

"I feel the USGA ban is only against the briefer type of shorts. The knee length or Bermuda-type shorts should be okay. They offer freedom."

Babs Likes 'Em

Canada's Barbara Ann Scott, star of the ice revue who glided to world and olympic figure-skating championships in a brief ballerina skirt, said she thought golf skirts just as attractive but added: "I play golf some—in shorts."

From Maureen Orcutt came a strong vote for the USGA action.

"Shorts are all right in tennis and other sports in which players are in an enclosure," said Maureen. "On a golf course, out in the open, they are undignified. Besides, skirts are much nicer."

Gussie Moran, who shocked Wimbledon tennis galleries a few years ago with her fancy lace panties, said she thought "the modern woman athlete should wear whatever garb is necessary for her to execute the required movement of the sport."

Harry Conover, model agency head who termed lady golfers "dowdies" in naming his "ten most glamorous women in sports" commented: "It's a good move, but they didn't go far enough. They should ban women golfers. That is, unless they live up to the tradition of the Bauer sisters."

Young Boxer Still 'Out'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Tevone Welbourne, 15-year-old amateur boxer, was unconscious in hospital here today after collapsing at the end of the first round of a bout at Chilliwack, B.C.

The youth was brought 70 miles to Vancouver in a police-escorted ambulance after examination at the Chilliwack Hospital indicated he had suffered a serious head injury.

Welbourne, from Mission City, B.C., appeared all right at the end of the first round, fight officials said. But his seconds said he was unable to continue and the boy collapsed in his corner before the bell.

It was the first fight of a card sponsored by the Canadian Army and the Chilliwack Boxing Club.

The name of Welbourne's opponent was not known here.

Pt. Anne Defeats Trenton 6-3 In Valley Game

Point Anne's Canada Cementmen took the measure of the Trenton Admirals in a scheduled Trent Valley Hockey League fixture here last night, defeating the townsmen by a 6-3 score.

The Ox Pointers took a commanding lead of 4-2 in the first period. Both teams went scoreless in the second despite the fact the Admirals had a decided edge in the play, and the winners outscored the opposition 2-1 in the third beat.

Point Anne's line of Strahan, Gilmour and Hull looked the best, accounting for all of their goals Billy Strahan came up with three goals, Pat Gilmour and Bobby Hull scoring a goal each and being credited with three assists. Bradshaw got the other one.

Scott, Black and Beal stood out for the Admirals. Scott was good for a pair of markers and one assist. Beale got one and one and Black came up with a pair of helpers.

Twa in the Point Anne nets also turned in an outstanding game especially in the second period when he held off the Admiral's determined drives. Seven penalties were handed out by the officials.

Saskatoon Nabs League Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Saskatoon Quakers regained first place in the Western Hockey League by coming from behind to trounce Calgary Stampeders 6-3 Thursday night.

Saskatoon scorers were Herb Jeffrey with two, Jack Evans, Doug Bentley, Skip McKay and Jack McLeod. Sid Finney, playing his last game with the third-place Stampeders before moving up to Chicago Black Hawks, tallied twice and Pat Lundy got the other Calgary counter.

The win gave Quakers a two-point lead over Vancouver Canucks.

Middlecoff Quits Golf Tourney

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—The sponsors of the $10,000 El Paso open golf tournament are boiling mad at Cary Middlecoff for quitting over the condition of the course.

Middlecoff, defending champion, stalked off the windblown, dry-as-a-bone 6,309-yard course Thursday after shooting nine holes in five-over-par 41, and said it was the worst he had ever seen. "I never before in my golf career took six bogeys in a row nor ever three-putted more than three greens in succession," he growled. "I three-putted five in a row here."

Bob Haynesworth, co chairman of the tournament committee, called Middlecoff a poor sport and said the course was no worse than last year when Middlecoff won first money.

Ted Kroll and Chandler Harper, who seldom win first place but usually are active around the cash window, shot five-under-par 66s to tie for the first-round lead.

Federal Govt. to Contribute To Water Conservation Plans

OTTAWA (CP)—Resources Minister Winters said Thursday night the federal government will contribute to water conservation projects that municipalities and the provinces cannot afford to undertake by themselves.

He made the statement after spokesmen for all parties unanimously endorsed legislation enabling the federal government to cooperate with the provinces on water conservation projects. A resolution providing for financial assistance was adopted and a bill based on it was introduced.

The legislation would authorize the federal government to pay up to 37½ per cent of conservation projects.

Mr. Winters told Gordon Graydon (PC—Peel) that contributions will be limited to projects which would not be built unless the federal government participated.

Replying to other questions, the minister said the legislation will simply extend to all the provinces the conditions of joint projects such as have been carried out with Ontario.

Follwell Welcomes Proposal

He said the provinces had been notified and all had expressed interest. There would be no over-all agreement with the provinces, but each project would be treated on its merits.

Mr. Winters said flood control as well as water conservation would be one of the main features of the legislation.

The government proposal was welcomed by Frank Follwell (L—Hastings South). He said flood control and water conservation go hand in hand. Canada had 238,000 square miles of water within her borders. That should be sufficient even for the greatly-increased population this country could expect, but it would not be unless proper conservation steps were taken.

J. W. Charlton (PC—Brant-Wentworth) said water conservation should be handled by the agriculture department, not by the resources department. The resolution did not mention co-operation within the provinces concerning conservation. The proposed legislation seemed to embrace flood control rather than conservation.

Should be Co-Operation

Earl Catherwood (PC — Haldimand) said conservation should be pursued in co-operation with the provinces. The provinces could handle administration and the federal government co-ordinate developments. "Petty differences" between federal and provincial authorities could be overlooked in conservation co-operation.

H. O. White (PC—Middlesex East) said he does not believe huge dams are vital to conservation. The "place to save water is where it falls." An experiment on one of Ontario's valleys, where all conservation practices short of building a dam were carried out, would prove this point.

Henry Hosking (L—Wellington South) suggested farmers be encouraged to establish ponds in low-lying swampy areas and to plant trees near the ponds. The trees would pick up the moisture and spread it over the farms.

C. W. Hodgson (PC—Victoria, Ont.), a lumber dealer, said that he tries to plant more trees than he cuts in any year. It was time the government launched a similar reforestation program. He suggested something be done to restock beavers, which built valuable ponds.

GETS KEMPTVILLE POST

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture Minister Thomas announced Thursday that R. E. Class has been appointed head of the horticultural division of the Kemptville agricultural school. Mr. Class joined the staff of the school's horticultural division in 1946. He was born in Elmira, Waterloo county, and was graduated from the Ontario Agricultural College in 1943.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The play in many a bridge contract is too close for comfort. The tricks you need may come in only by the skin of your teeth. As in the case of the tournament deal shown here:

NORTH
♥A 7 4
♦A K J 10 5 3
♣K 7

WEST
♠J 9 4
♥10 9 8
♦8 6 2
♣A 9 5 2

EAST
♠K 7
♥K Q 3
♦Q 9
♣Q 10 8 6 4 3

SOUTH
♠A Q 10 8 5 3
♥J 6 5 2
♣J

At most tables, south became the declarer at a contract of four spades. Although east came in with a bid of two clubs somewhere along the line, in most cases west elected to lead a heart.

When dummy hand goes down it looks as if there will be at least two heart losers, a club loser, and a trump loser. This means that one of these tricks must be saved in some manner.

It broke the hearts of those who did not play it expertly. So, see what must be done to take the ten needed tricks. With the heart opening lead, there is not much room for maneuvering.

With the king and jack and nine of trumps in the hands of opponents, it is not likely to prevent a loser in spades. So, plan to save a club or a heart loser.

Dummy won the first trick with the heart ace. A trump was successfully finessed when east played low and south took it with the queen. The ace of spades was cashed and east's king dropped. West then had a good trump.

But dummy took two top diamonds and was lucky enough to drop the east queen. Diamond jack was led and it was lucky that east, who was out of diamonds, was also out of trumps.

On the diamond jack, south sluffed his lone club. Diamond ten was led and south sluffed a heart on it. In this way, opponents get their trump trick and two heart tricks; no more.

Where the west opening lead was the club ace followed by a heart, the final result for south was even better. He got a heart sluff on the club king and two heart sluffs on diamonds. Things happen that way.

CRUSHED TO DEATH

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Ten-year-old Donald Lacroix was crushed to death Thursday night when he fell among machinery at a Canadian National Railways roundhouse in Windsor. It is believed the boy was playing near the machinery when it was put into operation.

PLEADS GUILTY IN THEFT

OTTAWA (CP)—Harold Welch, 30, of Toronto, former office manager of the Singer Sewing Machine Company's branch here, was remanded for sentence Thursday for one week when he pleaded guilty to the theft of $3,000 from the firm. Welch was arrested in Toronto Dec. 2 after the firm's New York auditors discovered the shortages.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SATURDAY, FEB. 7, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Generous outlook if you keep everything under control. Moderation where it is needed, and daring when occasion calls for that method.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—There are periods when quiet reflection and calmly lanned program are more effective than running ahead. Details are important.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—May be trials, irritable instances that could dominate your day if you let them. Whole day's structure must be considered in planning.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Advantageous for professional and skilled endeavors if you will lend your creative talents. Good time for mingling artistic and very practical matters.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Indications call for adroit thinking and managing. Take orders graciously. Don't frown on others'. suggestions, we all can learn.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — More than ordinary care advised making agreements. Seek advice when in doubt, but keep on the job.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Influences are such that you can be mistaken, confused if not careful. Indications say others will work with you if you show right spirit, appreciation.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Many things are "In the bag" for you clever natives of Scorpio if you use opoprtunities rightly. Don't duck important, urgent duties.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—More than other members of the Zodiac, you are favored by arrangement of planetary configurations now. Benefits building all day. Manufacturing, brokers rate high.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Matters requiring endurance, sound reasoning have new favor. But beware of deception and don't be a party to enmesh yourself.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Practical results possible through your own concentrated effort and ability. Good day for working on improvements, paving way for future gains.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Extremes, or carelessness, can bring adverse results that could have been beneficial otherwise. Common sense methods in all things best.

YOU BORN TODAY: Generally on quiet side. Congenial, love a good time. This sector is endowed with wonderful possibilities. Develop your many gifts. Aptitude for finances, literature, inventive work. Birthdate: Jos. V. Connolly, famed newspaperman; Chas. Dickens, noted novelist; "Babe Ruth, immortal baseball star.

CLAIM PEAK CONQUERED

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—A five-man Chilean mountain-climbing team claimed Wednesday it conquered 23,08?-foot Mt. Aconcagua, loftiest peak in the Andes. Japanese, Brazilian and Argentine teams also have claimed they have reached its summit during the last month. Aconcagua is in Argentine territory just east of the Chilean border.

Cheese and Sugar Beet Industries Want Protection

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Agricultural Council Thursday asked for legislation to protect the province's cheese and sugar beet industries from foreign competition and its butter industry from synthetic products.

In separate resolutions at the closing sessions of the organization's convention, delegates voted to ask the federal government to take "whatever steps are necessary to stop foreign refined sugar produced by cheap native labor from ruining Ontario's beet sugar industry" and recommended an increase in the amount of duty paid on the importation of cheese to Canada in order to protect the dairy industry of this country."

Another resolution asked the provincial government to pass immediate legislation prohibiting manufacture and sale of synthetic dairy products in Ontario other than margarine and that margarine be put on a quota basis, with oils originating in Ontario only.

Want Royal Commission

A resolution aimed at better conditions for butter producers asked that the federal government appoint a royal commission to investigate the regulations affecting the shipment of feed grains and their prices and values in Western Canada and the costs to feeders in the East. The resolution claimed that the cost of butter production bears little relation to its price and that the price of western grains is advancing daily.

The council recommended that the Ontario government consider seriously whether or not the Children's Aid Societies are accomplishing the purpose set out for them in respect to the improvement of children.

The resolution suggested that the cost of children's aid is too high and that the care given to wards of the societies is much superior to what a great many ratepayers are able to give their own children.

ACCOUNTANT DIES

TORONTO (CP)—L. H. Goettler, Toronto accountant, died Wednesday. He was born and educated in Stratford, coming to Toronto 45 years ago. His widow, Louise Moore, food columnist of the Telegram, survives, along with one daughter, Mrs. W. G. Cosser of Val d'Or, Que.

REJECTS PLOWING MATCH

TORONTO (CP)—Mayor Allan Lamport said Wednesday he'll be too busy to participate in a special competition for Ontario's mayors at this year's international plowing match. He declined a challenge by Mayor Bernadette Smith of Woodstock. This year's plowing competitions take place Oct. 6-8 in the area between Cobourg and Port Hope.

Duke of Norfolk in Charge Of Planning for Coronation

By SIDNEY WEILAND

LONDON (Reuters) — A millionaire duke who lost a rebel ancestor to the executioner's axe under Queen Elizabeth I is in charge of planning the Coronation.

Owner of a string of titles going back to the beginnings of English nobility, the 44-year-old Duke of Norfolk, earl marshal of England, will climax a year of preparations when he leads the Queen into Westminster Abbey June 2.

By hereditary right, as England's premier duke and earl, the earl marshal is the organizing brain behind all high state occasions whether coronations, royal weddings or funerals.

The Howards, family name of the dukes of Norfolk, rose to power in the Middle Ages. The first duke was assassinated as he lay in his tent at the battle of Bosworth in 1485. The fourth duke was beheaded in 1572 on suspicion of being the lover of Mary, Queen of Scots.

For centuries, the dukes of Norfolk have carried the gold baton which gives the family the privilege to plan the pageantry of the great occasions of the realm. The title of earl marshal has been theirs since 1672.

It was then that King Charles II decreed that for all time the duke of Norfolk was to be "the next and immediate officer under Us for determining and ordering all matters touching arms, ensigns, nobility, honor and chivalry."

Nine Titles

The present duke, Bernard Marmaduke Fitzalan-Howard, 16th in the line of succession, has inherited large estates and high honors.

Nine titles follow his name. The squire of 49,000 acres and four estates, his fortune was once estimated at $42,000,000.

Seventeen years ago, at 27, he organized the funeral of King George V. The next year, he prepared the coronation of King George VI. In 1947, he planned the wedding of the then Princess Elizabeth to the Duke of Edinburgh, and last February he walked before the gun-carriage which carried King George VI to his grave.

A devout Roman Catholic, the duke's duties make him one of the chief figures in the Coronation rites of a Queen who by law must be a Protestant.

But when he walks with the Queen towards the archbishop of Canterbury in Westminster Abbey, the duke will wear on his tunic the blue and gold order of Pius IX, awarded to him by the Pope.

As earl marshal, the duke began making plans for the Coronation soon after the funeral of the late King. To him falls the duty of issuing invitations, arranging the long processional drive through London after the ceremony and, arranging for press, radio and television coverage.

Seating Difficult

One of the most difficult problems he has had to solve was how to choose which peers were to be given seats in the abbey. Every peer has a right to be present but restrictions of space make it impossible this year to accommodate them all.

Peers were offered two free seats in stands outside the abbey if they gave up their claim to be inside. The names of those who did not take advantage of this offer were personally drawn by lot by the earl marshal himself.

The earl marshal's duties are unpaid, though he gets an annual honorarium of £20, a grant ordered in 1483.

Recently, the present earl marshal was swept into controversy by an edict issued from his office barring television cameras from showing the actual crowning of the Queen. Parliamentary and newspaper protests led him and his officials to bow to public opinion. Televiewers now will see the actual Coronation, though not the whole of the ceremony.

The duke lives with his wife and four small daughters in an 800-year-old Norman castle at Arundel in Sussex.

FOUNDATION ASKS FUNDS

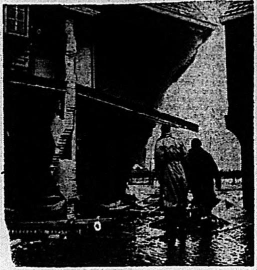
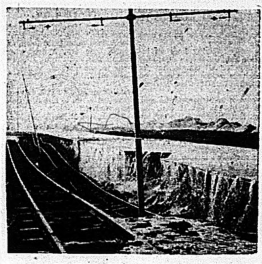
Holland and Belgium



This house at Maassluis, smashed and left in the wake of the hurricane which touched off floods in The Netherlands, is only one of a great many to suffer similar fate, leaving over 125,000 homeless and 1,269 dead. Already thousands of homes and farm buildings will have to be entirely replaced as over one-sixth of the country's total area is under water. — Central Press Canadian.



A miniature Niagara Falls is formed between Heist and Zeebrugge, Belgium, as flood waters drain from higher ground into a collapsed culvert that gave way with the railroad it carried during hurricane. Although Belgium has been hard hit by floods, her fatality figures show only 14 dead. — Central Press Canadian.

Second Man On The Ticket

By Edwin Lanham

CHAPTER XI

Miss Hattie let a bean fall from her hand, and I actually heard the sound when it struck the tabletop. It was her card I had won with, the card I had traded her. I was unable to meet her eyes.

There was a dead silence, during which the attendant collected for the next game. Miss Hattie sat stiffly, looking at her card, and I knew how she felt, like a man at the track who had been touted off the favorite and watched his first choice win going away.

The first number called appeared on two of my cards, but I did not cover the spaces with beans; I was afraid I might win again. When someone on the far end of the firehouse had bingo, I picked up my three tickets, went to the prize table and claimed the reading lamp.

Miss Hattie was watching me. When I turned, with the lamp in my hands, I saw her drop her eyes swiftly to her bingo card. I went back to my seat and waited until the end of the game, then I cleared my throat and said, "There's not a thing over there that I can put into my suitcase, and I'm leaving town in the morning. It would be a great favor to me, ma'am, if you would allow me to make you a present of this lamp."

Miss Hattie gave me a pale, reluctant smile. "That's very kind of you, but I couldn't take it. I really couldn't."

I set the lamp on the table in front of Miss Hattie. "I'm just going to walk away and leave it there if you don't," I said.

She still hesitated, but she was beaming. "All right, but I'm going to pay you for it. You played three times, didn't you, and three cards each time. That's 75 cents."

"Now, please," I said. "I had 75 cents' worth of fun out of it."

But she fished in her handbag and brought out a half dollar and a quarter. She held the coins out to me, but I shook my head.

"But I insist this time," Miss Hattie said. Her smile was warm. "I absolutely insist." She reached over and dropped the coins on the table with my pile of change, then she suddenly picked them up again and put them in her handbag. She snapped the bag shut and it closed no tighter than her lips.

"I see," she said. "You're that Mr. Mason, aren't you? Come on, Ginny, we're going home."

Ginny Perkins looked at me, mover her shoulders in a shrug and took her great-aunt's arm. A fireman said, "Good night, Miss Hattie," and a chain reaction of "good nights" followed Miss Hattie and Ginny to the door.

I watched them walk out of the firehouse, and it was not until I turned to retrieve the lamp and my change that I saw why it was. There among the nickels and dimes was the Win With Warburton campaign button.

I set off after the car, carrying the lamp. By the time I reached the corner of the street they lived on, the lights had gone on in the white cottage. I walked along by the picket fence to the gate, slipped through into the garden and sat down on the bench under the trellis. After about five minutes a light went on in an upstairs bedroom, and a moment later the front door was opened cautiously and Ginny appeared. I went to meet her and she whispered, shaking her head, "I warned you about that button."

"I know," I said. "Look, will you take this lamp, anyhow, and put it on a table somewhere. I'll leave a note with it."

I scribbled the note on the back of an envelope:

A peace offering from an incurable bungler. Please accept my apologies on all counts, but fix the blame where it belongs, on me, and not on Governor Warburton.

I gave it to Ginny and she said, "All right, I'll put it with the lamp. But I'm afraid it won't do any good, Mr. Mason. I think she's made up her mind to tell."

"In Heaven's Name!" I said. "what does she know?"

"If she won't talk to you about it, certainly I can't, "Ginny said.

"You know what it is then?"

"I'm her grandniece," Ginny said. "We're pretty close, Mr. Mason."

At last, I thought, we had got to the bottom of it. Hattie Perkins was the custodian of the Governor's skeleton, and she was planning to rattle its bones on Warburton Day. I said quietly, "Ginny, if your great-aunt plans to tell it eventually, whatever it is, why can't you tell me now? Can't you give me a break?"

Her fingers lightly touched my hand. "Now you know I'd love to give you a break, Mr. Mason, but you know I can't."

In the starlight I could see the oval of her face, and there was a glint of light in her blond hair from the window overhead. She removed her hand quickly, as if just realizing it was resting on mine, and I heard her vibrant laugh, "Goodness," she said. "I think I'd better go in."

"Not yet," I said, and took her hands as she was about to rise. She sat down again and whispered, "Aunt Hattie might look out and see us."

"It's dark out here," I said. "She couldn't see."

She raised her face and light from the window illuminated it. Her lips parted slightly as she gazed up at the stars, and they were parted in a little gasp when I kissed her. But she remained quite still, her eyes closed and her lips warm against mine. Then her hands came up from her lap and held my arms, and she turned her head away.

"Ginny," I whispered, "you're beautiful."

"My goodness," Ginny said. "Mr. Mason, I only met you this afternoon."

"You were beautiful this afternoon, too," I said.

CHAPTER XII

"Now, Mr. Mason," Ginny's soft voice said." Just because I'm a girl from a quiet little town, and you've been around everywhere and all that, don't think I haven't been to the movies, at least. I know all about city slickers."

"I've always had a yen for small-town girls," I said. "I've always had a yen to live in a small town myself."

"You'd find it pretty dull," she said. "There's nothing to do. Take tonight. Bingo! My gosh, what an exciting evening."

"I thought it was fun," I said.

She shrugged. "And the biggest thing since I can remember will be Warburton Day."

My worries returned. "Ginny, if we only knew what to expect, so that we could be prepared. Can't you give me a hint what your aunt has on her mind?"

"So that's it," Ginny said.

"That's what?"

"A kiss in the starlight, under the rose trellis," Ginny said. "Small-town girl melts and tells all. Was that it, Mr. Mason?"

"Definitely not," I said, and tried to kiss her.

But she drew away saying, "But I'm not telling all. I'm not telling anything."

"Ginny," I said, "that wasn't why I kissed you. It never entered my head. Believe me." I took one of her hands. "The starlight and the roses are pretty powerful, but I'm the one who melted."

I got my arm around her and this time she did not resist. What I had said was not far from the truth; I was pretty well melted. It was a long, exciting moment under the rose trellis, and was interrupted when the light in the upstairs bedroom went off and Ginny jumped to her feet and moved quickly away, toward the door. I followed.

Under the overhanging of the eaves she turned and whispered, "If she looked out the window she would see us there."

"But she can't see us here."

"Now that's enough," Ginny whispered. "There are lots of stars and lots of roses and I might melt after all. Good night, Mr. Mason."

"Wait," I said.

But she had opened the door and light came brightly through. "Are you really leaving in the morning?" she asked.

"Yes."

"But you're coming back Wednesday, aren't you?"

"I'll see you at the dance."

I saw a faint smile on her lips. "Do you know Clyde McDonald?"

"Yes."

"He's going to stay with us Wednesday night," she said.

"Ginny," I said, "what are you getting at?"

"Getting at?" Her blue eyes opened wide. "What do you mean?"

"Clyde McDonald as a topic of conversation simply isn't on the agenda for tonight," I said.

"I was only curious," she said. "After all, he's staying here Wednesday night. Is he good-looking?"

I shrugged. "They say he goes for blondes."

Ginny laughed, said, "Good night, Mr. Mason," and closed the door.

I stood a moment in the darkness, looking at the closed door, then I walked slowly back to the hotel. I thought that Ginny Perkins was a little arch, and that possibly she worked overtime at being girlish, but these were the sort of critical reservations a man makes when he is interested in a girl; they were faults that would change with time....

The plane came in low, cleared a roof just west of the administration building of the Municipal Airport, and braked on the runway in late morning sunlight. It had been another night with practically no sleep.

I had checked the Governor's schedule the night before in Hydetown and decided to meet the train in Jackson and give a full report, and I was weary and depressed as I took a taxi from the airport to the Union Station. The clock hands in the station stood at well past 11 o'clock when I arrived, and the lack of crowd showed that Governor Warburton must already have come through but I went into the station to investigate.

The special train had not yet been shunted into a siding. I walked back to the Governor's private car and swung aboard. I found no one there, and went on to the work car ahead, where I heard the clatter of typewriters and the thumping noise of the mimeographing machine.

As I entered the car a sprightly voice said, Well, Kit Carson, what's doing up ahead? Any Indian signs?" Lucy Strawn sat at her desk by the window, with sunlight on her warm brown hair.

"There are Indian signs but I can't read them," I said. "Where's everybody?"

"Everybody's at the hotel," Lucy said. "But here's anybody. What did you find out?"

I leaned against her desk. "Nothing."

"Nothing at all?" Lucy frowned. "Look, Roy, this is serious."

"I took it seriously," I said. "What I mean is I didn't find anything that makes any sense only that the Governor's old schoolteacher has graded him pretty low. She's not coming to the reception."

"Why not?"

"I don't know why not. Bill over at the hotel, too?"

"Yes."

"I think I'd better go over," I said. "Where's the hotel?"

"I'll show you, Lucy said. "I want to be in on this."

PIPERS PLAN TO EXPAND

ST. THOMAS (CP)—The skirl of the pibroch will be heard across Elgin county, if plans of the St. Thomas pipe band materialize.

At a meeting Tuesday the band decided to enlarge, with an objective of 30 pipers recruited throughout the county. At present 14 beginners are enrolled in the piping classes.

FINDS MOTHER VICTIM

MARSHFIELD, Eng. (AP) — Frederick George Bond told coroner's jury Wednesday someone was blown against his automobile on a dark windy night last week. The victim proved to be Bond's 80-year-old mother. She died Saturday night. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

RED PROTESTS

ROME (AP) — Italian Communist boss Palmiro Togliatti demanded Wednesday night that the government protest to the United States against President Eisenhower's decision to deneutralize the island of Formosa. Declaring the move "opened a new war front against the Chinese People's Republic and aggravated the international situation." Togliatti put his demand in the form of a parliamentary question to Premier Alcide de Gasperi, who almost certainly will reject it.

DOG BITES BOY

The milkman slips on your icy walk. Your dog bites someone or knocks a child over. A week-end guest slips on a scatter rug. You may hit another player with a golf ball. Everyone knows how easy it is to have an accident and in the eyes of the law, the person responsible for the accident is going to pay.

The injured person cannot only claim for medical treatment and loss of income but for compensation for pain and suffering and it is not unusual to find claims being awarded by the courts for amounts like $30,000 and $50,000.

If you have never inquired about the cost of liability insurance you will be surprised how low the premiums are and your estate will be much more secure with our insurance to protect you.

Saves Baby

Fluffy, the family cat, is credited with saving the life of Jimmy, seven-month-old son of Mrs. Charles Gledhill of Cornwall, Ont. Fluffy set up such a racket in the basement one night that Mrs. Gledhill got up to investigate. On her way downstairs she glanced into her baby's room and found Jimmy almost strangled with the bedclothes. When the baby was safe, the cat became quiet. — (CP Photo.)

Dollar Minimum Hourly Wage For Men and Women Is Asked By Ontario Labor Federation

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Against the advice of their leaders, delegates to the Ontario Federation of Labor Friday asked for legislation asking for a minimum hourly wage of $1 for both men and women.

Executive members said the $1 figure was 25 cents an hour more than the minimum wage in the United States and that it ignored economic conditions in some industries.

The resolutions committee had submitted a resolution asking for a 75-cent minimum. The meeting voted to send it back to the committee with instructions to increase the minimum to $1 an hour. The amended resolution was to be presented to the convention today.

Report Low Sales

Some members reported wages as low as 35 cents an hour for women workers in industry. The minimum wage for female workers in metropolitan areas now is $16.80 a week and as low as $11.50 a week for inexperienced women workers in rural areas. There is no minimum for men.

In recommendng the 75-cent hourly minimum, the federation executive said the worst employers wouldn't dare to pay wages as low as the existing minimum and that no act was better than the act as it now stands. Some delegates claimed some employers are using the present minimum as a standard.

Henry Rhodes, Ontario regional director of the Canadian Congress of Labor, proposed the $1 minimum. However he conceded the 75-cent figure would be of great assistance.

Other resolutions passed by the 121,000-member body included one calling on the province to encourage co-operative housing groups and also by aiding families building their own homes to meet interest payments on mortgages. They also asked for a province subsidized low-cost housing plan.

C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steel Workers of America (CIO-CCL), told delegates in an address that the Ontario government and employers are gambling with the limbs and lives of workers in the province by holding back on an adequate accident prevention program.

The union leader claimed employers are deliberately concealing from the workmen's compensation board the number of accidents resulting in lost time in order to hold down the rate they are charged as their share of compensation costs.

The number of accidents is mounting each year and deaths from industrial accidents now exceed the toll from cancer and tuberculosis on a per capita basis, he said.

Donald MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of the CCL, told delegates to present a united front at the ballot box. He did not mention a political party, but the federation has repeatedly declared the CCF to be its political arm.

George Burt, president of the federation and Canadian head of the United Auto Workers, told the 400 delegates that organized labor is finding it increasingly difficult to win wage increases since the cost-of-living began to decline.

Justice Gale Gives Gauge For Intoxication

BRAMPTON (CP)—Mr. Justice G. A. Gale gave a capsule formula Friday for gauging the degree of intoxication of drinking drivers.

Addressing the jury at the trial of George Kaitting, 23, who was convicted of manslaughter, Mr. Justice Gale gave the following direction:

"After one drink of whisky, it's not an offence under the criminal code, but civil negligence," he said. "After two whiskies, it's dangerous driving, after three or four drinks, the man is in a state of intoxication and is guilty of manslaughter in event of a fatality."

Kaitting was sentenced to two years determinate less a day and one year indeterminate in the Ontario reformatory.

He was the driver of a car involved in a collision Nov. 26, fatally injuring Samuel Stubbs, 74, of Bolton.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: The remnants of the storm which swept snow and mild weather across Northern Ontario is slowly disintegrating this morning in the James Bay area. The leading edge of the cooler air which moved through Ontario on Friday has stalled along the Appalachian mountains and now is producing a moderately wide band of rain. This rain is expected to move a bit westward into eastern Ohio, New York state and eastern Lake Ontario. But as yet there are no indications that it will affect anymore than just the extreme east of the province.

Future of Million-Square-Mile Area In Egypt Will Soon be Clarified

CAIRO (Reuters) British Ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson and Premier Mohamed Naguib talked about the Sudanese problem at a six-hour meeting Friday—and the future of the 1,000,000-square-mile territory "will be clarified very soon," an Egyptian spokesman said afterwards.

A joint statement issued Friday night said the meeting "discussed the two governments' proposals concerning the future of the Sudan."

The future of the Sudan is the main point of dispute between the two countries. It has been ruled jointly by them for 54 years, but both now are agreed that it should have self-government.

Main stumbling block is over the powers the British governor-general will have during the period of transition from internal self-government to the time when the Sudanese can choose their international status — whether union with Egypt, or Britain or neither.

Britain wants the governor-general to have special protective powers over the backward people in southern Sudan. Egypt is opposed to this.

Before the Sudan discussion started, Naguib spoke at the inauguration of new headquarters for the Liberation Rally, which replaces the political parties dissolved under the new regime.

"Today the drums of danger are sounding everywhere. You can see for yourselves the conflict of states in the international arena that threatens war. While this threat persists we still find in both parts of our valley (the Sudan and the Suez canal zone) an army of occupation. This army of occupation aims at dividing us into separate parts and in turn breaking these separate parts into still smaller parts," he said, asking:

"If this is not a danger, what is danger?"

COUNTRY'S BUTTER STOCKPILE LEADS TO BITTER DEBATE

Minister and Traders In Hot Dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner and Canada's commercial butter traders appear to have squared off in a battle concerning the country's butter stockpile.

The traders say the supply and price situation appears to be critical, more so in the East than in the West. No offerings of butter were made on the Canadian commodity exchange at Montreal Friday and Montreal and Quebec wholesalers say they have supplies only for about four or six days.

The trade wants the government to release at least 8,000,000 pounds of the 30,000,000 pounds of butter it has in stock.

The agriculture minister, on the other hand, has said that the trade has 15,000,000 pounds of butter in store and will be getting 10,000,000 monthly from farmers until May for sale across Canada.

Mr. Gardiner has said government stocks will be released at 62 cents a pound wholesale to stabilize the consumer price when necessary.

Using Own Discretion

He added:

"The government is using its own discretion with regard to when this butter will be released to the trade."

Supplies and prices of butter appear to vary across the country.

In Montreal a few independent retailers have increased the price to 70 cents a pound, though the general retail price varies between 66 and 68 cents.

Lorne Reddick, president of the Ontario Creamery Association, said at Kemptville that the wholesale price of creamery butter has increased one cent a pound over the government's price of 62 cents—if it were selling.

Butter suppliers to the retail trade in the Ottawa area, he added, have reached the "last step before rationing."

At Toronto, a butter scarcity is anticipated during the next two weeks. The Ontario agriculture department said there will be a serious shortage if no federal butter stocks are available next week.

Supplies Adequate

On the Prairies, where butter production continues the year round, supplies were reported adequate and the price stabilized. But in Vancouver, a packing plant spokesman said some distributors are borrowing butter from others to meet commitments.

This unique supply and price situation has developed at a time when the general production and stockpile would be normally sufficient to meet all of Canada's needs.

The commercial trade currently holds about 14,000,000 pounds in stocks and the federal government about 30,000,000. Current production likely will produce about 10,000,000 pounds for February.

Volcanic Island Rising Out of Sea

TOKYO (Reuters) — Another volcanic island is reported rising out of the sea near the recently formed Myojin reefs, about 200 miles south of Tokyo.

In the eruption which threw up reefs last September, a Japanese scientific research ship was lost with 31 aboard.

United States May Demand More Aid from U.N. Allies In Carrying on Korean War

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The United States today was reported shaping up an emphatic call on its UN Allies for more help in Korea.

Diplomatic sources here familiar with U. S. policy indicated such a move would be part of the new grand strategy being worked out by the Eisenhower administration for ending the Korean conflict.

The reports circulated here shortly after the UN released a survey saying that a quick $1,750,000,000 aid-and-investment program is necessary to save war-ravaged South Korea. It added that black marketing and illegal profiteering are rife in the embattled country.

There also are indications that diplomatic experts are studying a possible blockade of Red China. Some sources said, however, there is little chance of such a move although there may be a widening of economic restrictions now in effect.

Some UN members would not approve a blockade and there is doubt in other circles that it would be completely effective.

The U. S. took over general council direction of the Korean war in 1950 shortly after the security council decided the UN must meet the Communist aggression. Britain, Canada, Australia and a number of other countries answered appeals by Washington and by UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie for help but since then there has been almost no increase in military aid for the UN.

The U. S., in fact, has turned down some military aid because it was offered in small units and the cost of equipping, training and transporting them would have been far more than it was worth to the UN. It also has not accepted the Nationalist Chinese offer of three divisions.

The U. S. government made it known last year in the UN assembly in Paris that it desired more help in Korea. Almost nothing happened, for other countries answered they were doing all they could.

But the new administration is laying down in straight terms what it expects the UN partners to do.

The UN survey on south Korean needs said that outside investments of about $1,350,000,000 in industry, fisheries, agriculture, reforestation and transport plus $400,000,000 in outright relief would be necessary to put Korea on its feet.

Gulf of Georgia Scene of Crash Say Authorities

VANCOUVER (CP)—It was established Friday that an RCAF Dakota aircraft missing for 10 days crashed into the Gulf of Georgia. Seven men were aboard.

RCAF technicians at their Sea Island base near here identified a wheel that floated ashore at Lasqueti Island, 45 miles northwest of here, as coming from the Dakota.

Other pieces of wreckage, a plywood floorboard and part of a fuselage, were similar to those of a Dakota. They were found on Lasqueti and on Quadra Island, 50 miles to the north.

Added to the evidence is an oil slick found Tuesday 40 miles south of Lasqueti near Galiano Island, near Nanaimo.

The plane disappeared minutes after taking off from Vancouver for a training trip into the interior.

Hit With Terrific Force

The RCAF said the wreckage indicated the plane hit the waters of the gulf with terrific force, lending strength to a theory that the aircraft iced suddenly while climbing for height.

On board were: FO W. L. MacKenzie, navigator, Galt; PO J. A. Pollock, Noranda, Que.; FO A. Coucham, Vancouver; Cpl. S. C. Herman, Vancouver, and army Cpl. G. F. Vickers, Vancouver. Coucham and Vickers were passengers.

Korean Civilian 'In Bad Way' Says Bill Boss

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — United Nations relief agencies in Korea haven't tackled their problems realistically, Bill Boss of the Canadian Press, dean of Korean war correspondents, told the Canadian Managing Editors' Conference here Friday.

"Most of what we the correspondents see is spending on station wagons and movie cameras, and there is a very impressive public relations organization," Boss said. Meanwhile the Korean civilian "is in a very poor way."

UN relief agencies have a $275,000,000 budget for civilian relief in Korea, he said, and they have been at work there for about a year.

The people of Seoul are merely existing and doing whatever black marketing they can, Boss said. The city had about 1,000,000 population before the war, now it has 250,000.

Boss told the conference that Canadian soldiers in Korea were members of the best-treated army in history, and that the professional soldiers there now are the best Canada's got.

He said in answer to a question that the Canadians whose action he's covered for the last 2½ years got every comfort to which they were reasonably entitled.

In answer to just how to keep Canadians in Korea happy, Boss said simply "Plug the old line, write letters, let them know they're not being forgotten."

Relief Supplies Start Flowing To Flood Victims

TORONTO (CP)—Relief supplies are flowing from Canada to European flood victims, Red Cross officials said Friday.

A plane load that left Montreal included 1,500 blankets and 150 army mattresses. Another plane took more mattresses and a large quantity of shoes.

In addition, the Red Cross, buying and shipping the supplies on behalf of the national flood relief committee, has bought 5,000 pillows. It plans to send 3,000 large vacuum bottles to hold soup or hot drinks.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada donated $7,500 to overseas flood relief.

Collect Donations

Across the country, preparations went forward for the collection of donations from Canadian citizens by organizations which will channel the gifts into the national fund. It has been announced that Canadians can help best by cash donations, rather than by giving clothing and supplies. Cash contributions will be accepted at all branches of chartered banks in Canada, the Red Cross said.

However, the United Church of Canada is arranging to ship five tons of used clothing to The Netherlands. The church already has allocated $10,000 to flood relief.

The Canadian Red Cross has bought 50 outboard motors for shipment to Holland to be used for rescue work in the flood devastated areas. Half of them are 25-horsepower and the other half 10-horsepower.

Appeal Is Filed In Libel Action

TRENTON (Special) — Victor R. Ryan, who was awarded $1,000 and costs in a recent defamatory libel action against Nolan J. Sisson and Gwyn Hopkin-Morgan, publisher and editor respectively of the Courier-Advocate, Trenton's bi-weekly newspaper, has been served notice that the case is being appealed, he told the Ontario Intelligencer today.

The libel suit, which attracted wide attention when it was tried at the Hastings County Court House in Belleville recently, arose from two editorials dealing with Trenton town council, one of which openly criticized Ryan, who was then [illegible]cillor.

The case was presided [illegible] by Mr. Justice Danis. It also marked the first time that a woman had served on jury duty here.

A meeting to choose a candidate to contest the Toronto suburban seat in the next Dominion general election will be held Feb. 10.

EMERGENCY ACT NOT NEEDED NOW SAYS OPPOSITION

Drew Launches 5-Hour Attack Against Measure

OTTAWA (CP) — Spokesmen for the opposition groups in the Commons Friday criticized a government request for extension of the emergency powers given it following the outbreak of hostilities in Korea.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, launched a five-hour attack against a requested one-year extension of the Emergency Powers Act of 1951, similar in many respects to the all-inclusive, dormant War Measures Act.

He said the government has no need now for powers not defined by law.

Angus MacInnis, acting CCF leader, said his party had supported the last extension of the emergency powers in the hope the government would use them to combat inflation by controlling prices. The government had "let the people suffer" and there was no real reason to renew the powers for another year.

Will Listen to Reasons

However, the CCF would listen to government reasons for seeking the extension before deciding how it would vote.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said the government would have to make a good case before his party would support the extension.

The government sat silent through most of the debate. Justice Minister Garson, explaining the government's silence, said the motion before the House asked the Speaker to leave the chair so that a committee of all members could consider a resolution to a bill extending the emergency powers.

Not Much to Say

Mr. Garson said there was not much the government could say on a simple motion for the Speaker to leave the chair.

The opposition disagreed with that interpretation of the rules and debated the resolution itself.

Neither side conceded the other was right before the adjournment.

Mr. Drew said that if war should come the government could revive the War Measures Act. Under existing conditions it did not need powers undefined by law. The emergency Powers Act gave the government power to do practically anything by order-in-council without approval of Parliament.

Govt. Uses Right

Within the last year the government had used the act to do things that should be covered by law. Orders were passed providing for the screening of aircraft pilots and of crews on ships plying the Great Lakes. The screenings were aimed at preventing Communists from holding certain jobs.

The government, he said, claimed that communism or communist activities could not be defined by Powers Act to punish Canadians for an offence which the government said it could not define.

He argued that specific laws should be passed to deal with communism and communist activities; laws that would define the offence and give the individual the right of appeal to the courts.

Dulles in Belgium Buoyed by West Europe's Belief in Common Army

BRUSSELS (AP) John Foster Dulles arrived in Belgium today to continue his survey of European defence planning—buoyed by finding that West Europe's leaders generally believe a common army offers the most effective guarantee of peace and security.

President Eisenhower's plane brought the U. S. secretary of state and foreign aid chief Harold Stassen here after a brief flight from flood-devastated Holland.

They were welcomed by Belgian Foreign Minister Paul van Zeeland.

In a statement before he left Holland, Dulles told newspaper men that he and Stassen "have been encouraged to find that here, as well as in the other capitals we have visited, the concept of a European Defence Community within the framework of the Atlantic Community is regarded by your leaders and your people, as it is by ours, as the most effective way to ensure peace and security for us all."

The secretary's tour of West Europe capitals was planned to spur action on the lagging European Army plan. He thus far has visited Rome, Paris, London, Bonn and The Hague and plans to continue on Sunday to Luxembourg before returning to Washington.

En route to the Belgian capital Dulles flew over some of the inundated areas of The Netherlands to complete his survey of damage caused by the week-end flood and tidal disaster. He plans a report to Eisenhower and the U. S. Congress on what the United States can do to relieve suffering and enable Holland to pull its weight in the continental defence plan.

Dulles wants definite progress toward ratification of the six-country army plan by Arpil 1. Thus far, none of the participating countries—France, Italy, West Germany Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg has ratified the project.

One of the secretary's chief concerns both here and in Holland obviously is the impact of the North sea flood on the defence plan. The economies of both countries have been seriously damaged by the disaster.

Dutch Toil To Plug Dikes Before High Spring Tides

Unofficial Three-Country Death Toll Reaches 1,941

By HENK KERSTING

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Flood waters receded steadily today from the disaster regions of Holland as thousands of workers toiled to rebuild the little kingdom's riddled dikes.

The sorrowing country's death toll from the storm that hit neighboring Belgium and also Britain mounted to 1,372 as the sea washed up several more bodies in the stricken southwestern provinces. Hardest hit was Goeree-Overflakkee Island with 433 dead.

The unofficial three-country death toll rose to 1,941. Britain counted 546 dead and Belgium 23.

Work on Breaks in Walls

In Britain nearly 7,000 troops and thousands of volunteers worked today on breaks in sea and river walls along a 200-mile stretch of the country's battered east coast. They raced against the possibility of further damage during the next big tides, due in a week.

A government spokesman said Friday that nearly half the 500 gaps have been filled.

Belgian experts predicted that it will take two or three months to pump flood water from the stricken Antwerp area. Some 40,000 acres have been flooded and 4,000 cattle drowned in that region, the hardest hit in the country.

Filling Breaks Bigger Task

Filling the breaks in The Netherlands' dikes was the biggest task facing an army of emergency workers.

Tholen Island, where a big dike threatened today to burst near St. Annaland, and Renesse, in Schouwen, were the most critical spots.

Hollanders in dire distress and misery still held out on water-encircled sand dunes on Schouwen-Duiveland Island. They were without public services and probably without food and medicine.

The government said they and others in a similar plight would be removed by Tuesday. The mammoth evacuation operation, already tailing off, would then be completed.

Water Pumped Back

Fire trucks from all over Holland have been working alongside regular sea-water pumps in drawing water from land turned into a sodden quagmire and already millions of gallons of flood waters have been pumped back into rivers and canals.

A spokesman of the ministry of social affairs said refugees will be able to return to their repaired homes "within a few months" in most areas. Some, however, will have to wait much longer.

The evacuation of refugees will interfere with municipal elections scheduled for next May, and discussions are going on between government and local authorities to solve the problem.

To Pay Incomes

Meanwhile, the social affairs ministry has announced that a 1945 law for war victims will be extended to flood sufferers. Under it, the government will pay evacuees 90 per cent of their last known incomes.

Jury Awards Damages Totalling $53,000 in Crash

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A Supreme Court jury Friday night awarded damages totalling more than $53,000 in connection with a collision last March in which one 'teen-ager was killed and four injured.

The jury found the Stan Brown Transport Company 100 per cent rsponsible for an accident in which 17-year-old George Anglin was killed and Doreen Ouellette, 18; her sister, Geraldine, 16; Carl Couture, 18, and Gerald Scully, 20, suffered head injuries.

An automobile containing the 'teen-agers collided with the trailer section of a transport truck as the latter was being backed across a highway on Windsor's southern outskirts.

The jury found that James Young "guide man" as the transport was being backed, and William Legg, driver, were negligent in that they attempted an "unreasonable manoeuvre" in the face of approaching traffic. It was found that a light with which Young was said to have attempted to flag down the automobile was not "sufficiently clear."

Four Asphyxiated In Lachine Home; Seven Overcome

MONTREAL (CP) Four persons were asphyxiated and seven others overcome by gas fumes today in a block of houses in suburban Lachine.

Dead are Wilfrid Lalonde, 50, his 40-year-old wife, a son, Jean-Pierre, 7, and daughter Lucille, 8.

Overcome were a Mrs. Lavoie, 68, Claire Lavoie, 26, Real Lavoie, 23, Lucien Belanger, 48, Mrs. L. Belanger, 40, Lucienne Belanger 14, and Claude Belanger, 11.

A Quebec hydro official said it was believed the fumes escaped from a leaking gas main in the street, but the exact cause could not immediately be determined.

First reports said all those overcome responded to inhalator treatment on the scene.

Given 16 Years

TORONTO (CP)—A 16-year penitentiary term was imposed Friday on Raymond Vatour, 23, formerly of Saint John, N. B., convicted of raping a 50-year-old woman Dec. 4 in a laneway in central Toronto.

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer described the case as "shocking" and one of the most brutal to come before the courts in years.

LARGE WOLF KILLED IN HUNTINGDON

Chased for over an hour by dogs, a large wolf finally gave up the ghost and was killed by hunters in Huntingdon township.

Merle Moore blasted the animal with a rifle shot after the lengthy chase. With him were Tom Moore and Ed Colden, of Stirling.

COLLECTIONS NOT AUTHORIZED BY KINGSTON BRANCH

Red Cross officials in Kingston said yesterday that district collections purportedly for European flood relief were not authorized by their organization.

They said that contributions of used clothing were being solicited and that in one instance a truck was being used by canvassers.

The Red Cross had previously announced that clothing was not needed for European victims, an adequate supply being on hand at headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

INFORMATION NOT CORRECT ON PROMOTION

Brigadier Reg. W. Gage, of the Salvation Army, said today that his published promotion to the rank of colonel was in error. The report was published from information that apparently was not correct. It did not come from Brigadier Gage.

Delicious apples were offered at $4 per hamper and at 85c per basket. Top grade McIntosh were 90c per basket. Salomes and C. grade Spys $3 per hamper.

Police Circles Quiet Over Past 24 Hours

Police circles w:re quiet over the past 24 hours with no accidents of a serious nature and but routine occurrences being reported.

At Cannifton Friday night two vehicles were in a sideswipe collision, one going out of control and going through a fence ending up on a front lawn.

James G. Beattie, Hamilton, was northbound when his car was in collision with a southbound vehicle driven by Henry Streets of Plainfield. The Streets' car left the road and went into the fence. No one was injured.

In the city police received a hurry-up call from a man at a local hotel who claimed a case of beer had been stolen from his car. No trace of the missing beer or the party responsible for its disappearance was uncovered by police.

EIGHT-YEAR SENTENCE

TORONTO (CP)—Kustaa Junnila, 42-year-old carpenter, was given an eight-year sentence Friday for manslaughter in the fatal stabbing last Aug. 30 of Lauri Kari. Evidence was that a fight started after Junnila refused to give Kari some beer. Junnila said the stabbing was accidental.

Uranium Ore Discovery Made East of Bancroft

Another old area is making mining news. This time it's uranium near Bancroft, 130 miles northeast of Toronto, says the Northern Miner in this week's edition. Trenching suggests that a considerable, and possibly a large, tonnage grading close to 0.1% uranium oxide can perhaps be developed. Officials consider that is definitely ore grade if sufficient tonnage can be found. This grade or better has been shown in trenches for a length of 500 feet across true widths of 10-15 feet. They are hoping for an overall grade of 0.13% (about $19 gross). Geiger readings suggest substantial additions to length.

It is particularly significant that all averages have been based on chemical assays rather than by Geiger-counter readings.

All evidence shows that the mineral is uranite, although further tests are being made. Mill tests will be made shortly but simple recovery is anticipated.

A feature of the discovery is the uniformity of the vales, which are closely associated with hornblende in a series of north-south basic pegmatite dikes. Although general experience has been rather disappointing with pegmatites, the fact that the mineral appears to be uraninite, the consistency of the values and the good widths stamp the occurrence as being considerably above the average.

The property is located about 20 miles eas by south of Bancroft and lies 8-10 miles off highway No. 28 in Cardiff township, Haliburton county. A road extends within 500 feet or so of the principail showings.

Ralph Neal New President District Chamber of Commerce

Marmora—Ralph Neal as president, Harold Olsen as vice-president, Carl McCoy as secretary, and F. R. Loveless as treasurer, were announced by past president, Alex Fraser as the new executive of the Marmora District Chamber of Commerce, at the monthly dinner meeting held in the Royal Hotel on Thursday evening.

Previous to this, H. W. Sabine named the Board of Directors as, H. Olsen, S. Shaak, F. R. Loveless, T. J. Bateman, C. T. Nicholson, R. Young and V. M. Lynch.

The retiring president, Vaughn Glover in opening the meeting, extended thanks to the leaders of the committees and the membership as a whole for support given in the past year.

Total Receipts

The financial report, as given by F. R. Loveless was received. Total net receipts amounted to $619.52. The year finished with a balance on hand of $53.19.

After installation of the new officers by past president Alex Fraser the new president took the chair. He said he was only prepared as yet to appoint one of the chairmen of committees.

Other Committee Members

He designated Roger Young as chairman of membership and finance and anounced other members of that committee to be F. R. Wells, W. J. Cottrell, L. Begley, D. B. Sanderson, C. R. Whittemore and A. M. Jones.

In response to a letter received from Ritchie Wells, reeve of Marmora Village, R. E. Neal and V. Glover were appointed as committee to meet with the village council to plan for Marmora's part in the drive being undertaken for the funds of the new building that is to be erected in Kingston for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

In a discussion period, Alex Fraser commented upon the progress made by the Safety First Committee.

This week there went into operation the guidance of school children across busy corners and intersection by eight school boys chosen for that purpose.

St. John Ambulance Corps.

Mr. Fraser also introduced a new project, the formation of a St. John Ambulance Brigade. He pointed out that there was a number of employees at the Deloro and Bethlehem Steel plants who had taken the St. John Ambulance course. Everyone, he felt, should be made safety conscious. The two local industries were working well along that way but as was frequently pointed out many accidents happen in the home. Something could doubtless be worked out with regard to a local ambulance corps and it would be a fine thing if the Chamber would sponsor it.

C. T. Nicholson, speaking further on the subject suggested the writing to headquarters of St. John Ambulance for particulars of procedure and also the contacting of the local doctor in connection with the project. The discussion was continued by Roy Frost who spoke in its favor saying he had had experience along that line at Noranda. A committee was appointed to go into the matter to consist of A. F. Fraser, R. G. Walsh, H. Olsen, F. R. Wells, R. Frost and Rev. K. J. Crawford.

H. W. Sabine suggested that the committee get in touch with the village council which had been giving some consideration to the same matter.

The president asked that the committee appointed to go into the matter of an artificial ice rink give a full report at its March meeting and in the meantime meet the committee of the recreational centre.

Guest Speaker

Canon J. M. Brownlie as guest speaker of the evening, said that if his topic were to be given a title it might be "Observations and Impressions of a Chaplain on Holiday."

Last September, Canon Brownlie acted as Protestant chaplain at the Penitentiary of the city of New York, where the maximum of inmates is 3000 and cell blocks 3 tiers high. He described his visits to the various departments including the bakery where the output is 30,000 loaves a day.

He also briefly described his duties and described some of the types of interviews which the chaplain there has with inmates.

He was heartily thanked for his address by C. T. Nicholson.

Two other matters received discussion before the session closed. Members agreed with A. F. Fraser that the volunteer fire brigade members should undergo some further instruction that the fire protection movement be furthered.

W. J. Cottrell inquired as to the situation the Chamber found itself in regarding the project of two years' standing with regard to having signs put up signifying the names of the village streets. The reply was that the village council had discussed it at their meeting on Tuesday evening but felt with other responsibilities facing them at the present time, they could not personally act in the matter.

The Chamber, however, decided to give the matter further thought at the next directors' meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Young have returned from their trip to the West Indies.

Mrs. A. Fleming of Hastings, is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Glover, this week.

Ice Carnival Plans Proceedings Favorably

Frankford—The Lions Club of Frankford held its regular bi-monthly meeting in the Community Memorial hall on Wednesday evening with a good turnout. The Lions sat down to a sumptuous repast, prepared by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion.

During the meal, the Tail Twister made his way among the tables, and reports are that he treated his fellow members like anything but brothers of a service club, levying fines right and left for the slightest excuse.

Following the meal, the business was dealt with. It was reported that plans are proceeding favorably for the annual ice carnival to be held in the local arena on Friday evening, February 20. Mr. George Reid was welcomed into the fellowship of the Lions Club, and it is felt that he will be a most worthy addition to the club.

Guest Speaker

Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. F. Sparks, representative of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. He spoke on the new Building for the Blind which will be constructed in eastern Ontario, soon, and urged the Lions to get behind it, and spearhead a canvass of the district. It is expected that the Lions will be doing just this, and thus adding another chapter to the fine community work they are doing.

Evangelistic Services

Plans have been just about completed for the week of evangelistic services which will be held in the week of Feb. 15-20, inclusive by the Frankford United Church. Guest evangelist will be Rev. Lindsay Vogan, D.F.C. Because of the large crowd anticipated on Sunday evening, Feb. 15, the community hall has been obtained, and the first service will be held there. All others will be in the church, barring an overflow crowd.

Following the opening service on Sunday night, a fellowship hour will be held in the United Church hall, where newly received members may meet Mr. Vogan personally, as well as other friends. Mr. Vogan calls his first evening the "Opening Salvo". On Monday evening, his topic will be "Christians on Wheels" a word to the casual church-goer. On Tuesday evening, he will speak on "Jesus on Trial." Wednesday night is the special Young People's Night, and Mr. Vogan's topic will be "Tomorrow is Here." Thursday night is "The Waiting Savior" a word to the "lukewarm", and Friday is "The Call of Today," a final challenge. Everyone is welcome.

A good crowd was on hand in the Batawa recreation hall Tuesday night to see the presentation under the sponsorship of the under the sponsorship of the Batawa Girl Guides.

A special film will be shown in the Batawa recreation hall on Sunday evening at 8.00 under the sponsorship of the Canadian Czechosjavak Association.

The special evangelistic services being held at the Emmanuel Gospel Church on Mill street are still attracting large crowds each evening.

Money Desired By Red Cross For Flood Relief

Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, member of the emergency relief committee of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross, announced today that money, not goods and clothing, is desired for English and Dutch relief made necessary by floods which have caused such havoc in those countries.

The money should be addressed to the European Relief Fund and directed to A. J. P. Joss, of the Royal Bank, Belleville. The money should be earmarked as to whether it should go to either English or Dutch relief.

Because of airlift space, only new clothing is acceptable to the authorities. The United Church Overseas Mission in Toronto is packing bales of used clothing which presumably will be freighted to their destinations by means other than aircraft.

All contributions will be income tax free, Mrs. Ketcheson said she had been informed in a telephone conversation with relief officials in Toronto.

Balance of Grant Given Arena By Council

BANCROFT — At the regular monthly meeting of the village council, held in the municipal offices on Monday evening, it was decided to give the balance of the municipality's grant toward the local arena. Reeve T. W. Tryon was in the chair with Councillors J. Brown, D. Russel, G. A. Barker and Wilfred Maxwell in attendance.

Discussion was held on the matter of the installation of lights at the level crossing on Station Street and clerk Stringer was instructed to make the necessary communications.

The clerk was also instructed to call for tenders for the purchase of a new hose truck for the fire department.

On a motion by J. Brown and G. A. Barker, a survey will be made of the village dumping grounds by M. J. McAlpine with a view to establishing a proper boundary.

Council approved a donation to the Salvation Army of $25.00.

Rebates on the 1952 tax roll were made as follows: Grand Cafe $6.30; Ross Foster, $11.90; Bordman's Dept. Store, $23.80; Verna Miller, $11.90; Russell Brethour, $23.80.

Hydro vouchers 20 to 25 were ordered paid and the following outstanding accounts passed for payment: Balance of Grant to Community Centre, $297.20; Bancroft Light and Power, $143.33; Ontario Hospital, Woodstock, $46.00; Easton Hardware, $5.30; John Kelusky, $13.95; Brinklow Garage, $1.00; B. A. Oil Co., $46.28; P. J. Stringer, $140.68; F. L. Chapman, $174.59; Murray Maxwell, $11.88; Henry Hannah, $24.00; Laundry and Barker, $12.72; R. A. Loney, $7.85; C. W. Bierworth, $12.00; Samuel Hancock, $33.75; Dept. of Highways, $29.40.

The meeting adjourned at 9 p.m.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the North Hastings Community Credit Union was held on Tuesday evening at the Legion Hall and the annual election of officers was held. A successful financial year was reported by the secretary and treasurer.

Elected to the board of directors were: Henry Phillips, John Hawkins, Jerry Ward, W. J. Lavalley, Pat Labarge and Archie Grayling, who is entering his second term. Supervisory Committee officers elected were: John Hutchinson, chairman, who is entering his second term, Emerson Doney and Art Tompsett.

Mrs. Jean Ward, Ivan Free, Brian Murray and Elvin Bruce were acclaimed to the credit committee. Mr. Bruce is commencing his second year in that office.

The resignation of the president, Dr. R. Y. Haryett, has been tendered and it is understood that a succeeding president will be elected from among the Board of Directors. Dr. Haryett has been president of the credit Union since its inception.

B.C.I. Students Open Drive For Flood Victims

Students at Belleville Collegiate are putting their shoulder to the wheel in a concerted drive to collect clothing and purchase new blankets for the relief of flood victims in England and Holland.

The students started the ball rolling Friday night when the entire proceeds of the Students' Council "Twerp" dance was turned over to the fund. The school's all-girl orchestra donated their services. Starting Monday each form room in the Collegiate will conduct a collection to raise funds for the purchase of new woolen blankets.

An objective of one blanket for each form room has been set and if the objective is reached, over 49 blankets will be purchased. A local merchant has offered to sell the blankets at cost.

From now until February 23rd Collegiate students will be asked to collect clean clothing, preferably woollen. "It is not necessary that the clothing be new, but it is essential that it be clean," Mr. G. E. Currel, school principal stated.

On February 23rd the collected clothing and blankets purchased will be packed by the Junior Red Cross section of the school. The clothing will be packed under the direction of Miss Mary Dwyer, staff adviser fo rhte Junior Red Cross.

Chief G. Spratt, Tweed, Sends In Resignation

TWEED (Special) — Police head in the village since 1944 Chief George Spratt has tendered his resignation effective February 28th. The town council at a special meeting held Thursday night unanimously accepted the resignation. The village will advertise for a new chief.

Chief Spratt came to Tweed from Tamworth where he had been engaged in police work as county constable. He succeeded J. Claire Hayes, now inspector with the Belleville Police Department. Since coming to Tweed Chief Spratt has been active in fraternal affairs.

Sunday Laws Are Old Issue

A private member's Sunday Observance Bill, which is due to come up for second reading Friday, proposes to repeal most of the Sunday Observance Acts 1625 to 1780. It also proposes to allow theatres to open on Sundays on the same conditions as cinemas, ●tes The Times of London.

Attacks on the insular British Sunday were already in full swing in the first half of the seventeenth century when (a "Puritane one" was sneered at for

Hanging of his cat on Monday
For killing a mouse on Sunday.

Back to 1448

It is often said that the "Puritane ones" only got into the saddle after the Reformation, but earlier traces of Sabbatarianism may be found in English history. An Act of Henry VI, passed in 1448, prohibited fairs on Sundays. Legislation on the subject became almost a national industry in Stuart times. An Act of 1627 prohibited meetings of people out of their own parishes for common plays or unlawful sports on Sunday. An Act of 1629 forbade carriers to travel and butchers to kill or sell on Sunday. It was forbidden, in 1667, for any tradesman, artificer, workman, laborer, or other persons whatsoever ejusdem generis to do or exercise on Sunday any worldly labor, business or work, of his ordinary calling, works of necessity or charity only excepted.

This Act spread its net widely. But under it, selling a horse, hiring a servant and enlisting a soldier were held not to be within the prohibition. The Act did forbid public crying, showing forth, or exposing for sale, wares and merchandises on pain of forfeiture. This has been enforced against newspaper vendors. Drivers of fish carriages in London and Westminster were exempted from it in 1761. It made illegal travelling by drivers, butchers, waggoners, and higglers and also travel by boat except on an excuse allowed by justices, but this was partly repealed by a local Act. People who were robbed while traveling on the Lord's Day could not claim compensation from the hundred.

Bread-Baking Banned

Detailed provisions were made from time to time to restrain this and that activity. Bread might not be baked on Sundays by bakers, but it could be delivered until 1.30 and the shops could be open from 9 until 1 for the sale of bread and for baking the Sunday dinners for the poor. Billiard saloons, pawnbrokers, glass workers, factory workers, except, in some instances, those in creameries, were restricted. The law concerned itself with the Sunday employment of a Jew by another Jew. By an Act of 1781 it was made illegal to open or use any house for public entertainment or amusement or for public debate if admission was made by payment of money or tickets were sold for money. The penalties laid down were forfeiture of £200 recoverable by action and proceedings as for keeping a disorderly house. The persons liable included the manager, door keeers, and servants, but not a solicitor who let the place, nor a chairman who introduced a lecturer.

Sunday was held in a case of 1611 to be a dies non for the sitting of courts or meeting of public bodies. A contract made and completed on Sunday was held to be void and process might not be served nor persons arrested except for crime. Prisoners whose terms would expire on a Sunday were early discharged on the previous Saturday, and by the Prison Rules of 1899 it was provided that no payment by a prisoner in part satisfaction of the sum adjudged to be paid by him in order to attain the remission of some of his imprisonment under Section 9 of Prison Act of 1898 should be made on a Sunday.

Long Background

It is against this confused and historic background that those who wish to change the law affecting the Sabbath have had and have to work.

The opposition takes its stand, as voting in Parliament has more than once proved, on religious and moral grounds and also on practical ones affecting legitimate time-off from employment. Proposals to simplify the law may be given sympathetic hearing. But on attempt to secularize it is likely to prove today nearly as uphill a task as it was in the days of the Puritan referred to above and, some two centuries later, when Byron added his sneer—

And beer undrawn and beards unmown dsplay
Your holy reverence for the Sabbath Day.

The wits and the continentals have always had their laugh in this issue—until they came to vote.

U.S. Likes Elizabeth and Philip

In the tough world of 1953, Americans don't envy Britain overmuch. But there is a massive exception to this, relates a London Express Service dispatch in the El Paso (Tex.) Herald-Post.

Our Royal Family is regarded throughout the United States with an admiration and a fervently affectionate curiosity which, in its own way, matches the loyal warmth with which the British people across the world regard the sovereign and her family.

This is one of the more astounding pradoxes in the always fascinating mix-up of Anglo-American relations.

The United States is a nation born of revolution. In her schools the children are often taught that a throne is synonymous with a tyranny.

It is only a quarter of a century ago that a Chicago politican was threatening to "bust King George in the snoot" should he venture into the State of Illinois. It turned out later that the politician had got his Georges confused and was under the impression that the third one was still around.

Yet, if something like that happened today there would undoubtedly be a storm of disapproval from the Americans.

Three Reasons

What has produced this paradox? There are, I believe, three main reasons: (1) All Amreicans are brought up to pledge allegiance to their nation's flag, which represents the nation itself.

But while this is right and proper, Americans, with their passionate interest in personalities, their warm desire to know people (and if possible to like them), probably feel, now and then, a lack.

Thus (2) they turn with eagerness to this glamorous and charming family of ours, which provides with its human qualities, its good looks and charm, combined with so many of the sterner virtues, a continuing and very special kind of steadfast reassurance in a world largely given over to drift, disaster and dismay.

When all is said, the flag must remain an inanimate object.

And so the American turns rather hungrily to news of this little group of human beings in the palace 3,000 miles away.

The third reason, reinforcing and encouraging the American interest in the Royal Family as simple and likeable human beings, is that the Queen, with her husband, was herself in the United States not so long ago, although, to the general regret, she visited only Washington.

There she instantly succeeded in winning over the top correspondents of the nation's press—men who are notably quick to make shrewd assessments of a person's worth.

That visit was a serene triumph. In the American idiom it was "a perfect job of public relations." Lynx-eyed reporters saw never a hint of any of the "snootiness" which was provided in such ample measure by certain of Britain's pre-war ambassadors to Washington.

Much Publicity

In the last few months before the writer left the United States it was rare for a week to go by without some feature or other on the Royal Family appearing in one of the multi-million circulation magazines.

Schoolgirls would discuss the Queen's hair-do or give Princess Margaret's latest ensemble an exhaustive scrutiny. And now the coronation! Sometimes I got the impression that the whole of America intends to move over here come next June, lock, stock and hip-flask.

Yes—you can take it that our loyal American friends are determined to see and hear just as much as they possibly can about the crowning of "their" Queen.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By
WINIFRED E. WILSON

MATING DATES

More than 550 years ago the English poet, Chaucer, wrote about birds chasing their mates on St. Valentine's Day, and 250 years later another poet, Herrick, used the very same expression. The belief that birds mate on February 14th is very old indeed, and it was only comparatively recently that men grew wiser. Now we know that there is no definite date for this exciting event in Birdland, and furthermore that February is too early, even in England, for the majority of species.

Of course there are kinds that remain mated for life, as Canada geese, These, therefore, we might see in couples at any season. In Canda we miss the mating of many shore birds and ducks, as this is now taking place in their southern holiday resorts, and may have happened as early as January. It is said to be amusing to see a pair of mallards in flight—the female leading, the male following. As they have such different coloring it is easy to distinguish between the two.

Ordinarily, however, birds do their courting right on the spot where they later make homes and rear families. Some are permanent residents here. Two great horned owls may now be making love to one another, as it is not unusual for them to nest in the snow. Most owls use hollow trees and the eggs are safe from the elements, but great horned take over discarded nests of hawks and crows, built in branches of large trees. Bobwhites, also permanent residents, start their housekeeping extremely early, and their eggs may be found almost any month of the year.

Prairie horned larks arrive about the beginning of March, and start courting soon afterwards. Killdeer plovers' eggs are frequently found before mid-April, the birds having got here a few weeks previously.

Most species come to us in May and some even wait until June. The male generally appears first, takes up a piece of territory, and advertises that he is ready for a wife by making himself conspicuous. This is done for all to hear, by singing, or for all to see, by puffing out his breast, spreading his tail, gaping, bowing, or going through some other antics. Once having attracted a female, he may kiss her, offer her food, bring her nesting material, or simply go through further acrobatic stunts, according to his species.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

In The Cross Of Christ I Glory

In the cross of Christ I glory,
Tow'ring o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime.

When the woes of life o'ertake
me,
Hopes deceive and fears
annoy,
Never shall the cross forsake
me;
Lo! it glows with peace and joy.

When the sun of bliss is beaming
Light and love upon my way,
From the cross the radiance streaming
Adds more lustre to the day.

Bane and blessing, pain and pleasure,
By the cross are sanctified;
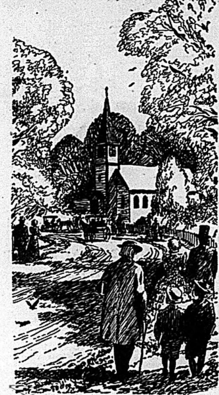
Peace is there, that knows no
measure,
Joys that through all time
abide.



When the roll of great hymns of the cross is called, two glorious lyrics always head the list. One of these is Isaac Watts' masterpiece, "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross." The other is Sir John Bowring's inspired hymn, "In The Cross Of Christ I Glory."

Matthew Arnold characterized Watts' hymn as the finest in the English language, but many critics prefer Sir John's lyric and it has become universally popular in churches of all Christian denominations.

Bowring was inspired to write his beautiful hymn-poem while travelling in the Orient. As consul general for the English government at Hong Kong he sailed one day down the Chinese coast to Macao, where several centuries earlier Catholic missionaries and native Christians had erected a stately cathedral on a high point overlooking the sea. Many years before Bowring's visit a hurricane had collapsed the beautiful church, but the cathedral tower surmounted by its triumphant cross, was still standing. Silhouetted against the sky far above, the wreckage strewn about on the shore below, the cross seemed to the hymnist to typify destruction. To him, as he gazed skyward, it seemed to give testimony to the eternal nature of spiritual things. Within a few minutes he dashed off the stanzas which ever since have been so precious to hymn lovers.

During the Boxer uprising in China foreigners in Peking had been besieged for many weeks by Chinese troops. Finally the siege was ended with the arrival of allied soldiers, and Christian missionaries grateful for the rescue, gathered in the Temple of Heaven, the famous pagan shrine in the heart of the city where the Chinese emperor was accustomed to worship. Their song of thanksgiving was Bowring's hymn:

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers 'round its head sublime."

Sir John was a distinguished linguist as well as a statesman and hymn writer. It is said that he was able to converse fluently in 22 different languages. His later life as in earlier years when he was writing the gems which have made him famous. He will be best remembered for his hymn of the cross, the title of which was inscribed upon his tombstone but he wrote several others, including "How Sweetly Flowed The Gospel's Sound," "God Is Love!" "His Mercy Brightens," and his popular lyric:

"Watchman, tell us of the night,
What its signs of promise are;
Trav'ler, o'er yon mountain's height
See that glory-beaming star!
Watchman, does its beauteous ray
Aught of hope or joy foretell?
Trav'ler, yes; it brings the day,
Promised day of Israel.

Watchman, tell us of the night,
For the morning seems to dawn;
Trav'ler, darkness takes its flight,
Doubt and terror are withdrawn;
Watchman, let thy wand'ring
cease,
Hie thee to thy quiet home!
Trav'ler, lo, the Prince of Peace,
Lo, the Son of God is come!

SOME MATTERS OF EXPENSE

One week from Monday will bring the Canadian taxpayer another bill of expense for running the country for another year. There is optimistic talk that this will be a "sunshine" budget, something to brighten the scene before an election appeal.

It may be all of that, but whatever it has to offer it must still fall short of convincing explanations for some items in the current estimates for ordinary government operations. By Mr. Abbott and his financial experts they are regarded almost as "petty cash" expenses in a multi-million dollar budget. Though scarcely worthy of public mention they are actually multi-million dollar items.

For instance, there is an item of about $19,000,000 for freight, express and cartage charges. Don't ask us what all this carting and freighting is about. The only thing we could be sure it would not include is an estimated cost for moving out of office. We can tell you, however, that this item is just about $5,000,000 more than the government of Sir John A. Macdonald spent in its first year to run the whole country.

There is another minor matter of travelling expenses. Mr. Abbott has earmarked about $53,500,000 to keep the hired help mobile during the next twelve months. Don't ask us where everybody's going but be assured that one-way trips are not contemplated. This tidy expense item, incidentally, is just about the amount Sir Wilfred Laurier had to meet the entire costs of government in 1901.

Of course all these comings and goings involve a good deal of correspondence. Franked postage-free mail takes care of most of this but an additional $3,899,000 in petty cash goes for postage—just to keep in touch with things, no doubt, while on the move

If these moving, travelling and mailing costs appear to be somewhat out of reasonable proportion, it is staggering to think what they might be if we weren't the fortunate sort of people who own one trans-Canada railway, as well as world-wide air and shipping lines and, of course, the Post Office, too. We're just lucky, that's all.

If our government is not to be accused of being pikers in some of the smaller operations, let us be sure that in larger things as well in Ottawa they can be just as fast with a taxpayer's dollar. Civil service salaries and wages in the next twelve months will cost $441,000,000. It cost the Bennett Government just a few hundred thousand more than this to govern the whole country in the second year of the great depression.

If armed services pay is added to the bill for civil service wages and salaries the total is higher by $58,000,000 than the cost of government to Canadian taxpayers in the first full year of the Second World War.

These are just a few of the highlights and shadows that form the background of the budget that Finance Minister Abbott will bring down on February 16. It may have some rays of sunshine but old hands with an almanac will see plenty of rough weather still ahead for the taxpayer.

AN OVER-RATED DECISION

While professing to know as little as any ordinary observer of day to day events about the diplomatic intricacies which may be involved in the freeing of the Chinese Nationalist forces in Formosa from neutrality it seems to us that President Eisenhower's decision is a much overrated matter.

Anything that Chiang Kai Shek is able to do in the way of attack upon the Chinese mainland is not likely to involve anyone in a larger scale war with Communist China than the already large scale war we are now involved in against Communist China. The professed "concern" in Ottawa and in certain British political circles, notwithstanding, it is nonsense to pretend that we have not been at full grips with the Chinese Reds ever since the United Nations took its stand in Korea.

Chiang has sizable forces built up in China which could be of effective use as ground troops against an enemy. He has no means of getting his forces into action unless they are transported by United States equipment. He is capable of carrying out minor scale commando attacks against Red territory and he has been doing this, as well as harassing shipping into Red ports, for some time. Formosa is the only island which had been "neutralized", but it is only one of several from which the Nationalists have been carrying on some show of fight against the Reds over a considerable period.

It seems likely that in due course we will see Chinese Nationalist troops in action in Korea. Employment of anti-Red Chinese forces against the Reds in a mainland campaign could only be on a scale secondary to that which has been launched in Korea and while it might be seized upon as an excuse for a change in Communist strategy it would never be the cause of enveloping the Allies in what is regarded so apprehensively as a "larger war."

When the Reds are ready for the "larger war" it will come to pass for other reasons than the so-called "de-neutralizing" of Formosa.

THE RUNAWAY

He thought he could escape life's "daily must",
The press of duty and the bonds of trust;
The things love asks and to be loved requires;
The pride of name long cherished by his sires.
No heed to praise or scorn henceforth he'd give.
His own life in his own way he would live.

slipped away to tramp the world about.
me woman once perhaps had found him out
d sent him off. To him that one rebuff
To break his spirit had been quite enough.
He chose to beg for coins with outstretched hat
Rather than risk a second hurt like that.

Shame cannot blacken darker any name
When he who wears it has no fear of shame.
Seas harm no more a ship already wrecked.
More can't be lost, when lost is self-respect.
From all good men's esteem he chose to stray,
To live his own life in a sorry way.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 7, 1933.

Mr. Sam Ketcheson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ketcheson of Moira, who has been a member of the staff at Givens Street School, Toronto has been named as one of the teachers to be on exchange to Great Britain for one year beginning in September. Mr. Ketcheson is a brother of Miss Bessie Ketcheson of the teaching staff at Queen Mary School.

Mr. Walter H. Reeves spent yesterday in Toronto.

The Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, vicar, of St. Thomas' Church Mr. John Elliott and Mr. John Kerr of the same parish, were in Kingston yesterday to attend committee meetings in connection with the Diocese of Ontario.

Mr. C. Fred Wallbridge spent several days in Toronto this week.

Mrs. Annie Agnew and Mrs. Henry Knight, Bridge Street east, will leave tomorrow for California where they will visit their sister, Mrs. W. B. Hunter.

30 YEARS AGO

Feb. 7, 1923.

A new constable will be selected soon for the local police force.

Mr. Walter Allore has returned home after spending several days in Rochester, N.Y.

Dr. Norman Neilson has left for the Old Country where he will spend a year.

Messrs. Edward Maxwell and J. McCaw of Bancroft were in town today.

A member of Emmanuel Church was initiated at the meeting of Eureka Lodge No. 283 A.F. & A.M. nd the chairs were occupied by members of Emmanuel Church. Representatives of the city council were present and at the banquet the chair was occupied by Samuel McGuire. Short addresses were made by Ald. Harry Thompson, Ald. R. A. Adams, and E. T. Austin in response to the special toast to the City of Belleville which was proposed by J. O. Herity. Harry McKay rendered a vocal solo and a vocal duet was given by James Booth and James Bankier.

40 YEARS AGO

Feb. 7, 1913.

According to the city assessors the population of Belleville has increased by 300 over last year and now is 11,155.

The Rev. W. G. Clarke has been invited to remain as pastor of the Tabernacle for another year.

Mr. J. H. Ward, Commercial Street, is spending some time in Toronto.

Mr. F. T. Ketcheson has returned home after a business trip to western Ontario.

Mrs. James Gibson has left for her home in Yorkton, Sask., after visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alf. G. Vermilyea, West Bridge Street.

Jimmie Lindsay, son of City Engineer Lindsay, will leave shortly for the Old Country where he will attend school. He entertained a number of his school friends at the home of his parents last evening.

50 YEARS AGO

Feb. 7, 1903.

The Belleville Packing Company with a capital of $250,000 has been granted a charter by the Ontario Government. The provisional directors are Sir Mackenzie Bowell, R. J. Graham, J. F. Wills, H. C. Hunt of Belleville and Harry Hunter of Toronto.

Mr. Lawrence Lockett of Kingston, formerly of Belleville was in town today.

There seems to be reasonable assurance of good sleighing for some time to come.

General satisfaction is expressed at the fact that the old Dundas Street Burying Ground improvement campaign will commence early this year. F. E. O'Flynn and his gallant band of young men have already organized for the work and it appears likely that when the good old summer time comes we shall see the desolate old place changed into a quiet bower of beauty.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

PERHAPS AN ANGEL FROM HEAVEN

Everybody has to experience suffering sometime in his life. In fact, if anyone went through life without ever experiencing any suffering whatsoever, he would be spiritually anemic and weak. Alfred Russell, the great English naturalist, once assisted a butterfly to extricate itself from the covering from which it had to emerge in order to be born. Because he relieved it of the necessary struggle the poor butterfly simply crawled about for a few hours and, without ever taking on a glorious hue, drooped and died.

Struggle and pain are the essential qualities of growth. The cross of Christ is the world's greatest symbol of this truth. By His suffering on the cross, Christ transformed all suffering for mankind and made His own suffering to be the means by which the blot of sin is wiped from man's soul.

No normal person enjoys suffering; and suffering is usually about as hard for one person as it is for another. But no experience binds us so closely to the other members of the human race as does suffering. If we suffer without the sustaining power of religious faith we become bitter. But if faith undergirds us, then suffering may transform our characters, heal our deepest wounds, and prove to have been not a messenger of Satan to buffet us but an angel sent of God to fill us with new life.

The Final Parking Blow

(Winnipeg Tribune)

One of the few joys remaining to motorists in cities is to discover a parking space in which the parking meter registers a residue of parking time.

It is a great feeling to sidle up to a meter that still shows half an hour or so before the red violation flag is due to appear. The eternal hope, so frequently disappointed, of getting something for nothing coupled with the naughty satisfaction of beating the "government" in a minor way can raise a rosy glow.

But now some fiend down south has invented a gadget that threatens this more or less innocent pleasure. The gadget has actually been installed in Salt Lake City. It is called a "meter eraser." When a car pulls out of a parking space, the gadget automatically trips the meter back to zero. The result is: no more parking on the other fellow's nickel.

Progress Always Hurts

(Farmer's Advocate)

Of course, everyone in Ontario wants the new super highway except those whose farms are being cut into narrow strips. Progress always hurts someone — and sometimes badly.

Looking Back Over 300 Years

(An Editorial in The New York Times)

Three hundred years ago Nieuw Amsterdam, a community of 800 souls, was incorporated in a grant of municipal government proclaimed by Peter Stuyvesant. It was, as the Florentine navigator Giovanni da Verrazano had said in 1524, "a very agreeable location." Settlement began about 1626, or a bit earlier, and then as now it was a land of many tongues and peoples. The first guidebook, written a few years later, said: "How free are these parts of the world from that pride and oppression, with their miserable effects, with which many, nay almost all, parts of the world are troubled."

So this year will be one of recollection, review and stocktaking for New Yorkers, who now number by latest estimate 8,053,000. It seems an appropriate time for inventory of what we have here and the room for improvement.

First of all it must be conceded that New York, with all its defects, is a good place to live. Our blessings and comforts tumble over one another in their profusion. In this city of the sea we look out upon a vista of beauty; this is port of call to vessels sailing from the world over. We thrive upon a commerce, borne by ship, by airplane, by railroad, by truck, that knows no limit of horizon.

We are a manufacturing city, a retail centre, a city of universities, a market-place for ideas. Great corporations call this home. Authors find it stimulating to live here, and books come in a steady stream from one of the great publishing centres of the world. Creative art, music, drama, the dance feel at home here and find an appreciative, understanding audience. Our museums, libraries and other institutions of learning are known the world over. Some of our great spiritual leaders make this their pulpit, in a city memorable for churches. The United Nations, headquarters of the people's yearning for peace, is established here, making this city as nearly as any other a world capital.

We are the city of the skyscraper and the one-family home; city of subways and the private automobile; city of tunnels and bridges, of the narrow, winding street downtown and of the great boulevard on "the island." We are the city of the Negro and the white man, the Catholic, the Protestant, the Jew and uncounted other religions and shades of belief and disbelief; of Irish, Italian and plain American —as all eventually became; of East and West, of North and South. We take ride in our tolerance, yet know our unfortunate moments of prejudice. We are America, we are the world and democracy in a ferment of striving, introspection and extrovertism such as must know no parallel.

In this mixing bowl we call New York we know wealth and poverty, the expression of man's noblest sentiments, and of his degradation. It is the city of opportunity, beckoning to all, to rise with high acclaim or to fall unnoticed, unwept.

How much we and our forefathers have done, to make this city great; how much is left undone. Our problems lie thick about us. In a city bursting with executive talent we have a government peopled largely with the second-rate. Obsolete, machine-made election laws and the indifference of a shackled electorate keep government and politics in the hands of the professional boss. Our subways are run down. Our docks are crime-ridden. Our streets are dirty. Much housing is unfit for habitation. Some of our schools are a disgrace. Some of our courts are ill-housed. Traffic clogs our streets and remedies wait year upon year. An undermanned police force fails to protect the public property. Vandalism wrecks the parks of which we are so proud. The list grows long, but is too brief. We are wealthy in resources and leadership, yet bankrupt of both.

So, richly blessed as we are, proud as we are of New York, anxious as we are to see it continue to grow in an orderly, healthful direction, we see this great city at a crossroads. The burden of retrieving past mistakes, of carrying forward future progress cannot be delegated wholly to the few, or to the eagerly unworthy. The feeling of partnership, of co-operation that advanced and defended the small pioneer town in the America of three centuries ago is not less wanted today. A stockade is no longer needed at Wall Street, as in 1653, or at our outer borders of today. Our danger now is in failing, because of our very size and past success, to feel that strong pride of place, that determination to make and keep New York a good "home town" that can be inspired only by the basic virtue of citizenship steadily exerted. We refuse to believe that New York has grown so large that its people today will not rally to make this a steadily better city, an example to others and a leader of opinion and high principle in the free world.

Characteristic Of the Times

(Watertown Times)

Britains famed Canberra bomber has added another laurel to its already lengthy garland. It has now broken the speed record between England and Australia, making the trip in 22 hours and one minute. Tnis fabulous time is less than half that consumed on the previous record flight made in 1946 by a Lancaster bomber. Actual flying time in the Canberras log was 19 hours and one minute for the 8,608-mile trip.

The three-hour difference between elapsed time and flying time was consumed in stop-overs at Faid, in the Suez canal zone; at Karachi, capital of Pakistan, and at Singapore. The stops were made for fuel and to replenich oxygen supplies, most of the flight having been made at 40,000 feet.

The Canberra, the world's fastest two-jet bomber, now holds the London-to-Karachi record; the London-to-Darwin mark and the East-to-West crown for Atlantic crossings. It was the Canberra, one will remember, which flew the Atlantic both ways between sunrise and sunset last August.

A commercial version of the Canberra is now making regularly-scheduled flights on airways around Europe. It is that plane that Eddie Rickenbacker tried to buy for his Eastern airlines, failed, and then chided American aircraft designers for their tardiness in developing a commercial jet airliner. He also had some tart comments to make on British production methods when manufacturers advised him that his order for 100 jet liners could not be filled for years.

As each new record is set, our feelings are mixed between admiration and puzzlement. One cannot relp but admire the combination of engineering, manufacturing and flying skill which goes into a record flight. But at the same time one wonders whether it will ever make too much difference that it is now possible to get from England to Australia in 22 hours rather than 45 and a half. It's progress, to be sure, but a preoccupation with speed for it's own sake is characteristic of the restless nature of the times.

Dynamite as Tonic

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

A physician says dynamite is a good tonic. One must be careful though, in using it, lest he gets too great a lift.

Risk Lives To Save Deer

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

It is paradoxical to think that human beings will kill deer and will also risk their lives to save them from death.

In New Brunswick each Fall about 20,000 deer crumple dead before the bullets of hunters. That number is in addition to a probable good many hundreds more which limp off into the woods crippled by rifle fire, some to die. If anyone feels sorry for them, not much is heard about it.

Yet at least twice on the lower Kennebecasis river this Winter, men have imperilled their own safety in attempts to rescue deer from danger.

The Last Gibson Girl

(Hamilton Spectator)

You cannot pass a magazine today without encountering the inviting gaze of some cover girl and when you come to think of it there were always these familiar and appealing faces.

Our present generation has its Marilyn Monroes and Rita Hayworths, our fathers think nostalgically of their Clara Bows and Mary Pickfords and our grandfathers are not unmoved by memories of the Gibson Girls of the Gay Nineties.

In deference to our elders, it [illegible] only fitting that some [illegible] should be made of the death, last week, of the last of the original Gibson Girls. Fifty-eight years ago she was a raven-haired 19-year-old, with an hour-glass figure which was the toast of two continents. Her name was Mary Callahan and she was immortalized by Charles Dana Gibson in his famous drawings of The Laughing Girl, The Bicycle Girl and The Bathing Girl. In her day she was the norm of beauty and the symbol of an era.

There are probably few people today who remember Mary Callahan, let alone what she looked like 60 years ago. But if there are those who would question whether she had the appeal of Rita Hayworth, nobody can deny that she exceeded most modern glamor girls in one important respect. When she died last week at the age of 77 ,she had been happily married to her one-and-only husband for 56 years.

Personal Health Talks

MIRACLE IN MINIATURE

HOT FLASHES

One reader reported that she had suffered from hot flashes for eight years.

She was advised to supplement her diet with an adequate daily ration of Ca and D. In a week or so her hot flashes were occurring at longer intervals and in milder degree. So she continued eating Calcium and Vitamin D—the vitamin being essential for assimilation and utilization of calcium in nutrition. In another week or two the hot flash had ceased altogether.

So far so good. But then the lady made the mistake which so many readers do. Whatever I said to the contrary she disregarded and she persisted in thinking calcium and vitamin D as medicine. So, having taken it for a month or more (my suggestion that she eat it was obviously an error) and having obtained such blessed relief from the hot flashes the lady stopped the "medicine."

A few months later the hot flashes recurred, not bad as before but they are embarrassing and disturbing enough in any degree. The lady still thought Ca and D worth another trial, so she ate 'em for a week or so. There was some moderation but not complete cessation, so she quit eating Ca and D and began a quest for other remedies.

Now to the best of my knowledge it makes no difference whether one eats Calcium and vitamin D in such concentrated form in the form in which calcium occurs in milk, cheese, cabbage, beans, peas, peanuts, nuts, greens and vitamin D in butter, cream, egg yolk, salmon etc., so long as one gets an adequate daily ration every day the year around, not just for ten days or forty or ninety days in the year.

Of course I don't know that the subsidence and cessation of the lady's hot flashes was due to the Ca and D she ate for a month. But I have received so many reports of similar benefit from women who have eaten extra Ca and D daily for many months—and kept on eating enough to prevent recurrence of calcium and D deficiency on their ordinary refined diet, that I cannot dismiss it as just another caper of John J. Coincidence.

Anyway, please bear in mind that:

1. The diet of most Americans is deficient in calcium.
2. Vitamin D promotes good assimilation and utilization of calcium.
3. Eating this extra calcium and vitamin D daily the year around can do no harm in any circumstance, although it may not be necessary to eat it in this supplementary way more than a few months if one follows a high calcium diet.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHY NOT PAINT?

One reason why so many people are unhappy is that they do not know what to do with themselves at times, so they get restless, even resentful about themselves. Here is a suggestion: Why not paint? Lots of people are doing it. The idea came to "Grandma Moses" and she did so well at it that she became famous, and inspired others to follow in her foosteps.

Painting is a wonderful creation, as well. It is Winston Churchill's favorite "pastime," and we are thrilled to note that the new American president — everybody's Ike—favors this grand rest and relief from his arduous duties. He is apt to neglect his golf exercise now, and in moments of brief leisure turn to his easel! All glory to him!

Painting is both a mental and spiritual stimulant. As equipment all that is essential is some paint and some brushes and a knowledge of the colors of the rainbow, plus the easel, which can be set up anywhere, indoors or out. It is fascinating to watch how colors talk to one another. And, as a training to the eye, so much is learned about perspective, composition, and expression. Painting is a creative art. Even as writing, painting challenges the feeling of a person.

Painting has a kinship with nature. Many mornings, on my drive to my office, I view a woman near the road at her easel, painting, and I know she is having a pleasant day and will return to her home at night with the feeling that she has accomplished something worth while, if no more than having expressed herself in a joyful hobby.

There is so much to be learned from painting. You cultivate patience, you begin to notice things you never noticed before. You become observant. You thrill as you get the feeling of a tree, a great rock, a winding road, or a quaint building. The painter is being constantly stirred and challenged as to what color or combination of colors to be used. A painter's best teacher is the one living inside of him or her. Why not paint?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The skiers will not welcome this news. But winter is pretty well nearly over. I have just had a letter from a bird-watching friend who took a trip to Panama and Colombia to have a look at some of our Canadian birds on their winter vacation in the south. And he informs me that some of them have already begun their journey back home.

It will be some weeks yet before they get here. But the encouragement lies in the fact that they have started on a leisurely first leg of their trip. He has seen scarlet tanagers that have already left Peru and have got as far as Colombia. Olive backed thrushes that went to Argentina are starting to trickle up through Panama. All sorts of familiar warblers that soon will be setting up house in our local woods are flitting along with a northerly bent.

Birds take their winter vacation very much as we do: some like to go to Florida all in one jump, as if by plane or train. Others like to dawdle along, stopping off here and there, as some of us do who go by motor car on a visit to New Orleans or Mexico, just enjoying the trip and stopping over night at motels and taking a few days off to loaf around some particular area that catches our fancy.

The idea that the migration of birds is a sort of mass movement or a hegira, that when spring arrives here in Canada, all our birds pick up in South America and Mexico and come pouring home in a tidal wave, is entirely amiss. By far the greater majority of birds go south in easy stages, and come home in easy stages. They will take advantage of a good tail wind, of course, and make some fairly high mileage on certain nights, or in certain weeks. But the cheery thing for us is that here in the first week of February, when few of us can really recapture in our mind's eye the image of our gardens as they were last June and as they will be this coming June, some hundred millions of America's fifteen billion birds are already heading homeward. They're on the way.

Why Russians Good at Chess

(Milwaukee Sunday Journal)

The Russians are pretty good chess players. Recently they took five first places in an international tournament at Stockholm.

Why are the Russians good at chess? Is it because they have a yen for the game, or specialize in it, or because it is encouraged in the schools and Soviet youth groups, or even because top chess players are rewarded highly.

Of course not. It is because the Communist system is better than the Capitalist system. Well, anyway, that's what the Literary Gazette of Moscow explained recently: "Millions of talented people in the Western countries have neither the spare time, nor the elementary knowledge, nor the public support for their desires. Millions of individuals — cannot achieve success in any sphere of culture."

Come to think of it, this doesn't explain why Russians excelled in chess back in Czarist times, does it?

The Czars didn't credit it to Russian air or Czarist atmosphere No, they were honest. They, too promoted chess playing. But as a Minister of Education in several Czarist cabinets explained: Chess will divert....from revolutionary thoughts."

N. B. Mining

(Fredericton Gleaner)

It could well be that New Brunswick is on the verge of a complete new era as far as mining is concerned. Indeed, if the high hopes are fulfilled, this province's wealth could be increased immeasurably. We would become a "have" province rather than a "have not."

Canadians in France

A group of Canadians with the RCAF assigned to Allied Air Forces Central Europe visit an historic site in Fontainebleau, France. Their guide, Guy Seraphin (third from left), is Paris-born but lived in Montreal for two years and now is with the French Air Force. The RCAF servicemen, all from Quebec, were conducted on an informal tour of the famous palace of Fontainebleau. WALLBRIDGE

WALLBRIDGE.—The W.I. met recently in the evening at the home of Mrs. R. Shorey with a large attendance.

Mrs. J. Smith returned home on Sunday last having spent a week at her old home in New Brunswick, where she attended the funeral of her father.

Mrs. May Trenwith of Eston, Sask., spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris and also with her aunt, Mrs. M. Harris and Mrs. K. Tucker, Belleville.

The pot luck dinner held in the church hall was well attended on Wednesday as the school children as well as adults enjoy a good hot dinner served by the ladies of the W.A.

Guess old Bruin saw his shadow as the sun shone in the morning at intervals, so six more weeks are in store.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris and Mrs. M. Trenwith were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods, of Madoc.

Quite a number of the community have bad colds.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ketcheson and Mrs. Ted Evans attended the funeral of Mrs. L. Hall on Saturday last, at the Belleville Burial Funeral Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelley Williams visited in Rossmore on Sunday. evening.

MILITARY FAMILY

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Perry have the distinction of having seven sons in the armed forces. Charles, John, Joseph and Earl are in the army, Francis and Henry in the navy and Lawrence in the air force.

HISTORIC SYNAGOGUE

MONTREAL (CP)—The oldest synagogue in Canada, the Shearith Israel Synagogue here, will celebrate its 185th anniversary with a week-end of rededication and a banquet on May 18. It was founded in 1768 by Jewish soldiers who came with the British forces to Canada.

Peacetime Stationing of Troops On French Soil Paying Off

FONTAINEBLEAU, France (CP)—Canada's first experiment in peacetime stationing of troops on French soil is paying off not only in stepped-up Allied military potential but also in model community relations.

Here at headquarters of Allied Air Forces Central Europe members of the RCAF national support group and their families have proved friendly guests.

Of its 76 officers and airmen, 21 are from Ontario, 12 from Quebec, 10 from Manitoba, eight from Alberta, eight from Nova Scotia, seven from British Columbia, five from Saskatchewan, three from New Brunswick and two from Newfoundland.

Simple Approach

Almost without knowing it, Canada found a simple approach to the tricky, host-guest relationship co-existent with the build-up of Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe. It is in line with the thinking of top planners in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization who realized from the first what friction could result from throwing together men of widely differing cultures.

Briefly, the "open sesame" to greater understanding is this:

A host nation like France is more apt to trust the motives of an armed guest who goes home to his family every night, than one who has free time on his hands.

Moreover, the presence of large numbers of dependents — while causing a temporary housing headache—is insurance to the French that their tenant NATO partners will not likely pull up stakes hurriedly in the event of a hot war, leaving them ripe for occupation.

Many are, Married

Of the 76 Canadian officers and airmen stationed at AAFCE's Camp Guynemer headquarters, 55 are married. All 55 have their families with them in the Fontainebleau-Avon area.

FO Edward A. Poitras, from Winnipeg, who commands the Canadian national support group here, likes to put it another way.

"When we encourage our boys to bring their families to France we indirectly give a vote of confidence to the entire NATO operation," he says.

"And here is another angle. There's no better way for nations to get to know each other than by taking a peek at one another's family life."

In that respect, the French-Canadians in the group have a distinct advantage over AAFCE's other English-speaking elements, the United States and Royal Air Forces.

"Life in France is much easier for us," says Poitras, one of 21 French-Canadians here. "We can find housing easily because we speak the language. We can shop in French stores just as we do back home. And we get to know the French people working with us at AAFCE much better because of our ancestry."

Held Important Posts

All in all, the Canadians occupy a place of importance at AAFCE far out of proportion to their limited numbers.

Air Vice Marshal John L. Plant of Vancouver was appointed assistant chief of staff for logistics soon after he arrived at AAFCE in August, 1951.

Recently the top-ranking RCAF officer at AAFCE was made a deputy chief of staff. Logistics was elevated to a plane on par with administration and operations. It was a tacit recognition of the added significance of logistics and supply in a military situation where emphasis is on build-up rather than attack.

Canada is otherwise well represented at higher levels of command. Group Capt. Cavendish Carling-Kelly of Toronto heads manpower and organization; Group Capt. Edward C. Luke of Ottawa is chief of the infrastructure division of logistics; Group Capt. George H. Elms of Ontario is in plans and policies; and Wing Cmdr. William H. Swetman of Toronto is in operations.

Lesser ranking RCAF officers are spread through supply, armament, communications, intelligence and special services.

Most Canadians below the rank of officer at AAFCE are assigned to the headquarters communications centre. It is the seat of a $9,000,000 micro-relay system which will link the vitals of Allied air defence on the continent. When in operation, the 17-station hook-up will free AAFCE from dependency on commercial lines of communication.

Call for Tenders

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario highways department today is to call for tenders for construction of eight bridge with a total estimated value of $1,000,000.

Included are two bridges on the Atikokan — Shebandowan highway, over the Kasabowie and French rivers; on Highway 50 over the Humber River near Palgrave; three on Highway 28 at Young's Point, Burleigh Falls and Eel's creek; on Highway 11 over the Driftwood river, and on the Trans-Canada Highway across the Still river near Britt.

Two Hemmed In By Ice Floes Are Rescued

PORT DOVER (CP)—Two brothers whose rowboat was hemmed in by ice floes on Lake Erie were rescued Friday night after five hours of exposure to biting cold.

The fishing tug Endave H. picked up Richard Reeves, 15, and his brother, Robert, 19, two miles offshore. Their clothing was soaked from fruitless efforts to push the boat through the ice.

Other rescuers onshore had tried to force a boat through the ice but reached a point only a quarter of a mile from shore before they were forced to give it up.

The tug, captained by Charles Hedges, happened along by chance. The owner, Alton Hoover of Nanticoke, had sent it on a trial run.

Can Have Tooth Back

HAMILTON (CP)—An indignant woman complained to a restaurant proprietor here that she had discovered a human tooth, with a gold cap, in her food.

The proprietor apologized and said there would be no charge for the food, but the woman reported the incident to police and demanded that the board of health be informed.

Next day, she telephoned inspector Howard Moreau to say the tooth was her own. She had only just discovered it was missing.

The inspector said she can have the tooth back if she pays $1.40 for the meal.

Weddings

GALLOWAY—VILNEFF

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Charlotte Vilneff, Marmora township, on January 31, when Barbara Ruth, daughter of Mrs. Vilneff and the late Simon Vilneff, became the bride of William Grant Galloway, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Galloway of Trenton. Rev. H. E. Beare, pastor of Springbrook United Church, officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Douglas Vilneff, the bride wore a floor-length gown of blue net over sheer with matching headdress. Her bouquet was of pink roses and white 'mums.

Her sister, Joan Vilneff, was her attendant, wearing a floor-length gown of pink taffeta with matching headdress. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

Mr. Gilbert Gaunt, of Springbrook, was best man.

The reception was held at the bride's home, where the bride's mother received, wearing a dress of blue crepe with black accessories and a corsage of pink hyacinths. The bridegroom's mother, who assisted, wore a navy printed silk dress and a corsage of pink hyacinths.

Mr. and Mrs. Galloway will reside in Trenton.

Letters from Mexico

By Arnold Meyers

Hotel "Canada"
Av 5 De Mayo 47
Mexico, D.F.

Dear Mother and Dad:

I am having quite a time seeing all the fine things that should be seen in Mexico City. One can just do so much in a day. Today I visited the Monte de Piedad, or Mexico's pawn shop, par excellence.

It is a large building of several stories, and very old looking. There are several departments: furniture and tapestries; tools and hunting equipment; arts, music and kitchen ware. I walked through room after room in which I saw the most extraordinary collection of pawned articles; everything you could think of. What a remarkable place!

Enormous Paintings

Before me, enormous paintings: one of Christ on the Cross, priced at 3,000 pesos; a rear view of a reclining nude, at 600 pesos; one of President Truman up for sale at 60 pesos; gorgeous ornamental lamps with figurines up the stem; some old church bells, rusty and dirty with age; a very ancient ornamental clock done in brass with handsomely carved figures; a huge mirror ten feet high with heavy gilded frame, there were three of these. At the top of the frame were two little seraphims; a case of deadly automatic pistols; watches galore, and pens. The furniture was remarkable. I noted especially one set of chairs, obviously very old, carved with Aztec design.

Carrying Method

Not the least amazing thing about this place is the burdensome way in which the men and boys carry things around. It is not at all uncommon to see a man going by toting a fair sized table on his back with several chairs on the table, the whole being supported by a stout thong which passes across the man's forehead. They carry such things everywhere, across the park, down the street, into the pawn shop. Of course, large baskets on the head are quite common sights.

One day I went out the Reforma and climbed to the top of the Independence Monument. From this vantage point is a splendid panorama of the city, but it is something of an effort getting to the top of it. One goes up a spiral staircase which is very narrow, so narrow that two people can just barely squeeze past each other. I did meet another fellow coming down, but I made it.

Marvellous Statues

This Reforma Avenue is lined with statues on either side, while in the centre is a line of cacti of all descriptions. The statues in the centre are marvellous things, as well as the one just mentioned. There is the Cuauhtemoc monument and the Columbus monument, both colossal things. I might mention in passing that on the ground before the Independence monument, there lay a young boy sound asleep in the hot sun. Near his one hand was a bit of partly eaten bread.

I took a picture of this, there being hardly anyone around. (In certain other parts of the city, it could have been dangerous.) I left a peso in coin in the shadow of his arm, and went my way—up the monument. When I returned, my sleeping model had vanished, probably wondering where the coin had come from.

Today I entered the San Domingo Cathedral. The interior of this church is quite overpowering. The ceiling, of course, is very, very high, and the sanctuaries are all carved in gilt. I daresay there is some goldleaf present. At any rate, they are brilliantly shiny.

Aztec Native Dance

But what really set me off today was the most unique thing I have ever seen in my life—immediately in front of this cathedral were six Aztec Indians giving a display of their native dances, each playing his instrument. The music was marvellous; all from stringed instruments; two with what looked like ukeleles; one with a guitar.

They were in their authentic native costumes of olden days, and what colors. Their headgear consisted of plumes of various colors: blue, green, orange and white, and of various sizes, depending on the age of the wearer.

This was an Aztec family and all took part from the tiny little girl up to the father. The mother took in the money which the crowd tossed to them. This is their means of livelihood.

Composition of Dance

The dance is made up of a succession of different variations, starting off with a very solemn succession of chords upon the same note, like a slow march. All are still; then the ukelele brings in the first theme at which all begin to dance at once, more or less in and out towards each other bending their bodies and knees forward in rhythm to the music in the most graceful manner imaginable.

They change then and continue in a rather shuffling motion around the circle putting one foot down to each beat of the music. Then suddenly they whirl right around, their long clocks cutting graceful lines about their half naked bodies. These cloaks hang just back of the shoulders and go in the opposite direction. Then begins another variation, something like a Russian dance when they spring upon their toes, lightly lifting the legs forward and outward and squatting at intervals—something like the Tripok. The dance culminates in a symbolic gesture by the chief in which he dramatically prostrates himself, in one case bending his body way back from the kneeling position until his head touched his heels.

Enthralled With Dance

This dance so enthralled me that I could not pull myself from it. I looked at my watch and was shocked to find that it was 12.30. I think that I shall do a painting of this. (Have one of Alameda (park) already started.) It is simply amazing how these Indians can keep right on dancing away for hours and hours with scarcely a let up; even the little girl kept right on moving. One fellow standing beside me said: "They never seem to tire.

There was a fat man there, a Mexican with a camera, who walked right in and photographed and photographed. He had the chief pose for him. As time went by, I determined to get a picture of that chief, also; so at the end of an act, I walked over and said, "Potografia?" He knew what I was after and immediately put on a terrific pose which I took—gave him a peso for it.

Remarkable People

Those Aztecs are such a remarkable people. They are very proud, and well they might be, and do their dances with great dignity. The look upon their faces is a placid one. Their bodies are lithe, wonderfully proportioned and colored quite a dark brown-red. From all the dancing they do they should indeed be muscular.

They wear earrings and have sandals upon their feet. About the ankles are rings of shells which rattle when they move, which aids the rhythm. The young boy of the family carries a shield in the left hand; a wooden club in the other — an ancient war weapon of the Aztecs. Every time they dance, a crowd gathers and the majority of them stand there watching by the hour. The rhythm is contagious and I noticed feet tapping and two tiny tots were making their heads and arms move to the rhythm of the dance.

Red Sentiments

I also took in the Secretariat of Public Education today and saw the murals of Diego Rivera and Siquieros and even saw Rivera himself at work on one of his murals. He was perched upon a scaffolding. Actually, I think I prefer the work of Siquieros, although he is a confirmed communist. It is a bit shocking to see the red sentiments in his work here and there.

Only wish you could see these things for yourselves. Have to describe them, but it is not easy.

Arnold.

Deseronto Y.P.U. Entertains Anglican Young Peoples' Union

On Tuesday evening the Deseronto Y.P.U. entertained members of the Anglican Y.P.U. in the Sunday School rooms of the United Church.

The meeting opened with worship service conducted by Marion Aylesworth and assisted by Doris V. Twiddy.

A brief business period was held during which a warm and hearty welcome was extended to the Anglican Union.

Recreation was enjoyed by all and refreshments were served.

At the close, a friendship circle was formed and Rev. W. Neelands pronounced the benediction, thus bringing to a close a fine evening of Christian fellowship.

MT. VIEW W.I.

MOUNTAIN VIEW — The February meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was held at th ehome of Mrs. Clifford Barber with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. L. Wallbridge, presided and was in charge of business details. As there had been no program planned on the programs in advance, a sing-song was enjoyed, after which Mrs. Barber conducted a contest with the winner being Mrs. G. Neal.

Tables were then set up and a few games of progressive euchre were played with prizes for high going to Mrs. C. Watering and Mrs. E. Wallbridge; low, Mrs. W. Burkitt and Mrs. A. Poste.

Mrs. Barber, assisted by several ladies, and her daughters, served delectable refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

Mrs. Ben Anderson moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Barber for her hospitality.

British Beauties to Display Coronation Fashions at Swank Suvretta Lodge at St. Moritz

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Eight British beauties take off this month for St. Moritz and its swank Suvretta House, alpine vacation spot for the wealthy.

Against a background of snow-capped mountains and winter sunlight, the British girls will display the cream of the Coronation fashions designed by London's "Big Eleven" of haute couture. These were unveiled in a three-day showing in London late in January.

Sponsored by an export magazine (Ambassador), the St. Moritz fashion show Feb. 14 is designed to make Coronation fashions a real attraction to an international clientele, some of whom may later head for London and the Coronation.

In Wide Variety

One of the largest ever to leave Britain, the collection is intended to emphasize that simple British elegance will stand out in any crowd.

Clothes will cover every occasion. Smooth, slim suits by Michael of Lachasse with jackets lower at back than front, giving added softness to a round-shoulder line, will suggest shopping in town and coffee at the best hotels.

The semi-crinoline fullness of afternoon coats by Victor Stiebel, designer to Princess Margaret and the Duchess of Kent, is suited to Buckingham Palace garden parties. Fitted to the waist with corset precision and worn over printed surah silk dresses with slim lines and one-side hip fullness, they fulfil many social needs.

Classic Suits

Digby Morton shows classic suits with man-tailored shirts finished by stiff bow ties that match a tiny pancake hat. Hardy Amies, John Cavanagh, Mattli, Worth, Peter Russell; Charles Creed and Michael Sherard combine to produce "wearable" clothes. Not for them the styles that last only a season. British women like clothes that can be worn for perhaps three years.

The applause in St. Moritz, as in London, may well go to the Queen's designer, Norman Hartnell. The wearability in Hartnell's collection stretched from outdoor clothes to the evening gowns for which he is famous.

Most of his ball gowns this year had an airy lightness and semi-fullness that made them easily manoeuvrable. To these was added a special "white and gold" collection designed for Coronation wear. It included the most exquisitely-embroidered gowns any peeress could ask for to wear under peeress could ask for to wear under her ermine-tipped robes.

Two less elaborate designs were much applauded by the London audience—sheaths of gold lame draped with Grecian perfection.

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

We were surprised to see a particular one-paragraph news story from Washington this week which read: "President and Mrs. Eisenhower were among 50 new members who joined the National Presbyterian Church today. 'So far as I know,' said Rev. Edward L. R. Elson, 'this is the first time a President of the United States has joined a church while he was President'."

It certainly gives a person quite a shock to think that the great man Eisenhower was not a church member until this week. We wonder why at this time in his life he would join forces with organized religion.

Many of us have singled out for criticism leaders of other nations from time to time because they belonged to no church. To think that the President of the United States had no definite membership in a church until after he took office, is almost unbelievable.

Many people in democratic countries profess some sort of religion, but don't actually belong to a religious organization. But there are few leaders in political, military and civilian life who have not joined a church when they were younger.

It is indeed a jolt for church members to hear that the U.S. President only this week joined the church. But this one move by a great man shows us all that religion and belonging to the church, whatever kind it may be, are considered essentials to those holding positions of great trust in the democratic world of today. This step of Eisenhower's should stimulate church membership everywhere.

Scalp Remedy

If your baby or young child has dandruff or other scalp scale, try rubbing a little ordinary vaseline on the scalp. Then, raise the scale with a very fine scalp comb. These combs cost 5c in any dime store. This is a quicker and more effective scalp treatment for ordinary dandruff than all the special preparations put together.

Clean Laundry

Up at the National Research Council in Ottawa the scientists report having a machine which makes clothes dirty in order to help them find out how to get them cleaner. One thing is for sure. Homemakers will never be in the market for a dirtier-of-clothes machine, we can guess.

It seems that the Research people are working with laundries to try to find ways of getting clothes cleaner when laundered. You would just wonder why this is necessary. There are some commercial laundries which can now turn out clothes as white as new fallen snow. There are others who fail to do this for one big reason—that is, they wash their laundry in dirty water. A visit to a few commercial laundries is all that's needed to discover this.

June Haver Turns Back On Movies for Nun's Life

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress June Haver turned her back on movie-land today for the life of a nun.

The 26-year-old blonde dancing star whose salary rose to $3,500 a week but whose career also brought her personal tragedy, ended months of rumors about her intentions by issuing a statement Wednesday night.

Without disclosing her whereabouts, nor where and when she will enter a convent, Miss Haver telephoned the statement to her studio and asked that it be made public. It said:

"I am going away to prepare myself, by several years of prayer and study, for something I have been contemplating for the last two years. I am determined to be a Sister of Charity, with the grace of God and the aproval of His church, and to consecrate my life to the service of God in His sick and in His children.

"To do this will take more ability than I have. That is why I am going to prepare myself in a novitiate of work and prayer. If at the end of my two years of preparation, my religious superiors judge that I am able to do this, I shall consecrate myself by vow to this kind of life. . . ."

Sold Her Home

Miss Haver sold her home a year ago and recently auctioned her possessions, closed her apartment and moved in with her mother, Mrs. Marie Ottestad. She has terminated her nine-year association with 20th Century-Fox studio, her most recent contract running to Feb. 20.

She finished her last picture "The Girl Next Door," a musical comedy with Dan Dailey, last November and has done no movie work since. The picture is yet to be released.

Born June Stovenour in Rock Island, Ill., Miss Haver came to Beverley Hills, Calif., as a youngster. She said with Ted Fio Rito's band, then went into the movies in 1944 at $75 a week.

But as her movie star ascended, tragedy clouded her life. In 1947 she eloped with Jimmy Zito, swing band trumpeter. Later they were married in the Roman Catholic Church. But the marirage ended in divorce a few months later.

She resumed an old friendship with a dentist, Dr. John Duzik, and they planned to marry, but he died after a short illness in October, 1949.

Miss Haver visited the Vatican in Rome during the Holy Year pilgrimage in 1951.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Stop trying to appease a vengeful mother

It's hardly necessary to say that there's practically no woman in the world who wouldn't make every possible effort to keep on happy terms with her mother. Unfortunately, however, there are some mothers so neurotic, and so maladjusted, that, in spite of anything their children do, no happy relationship can be maintained.

It's bad enough when a mother treats all her children alike. But when she singles out one upon whom to vent her special displeasure, the whole thing becomes an even greater problem.

One woman writes me that ever since she was a small child her mother "has gone out of her way to let me know she never liked or wanted me around. She told me that I never would be any good; that no one would ever marry me and that she wished for me a pigsty when I did get ready to leave home."

Happily, Fate ignored the mother's wishes, and her daughter married "a wonderful man" and now lives "in one of the nicest homes in town."

In spite of this—or, more likely, because of it—the mother's antagonism has not abated in the slightest degree.

"Although I've never done anything to be ashamed of," her daughter writes, "to this day my mother will tell me that I'm bad, and always was. My dad and I got along beautifully, and were very close. He has now passed away, and my mother lives with one of my married sisters whom she is always running down behind her back but to her face is sweet as honey.

"There are six of us children, all married, and I love all my brothers and sisters dearly. Most of them are wise to mother and her ways, except one of my sisters, who happens to be the one I chum with most.

"As long as I bend over backward for my mother—and believe me I do— my sister and I get along fine. We visit each other a lot and go out together and really enjoy each other. Then comes the day when my mother comes down to my house to pick a fight and insult me, and naturally I don't have to take that any more, so I defend myself. I never say anything bad or mean to her, but usually tell her that if she thinks so badly of me she should not bother with me and I'll not bother her. This I do at my husband's advice.

Puts on Act

"Then she goes storming up to this sister of mine and puts on a great big act—and, believe me, it is an act—saying that I gave her a heart attack. My sister then becomes politely cold toward me until mother's conscience bothers her and down she comes to my house again, expecting me to fall all over her, and in the interest of peace, I usually do. Then my sister warms up once more and again we're pals."

This distressed daughter ends her letter by saying that she has always tried to do everything she could for her mother, making a special effort just because of her mother's bitterness towards her, but she gets nowhere.

"People tell me I try too hard to please her," she says, "yet I don't want any of my family to say I was the cause of my mother having a heart attack, so I'll keep trying. She showers my other sisters with gifts and tells them not to tell me. I don't want gifts, but it does hurt."

My first guess on reading this letter is that the antagonism of this woman toward her daughter may stem from the fact of the close relationship between the daughter and her father. Because the father and daughter were temperamentally more congenial than the girl and her mother, it is likely that the mother was jealous of their closeness and took it out on the girl. Through the years, this jealousy has hardened into a rigid antagonism, so that it has now become such a fixed attitude that I doubt very much if anything the daughter did could conciliate her mother.

Accept the Fact

This being so, I think the daughter should transfer her effort from trying to appease her mother to trying to accept the fact that she is not going to be able to do so. At present, she is keeping in a state of emotional turmoil because her over-sensitive conscience interminably goads her into repeated efforts to change an unchangeable situation. If she could once make herself understand that there is nothing she can do, and so go on being polite to her mother but stop knocking herself out over it, she might be able to live more at peace with herself.

It would be a fine thing if she and her family could move away and live at such a distance from the mother that she could not keep coming to the house and making trouble. Since the husband seems to be a sympathetic and understanding person, she might talk this over with him. Of course it would be hard to pull up stakes and settle down in a new environment, but if it is going to mean all the difference between this woman living in a constant emotional upheaval and living quietly and normally, it would certainly be worth it.

If the husband's business or other considerations make such a move completely impossible, however, then, as I see it, she has just two alternatives.

One I have just mentioned, when I said that she might try treating her mother with casual politeness but showing her no special attentions. The second alternative would be to tell the mother quietly, but very firmly, that if they cannot get on together as mother and daughter should, then they had better not see each other at all. Even though this course would doubtless precipitate a certain amount of trouble for a time, it might well prove the turning point of the situation. For if the mother were made to understand that her daughter did not intend to be browbeaten any more, it might give her a new respect for the daughter that would in time lead to better things. And even though, also, a definite stand caused the sister she mentions to treat her coldly for awhile, she, too, might in time come around.

Be all this as it may, I am afraid this woman will have to make a choice among the courses I have mentioned unless she prefers to go on forever in the same state of misery and frustration that tortures her now.

London Fashion

This white brocade gown from the spring collection of Arthur Banks of London illustrates the effect of Coronation ceremonies on fashion. Destined to be worn in Westminster Abbey by peeresses attending the Coronation, the off-shoulder effect is necessary for the proper display of the crimson robes which will be worn over the gown.

QUESTION:

Quite some time back you printed recipe for pickled eggs, with the secret of keeping the yolks from turning color. If at all possible would you give me this recipe.—R. L. P.

ANSWER:

PICKLED EGGS

Twelve hard-cooked eggs (see below), 1 quart spirit vinegar, 1 teaspoon each dry mustard, salt, pepper, (or instead of dry mustard use 1 tablespoon mustard seeds, 1 bay leaf, 6 cloves; if desired hard-cooked eggs may each be stuck with a few whole cloves). Remove shells from eggs. Boil vinegar and seasonings together from 3 to 5 minutes. Cool and pour into glass jar with cover. Drop in eggs. Cover and let stand at least ten days before using. If desired vinegar may be colored with green vegetable coloring which tints the whites and gives pretty effect when eggs are sliced. To Hard-Cook Eggs —Put eggs in cold water to cover; bring to simmering point, do not boil. Cook at simmering point, covered, for 30 minutes. Drain, cover with cold water at once to chill through, then peel.

QUESTION:

. . . would you kindly put a recipe in the paper for Patience candy? I bought a candy thermometer and do not know what temperature to boil it to.— G. G. S.

ANSWER:

I must apologize G. G. S. It was I who was obtuse over your first letter.

PATIENCE CANDY

Three cups granulated sugar, 2 cups milk, 3 tablespoons butter, 1-8 teaspoon salt. Put 1 cup sugar in saucepan and slowly heat, stirring until dissolved and golden brown and caramelized. Slowly add 1 cup hot milk (this will sputter so be careful and turn your face away) and stir until caramelized sugar dissolves into the milk. Add all remaining ingredients and cook to 236 deg. Fahr. Remove from heat at once and begin beating. Beat until it begins to retain the marks of the spoon. (This is where the candy gets its name—for this beating takes some time.) Add 1-4 to 1-2 cup chopped toasted almonds. Press into a buttered pan. Mark into squares and cool.

QUESTION:

. . . I loaned my French Bread recipe and haven't been able to get it back. Could I have it again? The one that includes the glaze of 2 teaspoons cornstarch dissolved in water then stirred into 1-3 cup boiling water and cooked until clear. It was the first time I'd ever seen it. . . . I tried the cherry coffee cake and found it didn't bake in 25 minutes . . but baked my second one 35 minutes at 350 deg. and by baking it longer it was grand. —Mrs. C. H. W.

ANSWER:

I am glad you were able to rectify the Cherry Coffee Cake—it may have been because your oven temperature receded a little with all of the other things baking in the oven. It could be your oven thermometer is registering a little low. Thanks for the tip just the same.

FRENCH BREAD

(With glaze) (1 loaf)

Into a warm bowl put 1 cup lukewarm water and add 1 cake compressed yeast and let stand without stirring for five minutes, then add 1 tablespoon soft shortening and stir until shortening is dissolved. Add 1 1-2 teaspoons salt and from 3 1-2 to 3 3-4 sifted bread flour. First mix with spoon, then with hand in the bowl. When dough begins to leave sides of bowl as you mix it is ready to knead for five minutes. Put in greased bowl, cover and let rise until doubled. This is a firm dough and requires maximum rising time. Punch down in bowl, thrusting fist into dough, pull edges into centre and turn dough over in bowl. Let rise again until doubled. Roll into an oblong 15x10 inch. Roll up tightly toward you, beginning with wide side, seal edges by pinching. With one hand on each end roll gently back and forth to lengthen loaf and taper ends. Place diagonally on lightly greased cornmeal-sprinkled baking sheet. Make 1-4-inch gashes at 2-inch intervals. Let stand uncovered about 1 1-2 hours in warm place. Brush top with cold water. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes. Brush with glaze: mix 1-2 teaspoon cornstarch with 2 teaspoons cold water, then add 1-3 cup boiling water. Cook over boiling water 5 minutes, stirring twice. After bread has baked 10 minutes at 425 deg. brush with this cooked glaze, reduce heat to 375 deg. 30 minutes longer or until golden.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

RELAXATION AND REPOSE

One often hears the lament: "If I could only rest!" The woman who uses these words is a self-exhauster. She keeps active after fatigue gives warning that she should take it easy. She is then so tired she can't relax. She has taunt muscles and nervous knots and is altogether a most miserable and unhappy person.

The effect upon her appearance is all too evident. Her skin is pale and there are shadows under her eyes. She is courting all manner of beauty griefs and might as well throw her beauty props out of the window. Also, she is in line for a fine case of nervous exhaustion that might very well put her out of circulation, land her in a hospital.

Racing thoughts keep her in a jittery state. We are aware that tenseness of the mind is reflected in a rigidity of the muscles. In order to permit the body to relax, the mind must be at rest. It is easy to tell one not to worry but, when we attempt to apply this advice ot ourselves, we have difficulties.

Much good can be done by training the body to go limp. If you feel that you are worn ragged, are just about dead on your feet, stop all activities, lie down, close your eyes and try to think about nothing at all. It can be done. You can hypnotize yourself a little by repeating the word "rest" in your mind, while taking long deep breaths. Make your body feel heavy.

The woman who is always tired is a dreary companion, not only for others, but for herself. She has driven herself beyond her strength and is feeling sorry for herself. Self-pity has a deplorable effect upon the spirits and the disposition and it has a bad effect upon the health. Appetite departs so nutrition is not normal.

Sleep may not be refreshing, but fitful, with periods of wakefulness.

The human machine has its limitations. Nature has written down certain laws; you break them at your own risk.

More outdoor life will often pick up a weary woman, put her on her feet. Drawing fresh air into her lungs stimulates circulation, which is seldom normal when one is utterly spent. Getting out of the house is necessary for the homebody, who is tied down to long hours of duties that are bound to be more or less routine and tiresome. The role of wife and mother is a noble one, but you can't carry on successfully and in a state of good nature unless you are up to standard health.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. C. BEECKMAN

Tip on glove-manners

Lady, you should take off your gloves before you start to eat or drink, before you start to smoke, to play cards, or to powder your nose or apply your lipstick.

No knives are placed on buffet table unless they are going to be used

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The other day in your column you said that knives should be placed on the table even when the menu does not call for a knife, for luncheon, dinner, and so forth; that "a knife and fork form the basic pattern of an individual place setting." Does this apply also to buffet table settings?—Helen T.

No. As you quoted, I was referring to individual place settings . . . that is, a knife, as well as a fork, should be a part of an individual place setting, even if the knife is not called for by the menu to be served. But on a buffet table (where individual place settings are, of course, not used), knives are not placed unless they are going to used. And, as a matter of fact, hostesses at buffet parties generally try to choose menus that are conveniently eaten with forks only, no knives necessary. This saves important space in the buffet setting; is more practical for guests.

Correct form for formal invitations to second marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In the spring I am to be married for the second time, and I am planning to send formal wedding invitations. I have met with considerable difference of opinion as to the wording, and would appreciate your help very much. My father is a widower. I think the invitations should read (all names are not real names):

Mr. A. N. Smith
requests the honor of your presence
at the marriage of his daughter Mrs. Mildred Smith Brown
to
Mr. Michael J. Greene son of Mr. and Mrs. John Greene
etc.

Am I right about the wording?—M.

No. The following form is correct:

Mr. Albert Nash Smith requests the honour of your presence
at the marriage of his daughter
Mildred Smith Brown
to
Mr. Michael John Greene
etc.

Note 1: In such formal items as wedding invitations, avoid using initials.

Note 2: In formal wedding invitations and announcements, honour is spelled with the u.

Note 3: The title is not used before your name.

Note 4: The names of the groom's parents are not given.

Groom's father may properly be best man

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle an argument, please answer this: Is it correct for the groom to have his father as best man?—C. and C.

Yes. This is not at all unusual.

Meat, Potatoes, Two Fine Foods

Meat and potatoes — they usually are a mainstay for dinner and sometimes for supper too. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture, have just finished reading a quite fascinating book about potatoes. The book is written by Salomon — an English writer and is entitled "The History and Social Influence of the Potato." Some of the tales or beliefs and customs centred around potatoes are most interesting. If you have time and want to read about potatoes, see if you can get it from your local library.

The author recounts that in Ireland, in early days, potatoes were always planted on Good Friday and throughout the growing time the crop was watered with holy water. Here's an amusing tale. A peeled potato, if carried in the pocket on the same side as an aching tooth will cure the latter as soon as the potato itself is reduced to crumbs. Here's another funny one. A dried tuber carried in the pocket or suspended from the neck is a sure cure against rheumatism. Now we have some funny tales about potatoes too. Some people say they are fattening and other people say you do not need to eat potatoes, but actually they are one of our best foods and we should make a point of eating them at least once a day.

Meat, Potatoes "Go Steady"

Potatoes appeal to nearly everyone and so they should, for they are satisfying and on the nutrition side they are high in energy value and contain some of the precious vitamins we all need. Whether it is a special dinner or just a family supper, potatoes have an important place. For the special dinner they can be dressed up but for family meals they can be served almost any way.

Think of two foods that "go steady" for almost every dinner. The two things which immediately come to mind are — meat and potatoes. Some times the potatoes dress for dinner as "Oven-Style French Fries". It is simple to get them ready for the party. Peel potatoes into fingers lengthwise about half an inch in width. Then soak them in cold water for at least 30 minutes. Drain thoroughly and place in a shallow baking pan. Add a small amount of melted fat, about two tablespoons for six potatoes, season with salt and pepper, and bake in a hot oven, 524 degrees F., for about 45 minutes. Turn the strips once or twice during the baking. This method is much easier than standing over hot fat, deep frying them. Serve these Oven French Fries with broiled steak, they make a perfect couple.

Another meat and potato combination is "Little Pig Potatoes." Using an apple corer, cut out the centres of medium large potatoes, stuff a small sausage in the hole, seal both ends with pieces of potato and put them in the oven to bake. A little while before the potatoes are done, remove the core and allow the sausages to brown. This potato meat dish appeals especially to children.

A "no better, no fuss" casserole dish is scalloped potatoes with ham. Juicy, tender and flavorful, the ham adds something special to the potatoes. Use alternate layers of potatoes and ham and add a few slices of onion for flavor. Serve this dish for supper and the family will eat every last scrap.

Leftover Potatoes

Home economists state that potatoes can be as good to eat as leftovers, as they are the first time out. They have sent some suggestions for using leftover potatoes. The first is an old idea with a new twist. When making a mashed potato crust for a meat pie, add a little chopped onion, some diced green pepper and celery and some grated Cheddar cheese to the potato mixture. This gives a crust with wonderful flavor and color.

Meat and potato cakes are a quick, easy supper dish which any homemaker would like to serve. Combine about one and one-half cups of diced or ground cooked meat with two cups of mashed potatoes. Add a beaten egg and a little minced onion. Combine the mixture thoroughly and mould it in the cakes. Brown the cakes in a little hot fat and serve them piping hot. A can of condensed cream of mushroom soup or cream of celery soup makes a good sauce to serve with the cakes. Children love them, especially when the outside is done crisp and brown.

Is omelette served in your home as a supper dish? It probably is because it is such a popular dish. Vary the next omelette you make by adding some diced cooked potatoes and some crumbled cooked bacon. The potatoes and bacon make the omelette a little more filling for the men folk who often complain that egg dishes don't "stay with you."

Fashion Flashes

RIGHT FOR NIGHT wear, and for daytime wear as a bridesmaid's dress, is a new model in sheer silk taffeta in a wide array of pastels. The strapless dress has a flat-pleated hemline and a shirred midriff. For daytime duty it is covered by a matching shrug jacket with slightly shirred sleeves.

LOOKING NEW under fur coats is the dress or slim suit of cotton tweed. A handsome two-piece dress is of cotton tweed in a black, white and purple mixture. The almost sleeveless top has a curved collar, closes through the slim torso with four jet buttons, and has pocket flaps of white leather, fringed at the edges and laced with black satin ribbon.

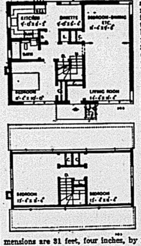
HOUSTON'S "HOME OF THE WEEK"



Designed by Ottawa architect, M. G. Dixon, here is a new 1½-storey house that is planned to meet the needs of the growing family. All the conveniences of a two-bedroom bungalow are offered by the ground floor room arrangement but, when the upstairs bedrooms are finished, the house becomes either a four-bedroom dwelling or a three-bedroom house with a separate dining room.

The kitchen, with its compact U-shaped arrangement of equipment and counter space and adjoining dining area, will appeal to many housewives as will the generous supply and variety of closets which serve every room.

The large corner window in the living room and the flower box at the right of the front entrance round out an attractive exterior appearance. Unbroken roof lines, a rectangular foundation and a plumbing arrangement serving the kitchen and bathroom spell economy.

The exterior finish of the house is brick veneer with stucco or wood siding on the gable ends. The floor area is 1,220 square feet and the cubic measurement is 19,270 cubic feet. Exterior dimensions are 31 feet, four inches, by 25 feet, eight inches.

Working drawings for this house, known as Design 303, are available from The Houston Co. at minimum cost.

Hawks Bench Vets, Call Up Youngsters In Effort To Halt Losing Streak

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

WOW, WOTTA WIN!

It looked to be in the Truckers' "bag" as the clock read 16.51 in the third period. The Oshawan had unleashed a sudden drive that netted them two goals in 16 seconds and they appeared to be well on their way to victory with a 6-3 margin. Then it happened. The Glens suddenly struck back and before the smoke had cleared the score was tied with just 29 seconds to go and the Oshawa management could not believe its eyes.

Then came Dougie Bastedo's waist-high blast after nearly two minutes of overtime and although the Glens didn't know it at the time, it was the winnah.

It was a sensational comeback, to say the least, and the Glens have proved that while there is time there is hockey hope.

It was one of the best thrillers seen in senior "B" action this winter. The checking was terrifically hard but clean and we didn't see a pushing match all night. The Truckers had an edge in the back-checking department with the squads all even on the speed metre. It was fast, brilliant, eye-pleasing hockey, garnished, of course, with the Glens' thrilling last-minute successful bid for victory.

The Glens needed the victory for down in Kingston the desperate Peterborough Petes battling with their backs to the wall for a playoff berth, handed the Goodyears a 6-4 setback. Now methinks its the Goodies turn to worry about that spot in the playoff sun. They dropped back to second place behind the Glens last night and are but three scant points in front of the Petes. They play in Orillia tonight and meet the Glens here Monday night.

A victory over the Goodyears here Monday will practically put the Glens "in". At least that is the way the "experts" figure.

HAWKS TOO!

It was Belleville's night to howl all around the hockey circuit. Up in Peterborough, the junior Hawks gave the Triple Links' playoff aspirations a jolt with an 8-6 victory. The Hawks have clinched top-spot but they're not letting up in their quest for victories, irregardless of what the opposition may be composed of. They realize that when the playoffs start, it is a new series and schedule performances are just water under the hockey bridge. Many a league-leader has been clobbered in the playoffs and the Hawks have no intention of going off-stride as all teams can be tough when the chips are down.

BATTLE OF THE BLUES!

Don't look now, but on March 5th., ye olde grudge hockey battle between Chief Walter Probert's Limbs of the Law, aided and augmented by Inspector A. McDougall's "Prowlers", and Chief Gerald Vance's Smoke-Eaters of the Fire Department, is scheduled to take place. Even now there is skullduggery afoot in both camps, with both sides openly boasting they'll come up with a couple of Boom-Booms, a brace of Beliveaus and a Rocket or two (that, we must see). The proceeds will go to the Crippled Children's Fund of the Belleville Shrine Club—a right worthy cause.

Landy Fails Again to Break Record, Headwind Factor in Second Attempt

MELBOURNE (AP) — John Landy, Australia's premier miler, failed again today to break the world record for the mile. He won the Victorian mile championship at Olympic Park in the comparatively slow time of 4:11.

Landy never had a chance to lower Gunder Haegg's world mark of 4:01.4. A strong headwind on the straightaway hindered all the runners in the race and the track, although well rolled, showed signs of being heavy.

"I know when I have had my chips," Landy remarked after the race. He said he was still feeling the effect of his two-mile run at Geelong last Wednesday when he set an Australian record of 9:01.2.

Landy's time compared to his 4:02.2 over the same track last December and his times of 4:02.8 and 4:04.2 in two races last month.

Didnt' Look Fit

The 22-year-old Melbourne University student didn't look fit to set a record and afterwards said: "I will give up running for the rest of the season now."

Landy, who won the race by 8) yards, took the lead at the start and turned in a first quarter of 59.2 seconds.

Geoff Warren, Landy's clubmate, took over the lead near the half-mile mark, run in 2:01.8, in an effort to speed the pace.

But Warren fell exhausted 150 yards further on and Landy again had to set his own pace.

Up to the end of the third lap he looked as if determined to make a good time, but the wind hit him. He seemed to stagger against it for a while, then appeared content just to win the race and the Victorian title. The three-quarters was run in 3:07.4.

Sport in Brief

NEW YORK (AP)—Pierre Langlois, a rugged French import, upset favored Rocky Castellani of Luzerne, Pa., Friday night to win a split 12-round decision in the first of a series of elimination bouts for the American version of the middleweight title vacated by Sugar Ray Robinson.

The bitter brawl, that saw many of the ring rules ignored in the closing rounds of rousing action, changed the small crowd's early boos to cheers. Time after time referee Ruby Goldstein warned both battlers for hitting on the break, holding and wrestling.

After Langlois suffered a bad gash over his right eye in the 10th round, he threw all caution to the winds to launch a right-handed attack against his highly-ranked opponent.

A right hand punch and a healthy shove knocked Castellani down just before the bell ended the 11th. There was no count but Goldstein ruled it an official knockdown.

Langlois weighed 160, Castellani 159½.

TORONTO (CP)—Tom Beattie's Toronto rink will represent this area in the Ontario curling championships which open here next Thursday. They qualified Friday by defeating Gordon Campbell's Toronto Granites 11-10.

BUFALO, N.Y. (CP)—Joe Farrell's 41-point scoring spree brought Buffalo State Teachers' College from behind to take a 104-94 exhibition basketball win over Toronto Friday night. The Canadians were on top 52-46 at the half.

Fogolin, Hucul, Gee Sit It Out As Abel Tries Young Blood; Dickie Moore Back With Habs

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A stocky youngster who hasn't played in a National Hockey League game all season may be the key to Montreal's hopes for a league title.

Dickie Moore, a left-winger who has been old enough to vote for barely a month, hasn't worn a Canadien sweater since he suffered a knee injury during one of the last games of last year's regular schedule. But before he was hurt, he set the NHL afire.

Moving up from Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior Hockey League just after the new year, he sank 18 goals and tallied 33 points in 33 games.

Dog Habs

Only one other NHL player scored at a point-a-game clip last season—Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings. The Wings are dogging the Habs these days. Only a single point behind them, the Canadiens need someone to back up Maurice Richard's one-man assault on rival NHL goalkeepers.

Moore may supply that backing when he steps onto the ice Sunday night against New York Rangers and tries to pick up where he left off last spring. But tonight the Canadiens face the Wings without him.

Loss of Bernie Geoffrion, last season's NHL rookie award winner who suffered a shoulder injury last Wednesday, makes Moore's return the more welcome—if the trick knee holds out.

First indications are promising. In five warm-up games with Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League, Dickie got a goal and three assists for a last-place club.

Small Fry?

Following their first-place battle Saturday, the Wings and Canadiens tackle smaller fry. Canadiens visit the tail-end Rangers at Madison Square Garden while the Wings travel to Boston for a date with the Bruins, currently in a fourth-place tie with Chicago.

The fading Black Hawks, winless in their last five starts, engage in a home-and-home series with Toronto's third-place Maple Leafs, but some familiar faces will be missing from the Chicago line-up.

Coach Sid Abel has benched defenceman Lee Fogolin and forwards George Gee and Fred Hucul for the Toronto game, filling their spots with two lend-lease amateurs and a recruit from the western hockey league.

In Fogolin's blueline spot will be Jack Price, borrowed from Chatham Maroons of the Ontario Hockey Association senior loop. Jim McBurney, a high-scoring winger with Galt Black Hawks of the OHA's Junior A division, and Sid Finney, recently acquired from Calgary Stampeders, are the two new forwards.

The Leafs, a bare two points in front of Chicago, still are short three regular centres: Ted Kennedy, Max Bentley and Rudy Migay. Danny Lewicki, recently recalled from Pittsburgh Hornets of the AHL, will fill in.

Gavilan, Davey 'Dirty Fighters' Say Managers

CHICAGO (AP)—Both welterweight champion Kid Gavilan and challenger Chuck Davey were depicted as dirty fighters in a debate between their handlers which spiced an official briefing Friday for their title fight next Wednesday night.

The exchange of uncomplimentary remarks occurred after the Illinois state athletic commission was told by its examining physicians that Gavilan and Davey were in excellent physical shape.

Angel Lopez, Gavilan's manager, asked the commission to see that Davey refrains from open-hand slapping and back-handing.

"We want a clean fight, but if Davey is dirty, we'll give him dirty right back," said Lopez.

Issy Kline, Davey's trainer, countered with a charge that Gavilan must be watched for grabbing an opponent by the neck with his left hand and hitting him with his right.

Kline also said it would be well if the bout officials take into consideration that a round lasts three minutes and Gavilan is accustomed to fight in "little flurries" to catch the eye of fan and judges.

Lopez retorted that Gavilan fights all three minues of each round "as the fans of the whole world know."

Halifax Rink Takes Honors In Quebec Spiel

By KEN STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—E. W. Sprigg's Halifax Mayflower curlers copped top honors Friday night when they captured the Chateau International trophy with a 13-8 victory over Paul Ruel's Quebec Curling Club aggregation at the 40th Quebec international bonspiel.

The Halifax rink also leads in the Grand Aggregate event with seven wins against one loss and no games left to play. However, the winner of the Grand Aggregate award will not be decided until the end of the 'spiel later today.

Also winning honors in final-round play Friday night was A. F. Muth's Quebec Victoria foursome, grabbing off the Ometa International Trophy for the second year in a row. He defeated Dr. M. R Stalker's Ormstown, Que., team 12-9.

Nazaire Lemelin skipped his Quebec Etchemin club to a 12-8 victory over D. P. J. Kelly's Toronto Granite quartet to win the Francois Jobin International Gold Cup. The trophy was held by Copper Cliff, Ont., skipped to victory last year by A. Canapini.

Nelson Findlay skipped his Toronto Royal Canadian Curling Club to victory over Adelard Lafrance's North Bay team 10-9, to carry home the Holt Renfrew International Trophy.

Lafrance won his semi-final match by defeating H. F. Jardine, Woodstock, N.B. 15-9.

Findlay's rink was winner last year of the Grand Aggregate award and the Cite de Quebec International Cup.

As the 'spiel rolled into the final day of competition, Quebec Curling Club, skipped by Joseph Lemieux, defeated Ed Robertson's Ottawa Curling Club 13-6 to advance into the semi-finals of the Royal Bank Centenary Trophy.

In quarter-final play for the Quebec Citadel trophy, R. Brodrique's Quebec Jacques Cartier rink was awarded victory against V. A. Selkirk's Peterborough aggregation, 10-0, after the Peterborough club protested to officials when they lost. Selkirk's club played the game with two spares.

OHA Suspends Eddie Bush Till Feb. 28

TORONTO (CP)—Playing coach Eddie Bush of the Collingwood Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate A defending champions was suspended Friday night until Feb. 28 by the OHA executive.

Bush pleaded ignorance when he refused to play overtime against Elmira Polar Kings at the insistence of referee Jack Hogan. Bush said he understood that no overtime was to be played in the group in which his team was playing.

Player Doug Caverson and manager A. Bartolini of the Stamford Senior B team were suspended until Feb. 1, 1954, for an altercation which took place Feb 1 at Port Colborne.

Caverson was tagged with a misconduct penalty. When he shoved referee Allan Jones of Dunnville he was given a match penalty. He then allegedly hit the referee and Bartolini called his team off the ice and refused to continue the game. Playing coach Hank Damore was exonerated of all blame.

Doug Hunter, right-winger for the Peterborough Senior B team had his five-game suspension lifted as of Friday night by the executive for his tussle with Alan Marshall of Orillia. The fight occurred during a game Jan. 23 in Peterborough.

Marshall suffered a broken jaw and lost several teeth when he was cross-checked by the Peterborough play after an exchange of words.

The executive also decided an unfinished Barrie-Toronto Marlboro Junior A game will not be played unless it affects the standing of teams other than Marlboros and Barrie.

Record Entry Of 25 Mushers In Dog Derby

OTTAWA (CP)—The fifth annual running of Ottawa's 66-mile international dog derby will be staged here Feb. 10 and 11 with a record entry of 25 mushers.

Alderman Dan McCann will start the drivers off Tuesday on the first of two daily 33-mile heats with a gold challenge trophy and a cash pot of $1,000 waiting at the finish. In addition to the trophy, the winner—the driver with the best combined elapsed time—will receive $500.

The race is scheduled to start and finish on the frozen Rideau canal within sight of Ottawa's Parliament Buildings but the course may have to be altered before post time because of skimpy snow conditions in some places.

Good Representation

Some 15 entries have been received from mushers in Quebec, Ontario and northern New York while the remainder have been received from the Ottawa district.

Heading the Canadian drivers will be Wilf (Pit) Lepine, 32-year-old master musher from Quebec City. The lanky, sure-footed employee of the Quebec licence bureau romped home the winner in 1950 and again last year.

Pats Win Hockey Title

IN KOREA (AP)—The Princess Patricias won the 25th Canadian Brigade hockey championship Friday on a frozen battlefront river while artillery blazed away in the background.

About 400 Canadian soldiers stood in a light snow at "Imjin Gardens" in 10-above-zero weather and watched the undefeated Princess Patricias defeat the Royal 22nd Regiment team 4-2.

The rink was marked out on a small arm of the Imjin river in western Korea, hence the "Imjin Gardens." The roll of artillery pounding at the front often thundered above the sound of cheering.

Flyers Share Top Spot With Marlies With 6-2 Defeat of St. Michaels

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two weeks ago followers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series would have given Toronto Marlboros the league championship. But that was two weeks ago.

Friday night the Marlies were forced to share their first-place berth with their rivals, Barrie Flyers, and for the next three weeks there should be a bit of shoving around going on before the winner is declared.

Both teams have nine scheduled games left. Should they still be deadlocked they have an unfinished game, played earlier this season, which they can complete for the final decision.

The Flyers moved into the first-place tie Friday night by defeating the third-place Toronto St. Michael's 6-2.

In other action, the fourth-place St. Catharines Teepees further dimmed Guelph Biltmores' hopes of snatching a playoff berth by downing last year's Memorial Cup champions 5-2. Galt Black Hawks, now fifth, trounced the last-place Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts 5-3.

There was no action in the Quebec loop.

It was Barrie's fourth win in five starts and the Flyers never looked better. Tony Polta and Orv Tessier each scored a pair of goals and Fred Pletsch and Ralph Willis notched the others.

St. Mikes' goals went to Jim Logan and Jack Caffery.

The second period was a disastrous one for Guelph's defensive line. It crumbled under the strong Teepee attack and allowed three scorers to slip through. Chuck Marshall, Eddy Metaka, Danny Poliziani, Hank Ciesla and Willy Haas were the Teeps' marksmen. Chuck Henderson scored both Guelph's goals.

Mayer Gets 3rd Straight 'Blank'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS)

Goalie Gil Mayer came through with his third consecutive shutout and Pittsburgh Hornets notched their ninth straight victory as they beat Providence Reds 1-0 in an American Hockey League game Friday night.

The victory put the defending champion Hornets into undisputed possession of first place. They're two points ahead of the idle Cleveland Barons.

Hornets scored early in the third period as Andy Barbe broke loose and slipped the puck into the cage from 10 feet out.

The shutout was Mayer's fifth of the season.

Glens Defeat Oshawa 7-6 In Overtime Thriller; Hawks Trim Petes Links

Even Count With 3 Goals In Sensational 3rd Period Rally; Bastedo Blasts Home Winner

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

In a sensational third-period comeback the Glen Roys scored three goals in a minute and 39 seconds to tie the count and went on to defeat the Oshawa Truckers 7-6 in the overtime session in a senior "B" super-thriller here last night.

Nearly 1400 fans saw the Glens battle desperately to wipe out a 6-3 deficit at 16.52 of the third period. They unleashed a sudden offensive that whittled the lead to 6-4 at that time and went on to fire home two more goals in 25 seconds to knot the score.

Doug Bastedo slammed home the winning goal after a minute and 59 seconds of the overtime session, and in a fine defensive display the Glens held off the furious Oshawa offensive and nearly added to their margin on three occasions.

With five seconds to go the Oshawa coach yanked the goalie but "Red" Doran batted the puck out of danger and the siren shrilled game's end and a thrilling win for the Glens.

TONY PARISI
Horatius at the Bridge

Needed Victory

The Glens needed the win to maintain their five-point margin over the Peterborough Petes who defeated the Kingston Goodyears 6-4 in Kingston last night. The results put the Glens at the top of the eastern section with 22 points. Kingston is second with 20 and the Petes trail closely with 17.

The game here was easily the best senior "B" battle seen in Memorial Arena this winter. Both teams hit a terrific tempo at the start and maintained it throughout. The checking was close and hard but the game was cleanly played with the teams splitting six minor penalties handed out by Referees Bill Gleason and Stan Scrutton.

Tony Parisi came up with another sparkling performance in the Glen nets. The dark-haired boy fairly scintillated at times in hurling back the Oshawa goalward thrusts. Courtney, the Oshawa Generals' junior "A" subgoalie did net duty for the Truckers and he too, turned in an outstanding chore.

The Jones, Doran, Mulholland line stole the limelight for the Glens although the other attacking divisions came up with fine efforts. Vern Goyer, Johnny Green and Huck Reeves shone on the defence with Goyer starring with a pair of goals.

Peter Jones and Sammy Mulholland scored a goal and two assists each. Brian Mulvihill got one as did Jerry Desjardins and of course Doug Bastedo battered in the "million-dollar" tally in that hectic overtime session.

Samolenko and Boniface came up with two goals each for the Truckers and Tisdall got one and two and McBeth one.

Started Early

Parisi kicked out two shots in the first period before the puck was cold and the Truckers swept in on the Glens' goal-line. Play surged up and down the ice with Doran missing by inches and in turn Parisi kicking out an Oshawa close-in shot. It was a hard checking hockey with both teams at top speed. Brian Mulvihill broke the scoring ice halfway through the period when he picked up a loose puck and drove it past Courtney.

Boniface got that one back seven minutes later on a drive with Peters and Hooper. His shot was stopped by Parisi who dropped it and it trickled over the line. Both teams missed from close in and the period ended one-one.

Semark got the gate at 5.18 in the second period but the Glens carried the play and Doran broke into the clear but fell as he was about to shoot. It was rip-roaring nip-and-tuck hockey. Jones missed the open net by an inch and Parisi kicked out two streamers from three feet out.

Thaler went in alone but Parisi outguessed him. Goyer got in the clear and missed an open net. Samolenko sifted in on a power drive and scored on a passing play with Tisdall and Wilson for the only goal of the period.

Wide Open Action

The third period flamed into wide-open action. Boniface put the Truckers two up after two minutes of play, and Mulholland missed from close in. Then the Glen winger slipped Jones a pass and the sorrel-top narrowed the gap to 3-2. , McBeth golfed a forty-footer that Parisi never saw at the six minute mark but again the Glens cut the margin on Desjardins goal from De-Gray's wide flip.

The Truckers passing plays started to click and they fired home two goals in 18 seconds from Samolenko and Tisdall, the latter's barely trickling over the goal-line.

With less than four minutes to go the Glens cut loose with a savage offensive. Vern Goyer blasted the puck past Courtney from twenty-feet out and repeated at 18.06 from Huck Reeves pass. Twenty-one seconds later Sammy Mulholland stood the crowd on its feet with a smashing drive that tied the score. The clock read 18.31.

Came the overtime and the Glens tore in. From a power drive Bastedo blasted a waist-high shot that proved the winner, after a goalward drive with Jones and Mulholland. The Truckers drove hard in an effort to tie the count but the Glens defence held and on three occasions they missed the Truckers' lair by inches. Out came Courtney with five seconds to go, but time ran out.

The teams:

Oshawa — Goal, Courtney; defence, Dickens, McBeth; centre, Scott; wings, Wilson Samolenko; subs, Nelson, Holden, Berwick, Boniface, Thaler, Hooper, Tisdall, Peters.

Oxonians Win Over Cantabs

LONDON (CP) — Oxford University's hockey team, studded with Canadian Rhodes scholars, downed Cambridge 5-3 Friday night in their annual ice battle. The Cambridge team was comprised largely of players born and educated in Toronto.

Oxfor now has won 19 of the traditional games, Cambridge 11.

Hugh Ian Macdonald, University of Toronto Rhodes scholar, paced Oxford with three goals. Others went to team captain Alex Mackintyre of Lucknow, Ont., of the U. of T., and John Roundtree, one of six Britons on the team.

Star for Cambridge was Harry Boyd of Toronto, a U. of T. graduate, who scored two goals. A. C. Wells of Toronto, scored the other Cambridge counter.

Moon and the Weather

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted sportsman, author and creator of Solunar Tables)

For thousands of years folks who live in the outdoors or work in the outdoors have been of the opinion that the moon exerts its mysterious effects upon such things as plant growth, animal and fish behavior and the weather.

People who tend to be literal-minded — who insist upon having things on a two-plus-two-equals-four basis—refuse to take much stock in moon beliefs. They charge them up to folk lore and old wives' tales and let it go at that.

The fact remains, however, that a great many happenings in nature are timed exactly in the rhythm of the moon and its phases. Animal breeders know that gestation periods coincide with lunar phases and not, save incidentally, with our calendar.

Influenced by Moon

Certain shell fishes are plump and in season during the time of full moon and are lean and out of season at the time of new moon. The Palolo worm, which abounds in the waters around Fiji and other Pacific islands, appears at the surface of the sea each year at the last quarter of the November moon.

At the same time, land crabs in those areas deposit their eggs in the surface, certain fruits ripen. On the Massachusetts coast a sea worm swarms to the surface by myriads in the summer to shed its eggs and this creature, too, obeys the phases of the moon.

As you know, farmers for thousands of years have been planting their crops according to the phases of the moon. This custom is not in any sense restricted to the farmers of this country. It has been traced back to the ancient Egyptians, Romans and Greeks, thousands of years before the birth of Christ.

As I say, many people attribute these beliefs to superstition and folk lore and will take no stock in them. But every once in a while a scientist will make it his business to run down one of them and find out what makes it tick. More often than not he is surprised to find out that the "folk-lore belief" actually has a good basis of scientific fact and does indeed exist.

April Moon Feared

For hundreds of years, possibly longer gardeners have feared what is called the April moon. If you know what the April moon is, do not be discouraged. Not many people do know about it nowadays.

Actually, in the month of April, when the young and tender plants are just beginning to sprout above the soil, cold, frosty nights are apt to occur and do great damage to young growth. This happens on cloudless nights, when there is a full moon in the sky — hence, April moon.

This ties in with the general opinion of many of our Pennsylvania farmers that the colder weather of each month can be expected during the full moon. Minimum temperatures are experienced during the night, particularly on cloudless nights.

Now it has been reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science that this belief does stand up under close scrutiny. The report originates from Dr. Herbert Henstock of the University of Wales.

For several years the good Doctor has been studying the records of tweleve observatories, scattered from California to Australia. All of these records show quite conclusively, that the minimum night temperatures for each month are reached approximately at the time of full moon.

The drop in temperature, he says, is sometimes gradual, beginning as much as a week prior to full moon, but usually it occurs during the forty-eight hours of full moon. Sometimes the drop continued for a day or so after full moon.

Idea Not New

After I saw this report, I sought out a farmer of my acquaintance and asked him about it. "Shucks," he replied, "that's not new. I've known it for about forty years. You always get your coldest weather of the month during the full moon.

"And that's not all," he continued. "During full moon you hardly ever have any bad storms. If you have a job of work to do and you don't want rain storms, start it a couple of days before full moon. That's when you get your nice weather."

"And you watch it and see if I'm not right — you get your bad storms during new moon or thereabouts. My Daddy told me about that when I was a kid and I've been going by it ever since. It works out O.K."

Well, that checked out satisfactorily with Dr. Henstock's findings, but I was not satisfied. I asked my friend about what the farmers call a "wet moon" and a "dry moon." How did that tie in with what he had just told me?

My friend regarded me with a tolerant smile, such as he would use for a retarded pupil in the third grade. "Sure there's wet moons and dry moons. Everybody knows that. You know you get more rain some months than you do others. And you know why — the moon.

"If you can hang a powder horn on the tip of the new crescent moon, that means a dry moon. She'll hold water. If the crescent is upset, so she spills water out, you got a wet moon."

No Quick Answer

It will take a long time, I suppose, to find out exactly what moon effects do exist and to determine their extent, importance and power. Meanwhile, folks will smile when you talk about them and make circular motions with the index finger pointed at the temple.

"Looney," they say, "just plain looney." Where, I ask you, did that word originate? From the Latin word for moon, "luna — looney" is an abreviation or contraction of lunacy or lunatic.

They all said I was crazy when I first came out with the Solunar Theory and the Solunar Tables. Maybe I am. Who knows? And by what yardstick is insanity measured? All of us are a little crazy, when you come right down to brass tacks.

The fact remains that wildlife does respond to lunar phases, monthly, daily and hourly. We have proven that rather conclusively over the past thirty years.

So, crazy or not, get the habit. Keep track of the daily Solunar Periods. You will find that said habit pays good dividends in sport in the outdoors.

Grab First-Period 2-0 Lead And Never Looked Backward; Teams Split 8 Goals in Third

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

Belleville Black Hawks, having already clinched first place in their six-team junior "B" league, last night defeated Peterborough Oddfellows 8-6 in a stand-up thriller. The game was played at the Lock City arena.

Therrien led the Hawks with three goals, Jones and Halstead got two apiece, with Hull notching the other. Kearns got two for the losers, with Robinson, Ferguson, Frizelle and Wilson adding singletons.

Score Early

Davey Jones got the Hawks away winging early in the first period when he took Pete Green's pass at his own blueline, broke down the left side and let drive. Hobart got his glove on the puck but it trickled in. He got the second, grabbing the puck at the enemy line and waltzing in to score on a backhander.

Ron Halstead made it 3-0 as the second canto opened, banging in Doug Hull's goalmouth pass. The Oddfellows started to whittle on that lead immediately, Red Robinson beating Bobby Green with a low screamer. Claire Ferguson cut it to 3-2, batting home his own rebound.

Therrien made it 4-2, banking a shot from behind the Pete net off a defender's leg into the twine.

Tied it Up

The homester's tied it up while the third period was merely a baby. Jerry Frizelle drilled one past Green from the Hawk blue line and Roger Wilson made it 4-4 from in close.

Therrien sent the Hawks ahead 5-4, taking Gilmour's pass at his own defence and racing the length of the ice to tally. With Halstead off on a penalty, Jerry Kearns evened it up from the goalmouth.

Therrien again sent the visitors ahead 6-5, when he split the enemy defence after taking a Jones relay. Kearns came back to make it a new game from a scramble.

Halstead tallied what proved to be the winner with less than four minutes to go, combining with Hull on a beautiful rush. Hull tucked the game away with 29 seconds left, taking Jacklin's pass in the clear and picking the far corner.

The Teams

Forum Jammed For Tennis Show

MONTREAL (CP)—One of the largest crowds in North American professional tennis history, 13,800 —jammed Montreal Forum Friday night to see Frank Sedgman, Australian ace, defeat Jack Kramer 6-3, 6-4.

It was 13th victories for Sedgman over Kramer on their current professional tour. Kramer has won 10 times.

In the curtain raiser Pancho Segura downed Australia's Ken McGregor 7-5, 7-5.

Canuck Golf Officials OK Shorts Ban

By JIM BASTABLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canadian golf officials approve the United States ban on tournament-playing girls wearing shorts on the course. Even below-the-knee pedal pushers are frowned upon in this country.

"Let's concentrate on the game and forget the fancy stuff," says Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, Canada's 62-year-old first lady of the links who retired four years ago.

"Shorts are fine at a summer resort course, or something like that," Miss Mackenzie says. "In a tournament? No."

Canadian officials agree that the ban, announced last Saturday by the United States Golf Association, is good for the game. "It's more dignified that way," they said.

It's sort of an unwritten law in Canada that the "proper" attire for the course is a skirt. And Mrs. Campbell McKenzie of Toronto, chairman of the administration committee chairman of the Canadian Ladies Golf Union says:

"There is no official ban on women wearing shorts in club tournaments, but I would say 95 per cent of the private clubs throughout Canada refuse to allow them."

In Canada, the pedal pushers—they look like a pair of slacks snipped off a few inches below the knees — aren't taboo but officials say they "don't want to encourage them."

Cougars Trim Royals 6-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Victoria Cougars trimmed New Westminster Royals 6-2 and Edmonton Flyers blanked Vancouver Canucks 3-0 in Western Hockey League games Friday night.

Colin Kilburn fired two Victoria goals. Ed Dorohoy, Reg Abbott, Bernie Strongman and Jim Fairburn counted singles. Coach Max McNab did all the Royals' scoring.

Vic Stasiuk, Frank Haley and Larry Wilson counted for the Flyers.

Woman Catches Heel on Step Falls Down Stairs

TRENTON (Special) — Mrs. M. A. Ferguson of 140 Bay Street suffered no apparent injuries when she fell down stairs while leaving Wavona Beauty Salon on Dundas Street yesterday. She caught her heel on one of the steps and tumbled forward. She went to an optometrist to have her glasses fixed first, then to a doctor for a check-over.

Stan VanMeer, passing by in his truck, saw the woman's predicament and gave her a helping hand. While his vehicle was parked outside the optometrist's store a policeman put a parking ticket on it.

But the story ended on a happy note because when the police heard about VanMeer's mission of mercy they tore up the ticket.

MONTHTLY METING

The monthly meeting of the Belleville and District Canadian Holiness Federation was held on the Church of the Nazarene here on Division Street with over 100 in attendance.

Rev. L. Leslie Conley, pastor of Weslyan Methodist Church at Syracuse, New York, addressed the gathering in the morning and afternoon while the Rev. C. Chase, pastor of the Free Methodist Church at Frankford, talked in the evening.

Personals

Mrs. Leah Ryan, in hospital here for a few days, has returned to her home on Murphy Street.

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Alyea start their Mediterranian cruise from New York on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Clegg and Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Dwyer left by car last night for Florida and a winter vacation.

ACTING MANAGER

James Whytock, a graduate engineer with Central Bridge for some years, has been appointed acting manager, since President and general-manager Alex Hill, resigned recently. He is president of the Trenton Rotary Club this term.

MAY SPOIL HARVEST

This mild spell may spoil the ice harvest this year, according to the man who takes the sample for the purity test.

When Ernie Cunnell was out at the proposed cutting area the other day, the thickness of the ice measured between eight and nine inches. Since then there has been two mild days and rain conditions which are not helpful to ice-making.

Faltering Tribe Now Five Points Behind League-Leading Mercurys

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's been a frustrating season for Stratford Indians. To maintain their second-place berth in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, they've had to do some heavy pulling and in their efforts they've suffered many humiliations.

Friday night was an example. The fourth-place Brantford Redmen thrashed them 11-6, their second blow in as many games. Wednesday night they were whipped by Hamilton Tigers who have won only two games all season, both against the Indians.

Five Left

With only five games remaining in the schedule, they have to overcome a five-point lead held by Owen Sound Mercuries to win the league championship.

Two other games Friday night failed to change the league standings. Chatham Maroons, in fifth place, had to go all the way to down Hamilton 5-4. The third-place Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen defeated Sarnia Sailors, now in sixth spot, 5-2.

Sudbury Wolves were presented with the McNamara Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the league championship in the Northern Ontario Senior A southern group after defeating Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds 10-2.

Gordie Heale and Nick Tomiuk set a league record by scoring seven points each for the Wolves. Heale got three goals and four assists and Tomiuk two goals and five assists. Roly McLenahan scored a pair and the others went to Andy Milne, Durno Rondina and Tatter McClellan. Ronnie Lay scored both Greyhound goals.

AT THE McCARTHY—Hugh O'Brian, left, member of an early California frontier gang, is captured by Richard Conte, leader of a vigilante posse in this highlight scene from Universal-International's Technicolor "The Raiders." Swedish actress Viveca Lindfors shares star billing with Conte in the new film opening Monday at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE — The backstage romance between Stewart Granger and Eleanor Parker in "Scaramouche," showing today at the Belle for the last times is both tender and torrid. Also starring is Janet Leigh and Mel Ferrer. A Tom and Jerry Cartoon precede the feature attraction.

Valley Entry Loses to Hastings

Campbellford—Hastings trimmed Campbellford 10-4 here on Wednesday night, for the local's first loss of the season and their greatest reverse so far. The loss dropped them into second place, back of Marmora. Junior West, Cupoli, Dodds and Stevenson stood out for the victors.

J. West, Bell and Stevenson scored for them in the first, an assist each going to Dodds and Thompson. Eady scored for Campbellford from Cole and Pace. It was all Hastings for the next heat, Cupoli counting two, Ball, Dodds and J. West scoring one each. The latter had two assists, with one each going to Morrow, Stevenson and Cupoli. They added two next time out, Morrow and Dodds scoring, with Stevenson in on one. For the homesters, Free Herrington and Blake scored, the latter and Herrington each getting one assist.

The teams:

Hastings — Goal, O'Brien; defence, Morrow, Wilson; centre, Ball; wings, Burns, Thompson; alternates, Stevenson, Dodds, Isaacs, J. West, D. West, Cupoli, Fennell, Batley and McGillen.

Campbellford — Goal, Nelson; defence, Baker, Free; centre, Wilson; wings, Craig, Jeffs; alternates, Blake, Herrington, Payne, Eady, Reid, Cole, Pace and Taylor.

Referees—Romhanyi and Flint.

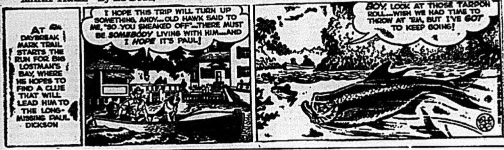
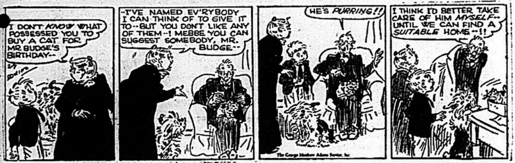
MARK TRAIL—By Ed Dodd



AT DAYBREAK MARK TRAIL STARTS THE RUN FOR BIG LOSTMAN'S BAY, WHERE HE HOPES TO FIND A CLUE THAT WILL LEAD HIM TO THE LONG-MISSING PAUL DICKSON
I HOPE THIS TRIP WILL TURN UP SOMETHING, ANDY... OLD HAWK SAID TO ME, "SO YOU SNEAKED OFF"...THERE MUST BE SOMEBODY LIVING WITH HIM...AND I HOPE IT'S PAUL!
BOY, LOOK AT THOSE TARPON ROLL...WISH WE HAD TIME TO THROW AT 'EM, BUT I'VE GOT TO KEEP GOING!

TIPPIE and "CAP" STUBBS—By Edwina



I DON'T KNOW WHAT POSSESSED YOU TO BUY A CAT FOR MR BUDGE'S BIRTHDAY--
-I'VE NAMED EV'RYBODY I CAN THINK OF TO GIVE IT TO--BUT YOU DON'T LIKE ANY OF THEM--! MEBBE YOU CAN SUGGEST SOMEBODY, MR. BUDGE--
HE'S PURRING!!
I THINK I'D BETTER TAKE CARE OF HIM MYSELF-- UNTIL WE CAN FIND A SUITABLE HOME--!!

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outolok is, according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY, FEB., 8, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Your head may be a whirl but keep your eyes on a straight road. Day can be tantalizing yet pleasant. First, heed spiritual devotions, family interests.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Day should be a treat for you dependable, likeable folks. All worthy endeavors and necessary tasks are sponsored.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—You may have to temper ambition with extra self-restraint. You can do well if you heed that. Start day at church.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Delightful tendencies, but be on guard. Much ado about nothing is wrong attitude. Try to say right things at right time.

June 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Look at the day from an outsider's viewpoint, we can get a better perspective that way. There is much for which to be thankful. But mind associations—especially now.

August 23 to Setember 23 (Virgo)—Three good pointers this on-again, off-again Sunday: Do things on time, with a smile, with your best ability.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—It will be a good day if you don't let anyone tell you it isn't, or otherwise depress you. Look at the blessings you do have. Show Libra's fine balance.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Don't hesitate too long—neither be too quick to speak act. Day asks more patience and stamina than may show on the surface.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Versatility is a keynote of this sector, and you have an opportunity now to display that asset. Remember that disposition and tactics are co-workers.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—There are some matters that require perusal, study. Getting some details attended to now can offset hurry and crowding during week. Remember church, of course.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Being patient isn't always letting things ride till they have veered in a direction you don't want. Speak up when you should, but with discretion.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Probably disappointing easiest days in a long while, yet this day may puzzle you, cause some concern. Be your philosophical self, smile throughout.

YOU BORN TODAY have more than a few talents, broad human understanding, natural desire for knowledge, and no jealousy even with those in your own field who may do unethical things to get ahead of you. But having talent and many assets can be a drawback if you don't do enough about them. Sometimes people with fewer abilities make more of what they have, eventually reach higher places. Birthdate of many writers and inventors.

RETURNS TO STUDEBAKER

NEW YORK (AP)—Paul G. Hoffman is resigning as president of the Ford Foundation to return to the Studebaker Corporation as chairman of its board of directors, it was announced Wednesday. Hoffman formerly was president of Studebaker, when he left to become first administrator of the economic co-operation administration.

"PINKY" WINS

WINNIPEG (CP)—Pinky Mitchell of the Ottawa RCAF Friday night won a hotly-contested decision over Jim Saunders, Canadian heavyweight champion, at the Winnipeg Auditorium. Mitchell, who weighed in at 162 as opposed to Sounder's 202 pounds, had a good first round and staggered his opponent badly in the fourth round of the five-round amateur battle.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR MONDAY, FEB. 9, 1953

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—If you are living your best, good results will eventually follow. We cannot stress it too often, be co-operative.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Completing others' work, the mechanical features of domesticity, handling appliances for use in the home are top favored today. News may help.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Vigorous business campaigns not as approved by aspects as easier moving, old familiar undertakings. Good rays on whole.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Be on alert for new ways to better your position, advance your line of endeavor. Avoid legal or personal differences.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—No exciting indications, but you people can usually manufacture new ideas. Attend duties first, then give time to home, family.

August 2c to September 23 (Virgo)—Could be one of your lucky days. Be sure to get early start. Heart interests rate high; also other personal affairs.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—A hearty healthy atmosphere! We hope you get the full benefit of every opportunity today offers. May have to dig deep for some benefits.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Should you have business or social engagements with a mixed group, be adroit. You handling confidential matters watch your step!

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Same advice as to Scorpio in meetings where new ideas are discussed. Be especially tactful.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Social and personal affairs seem to hold spotlight now. Artistic activities will appeal strongly.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Go easy on your budget; check recent expenditures. But don't bypass musts; do what you should cheerfully.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Probably disapopinting if you're out for spectacular progress. We suggest caution against rousing the displeasure of opposite sex.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with many qualities and talents, but they must be developed properly or they will be a reaction rather than a help. You have the capacity for great learning if you will fill it. A lover of good fun, good things to eat, and travel. You have ability in language, law, science, music, art. Birthdate of: Wm. H. Harrison, 9th U.S. pres.; Geo. Ade, Amer. humorist.

BIG CELEBRATION

WINDSOR, N.S. (CP)—The 250th anniversary celebrations of this municipality began Feb. 5 with a carnival featuring costumes of the early days of the town that started in 1703. Other events are planned for July 1 and at the Hants county exhibition later.

VETERAN CURLERS

RED DEER LAKE, Alta. (CP)—Robert Gillespie and Charles Dowling, Calgarians who were members of the original four rinks of the Red Deer Lake Curling Club, attended a reunion here. The local club was organized in 1900.

FARMING PRINCESS

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — Margaret Runner, whose father is one of the three head chiefs of the Sarcee tribe, is the first Indian princess to enrol at the provincial agricultural school. Her Indian name means "Singing Lady."

ADDICT WINS DAMAGES

SANTA FE, N.M., (AP) — A jury Thursday night awarded $12,500 damages to Joseph S. Coe and his wife, Jean, who sued Dr. Charles A. Benney and the Los Alamos medical centre on grounds Mrs. Coe had become a morphine addict under Dr. Benney's care. Mrs. Coe was cured of the addiction in a California hospital.

10,000 A-Bombs By 1960 Predicted By US Scientist

10,000 A-BOMBS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scientist who worked on the original A-bomb project said Friday the United States could attain a stockpile of 10,000 such bombs by 1960.

Dr. Ralph E. Lapp said he could "indicate" that the present stockpile of A-bombs "must be numbered in the thousands." Dr. Lapp, not now associated with the U.S. atomic program gave his views in a newly-published book, "The New Force."

Dr. Lapp directed one division of the Manhattan project, which produced the first bomb.

Cannery Prices For Tomatoes And Corn Lower

HAMILTON (CP) — A drop in prices for bulk corn and tomatoes was announced today following negotiations between the Ontario Vegetable Growers and the Canned Foods Association.

Corn prices were set at $25 a ton, down $1 from the 1952 price, a basic price of $33.

Peas remain at $98.50 a ton, the same price as last year.

Tomato prices are down $2 a ton. This year farmers will receive $38 a ton for first grade tomatoes, $28 for second grade, and

WEST HUNTINGDON

Central Hastings L. O. L. Installs 1953 Officers

West Huntingdon—The annual meeting of the Loyal Orange Lodge of the county of central Hastings was held on Tuesday in the Orange hall, Madoc, with an attendance of 79.

County Master Mr. Kenneth Holland, presided over both morning and afternoon sessions. Mr. Holland was presened with a Past Master's jewel by Mr. Fred Bateman Grand Master of Ontario East. He was also given a hearty vote of thanks for his efficient leadership.

Special Speaker

The special guest speaker for the afternoon session was Rev. W. Pace minister of Tweed United Church. Mr. Pace held the delegates attention as he presented his subject, "Building a Life."

The speaker compared building a life as similar to erecting a building; first, was the foundation, quoting from the scripture he stated that "Paul warned his people, when he said, take heed how you build?" Having discovered our task, then let us build the four walls of our life thus: 1st wall, purity; 2nd wall, honesty; 3rd wall, reverence; 4th wall, service.

Mr. Pace closed his wonderful address exhorting all present to strive to make the world better for being in it, stating also that ideals which he mentioned do not come by wishful thinking.

Mr. Archie Sinclair, of Tweed, voiced the appreciation of the members to Mr. Pace for his outstanding address.

Rev. J. F. Lane, minister of Trinity United Church, Madoc, accompanied Mr. Pace and he also gave a word of exhortation that was much appreciated.

Several invitations were made for the observance of the commemoration of the 12th of July, and it was decided to accept the Sulphide lodge invitation. The celebration will be held this year at Tweed on Saturday, July 11.

Officers Elected

Past County Master Ernest Coulter, of Roslin, conducted the election of officers for 1953, and those thus honored included: W.M. Gordon Moffat; D.M. Milton Hagerman; Chaplain, Rev. E. Beare; assistant Chaplin, Archie Sinclair, Sr.; Marshal, William Phillips; recording secretary, Arthur Wilson; treasurer, H. C. Martin; 1st lecturer, Gordon Carleton; 2nd lecturer, Geo. Gordan.

The above officers were duly installed by Grand Master Fred Bateman. Mr. Bateman also gave a fine address. He also attended the county meeting for South Hastings and had the honor of installing the officers there.

Extensive plans are under way to hold the Grand Lodge sessions in Belleville in April this year.

HUNTER SAVES HOUNDS

KEMBLE, Eng. (Reuters) — Huntsman Earl Bathurst, 25, Thursday risked his life to flag a train bearing down on a pack of 40 hounds who had just killed a fox on the track. As he rode to the kill Bathurst saw the train come out of a tunnel a quarter-mile away. He jumped from his horse, slid down a 110,foot embankment to the track and frantically waved his arms. The engineer pulled up a few feet from him.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Community Honors Recent Bride

Mountain View — On Wednesday evening a community shower was held for Mr. and Mrs. Warner Flanigan (nee Pearl Neal), in the church basement.

After a sing-song with Mrs. B. Anderson at the piano, Mrs. Flanigan, who was asked to come to the front, was seated in a nicely decorated chair. Miss Yvonne Poste read the address and Miss Nellie Sprague and Mrs. Arnold Wessels carried in a gaily decorated basket many times laden with gifts.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of the bridegroom, Miss Sylvia Flanigan, of Ottawa, his sister, assisted the bride in unwrapping the gifts.

The bride thanked everyone on behalf of her husband, and herself, after which the ladies served refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

White Swans Escape

HAMILTON (CP) — Two wild white swans showed bird lovers Thursday they could take care of themselves.

The swans, which made their home along the north shore of Hamilton Bay, became frozen in Thursday by a light crust of ice.

The Hamilton harbor commission prepared its amphibian ice boat but the craft wasn't needed.

As a crowd on shore watched, the swans freed themselves of the ice, huddled close together to open up a take-off strip and then took to the air.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Mountain View — Rev. H. H. Hillis spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Otho Herrington.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Howell, of Centre, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Anderson.

Miss Pauline Sprague, of Toronto University, was a weekend guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sprague and family.

Miss Mary Huff was a supper hour guest recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Sprung.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Moynes of Bowmanville, were week-end guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Keeble.

Mrs. Clarence Sprague spent Friday in Trenton visiting relatives there.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wessels visited relatives in Oshawa during the week-end.

MARMORA

Marmora — Messrs. G. Jones, R. Brown, F. Cole and W. J. Cottrell, of Marmora L.O.L., 319, attended the annual sessions of the County lodge at Madoc on Tuesday.

Mr. Archie Jones recently underwent a serious operation in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. William Meehan is a patient in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Mrs. Manley Lavender returned home from Belleville General Hospital on Thursday afternoon.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Davidson (nee Doreen McGarvey) in Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, February 3rd.

Miss Noreen Keating, of Belleville, spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Carl Heath and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Bateman attended the annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhitions in Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lewis and son, Larry, have moved into their new home here.

Sponsored by Deloro group of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild, a euchre party was held at the home of Mrs. Donald Donaldson on Wednesday evening, with five tables in play. Winners were: James Cross and Mrs. Charles Lajoie. Refreshments were served at the close.

MOIRA

Moira—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Preston Jean and Donna, were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInroy and Diane on Friday night.

A large number of friends from Moira attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Mabel Vandewater held in Madoc on Friday afternoon. Sympathy is extended to the entire family.

Mrs. Wm. Leslie and Mr. Donald Leslie, of Belleville, were Sunday afternoon callers of Mrs. Mary Herity and Evelyn.

The Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Nelson Welsh on Thursday.

Mrs. Lewis Kellar and baby are spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kellar.

Mrs. Olive Williams, Bobby and Gary Frankford, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Ketcheson and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wallace were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson on Sunday.

Sunday evening service held at Moira Church was well attended with visitors from Fuller, Thomasburg, West Huntingdon, Belleville and Frankford.

It was conducted by Rev. Mr. Norman after which he introduced guest speaker the Rev. Walter Mugford evangelist from Portland, Oregon. Mr. Mugford formerly as a boy spent a few years of his life in Moira at home of the late John Morton. He gave an inspiring sermon. He also rendered a beautiful solo, "Bless This House" and dedicated it to the people of Moira. Mrs. Donald Holbert and daughter Pauline Holbert sang a duet, "Beautiful Garden of Prayer, which was enjoyed by all.

Mr. Mugford called on several homes during the day, especially the one which he had lived in, to renew old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson attended a party in Tweed held under the auspices of Tweed Fair Board, on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, Mount Pleasant, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Holbert on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInroy were supper guests on Saturday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McMullen, Belleville.

Second Man On The Ticket

By Edwin Lanham

CHAPTER XIII

The hotel was on Capitol Street only a short distance away. As we walked there, Lucy said, "Mr. McDonald has been very much with us. It's been gay. Oh, so gay. Lunch, dinner, breakfast. I've been getting quite a rush from the fat boy."

"He's a lonely man," I said. "It must be pretty lonely to be a man nobody trusts."

She gave me a quick look. "Do you think I appeal only to lonely men?"

"I didn't mean anything like that," I said. "Don't go feminine on me, please. Did you get anything out of McDonald?"

"Yes," said Lucy. "Lunch, dinner, cocktails, an earful of petty bias and a tummyful of Clyde McDonald."

We had reached the hotel, and Lucy led the way to the elevators. The Governor's suite was high up in the hotel, and the windows overlooked the town and the Capitol. It was a clean, tidy town, as shiny as a Sunday morning.

Governor Warburton was relaxed in an easy chair, reading a newspaper, and Bill Evers was on the telephone. When I entered with Lucy the Governor put down his newspaper and Bill dropped the telephone on its cradle in the middle of a sentence and shouted. "Mason, where have you been? Why didn't you answer my wire?"

"I'm answering it in person," I said.

"Roy, have you seen the papers?" the Governor said. "That New Orleans speech last night went over big."

I pulled up a chair. "Governor, what do you remember about an old lady named Harriet Perkins?"

"Miss Hattie?" the Governor said. "Why, she taught school. Why?"

"It's all over town that she's not coming to your reception," I said, and hesitated an instant. "I'm afraid it's my fault."

• • •

Bill Evers jerked his head nervously, and excitement made him shutter. "Wh-what have you done now, Roy?"

"It's your fault too," I said.

"M-my fault?? I don't know the lady. What are you talking about?"

"You helped me with that part of the book," I said. "Page 76."

I handed a copy to Bill.

"Let me see it," Governor Warburton said, and took the book from Bill's hands. Bill had opened it to page 76, and read the paragraph over the Governor's shoulder. Bill finished first, and gave me a blank look. "I don't see anything wrong with that."

But Governor Warburton's eyes had widened. "I never got the highest marks in my class. I never walked two miles to school and back every day. And when she kept me after school — Oh. my!"

We all stared at the Governor. He dropped the book to his lap and said, "That sheepskin coat!"

"Governor," Bill said, "what's a sheepskin coat got to do with it?"

The Governor looked at him and understood, as I did, that Bill's worry and his affection for the Governor had brought the harsh tone into his voice. The Governor smiled and said, "It's nothing very damning, Bill, but I imagine it could be made to look so by a man like Clyde McDonald. You see, when I was a boy I wanted a sheepskin coat and I saved up the money to buy it from the mail-order house. It cost $15.95 postpaid and it was a beauty. I couldn't wait to go coon hunting in that sheepskin coat, and I was down at the post office every day, asking if it had come yet. I carried the money around in my pocket, tied up with cotton string and weighted to my jackknife."

Governor Warburton leaned back in his chair. "I was going to school with Miss Hattie in those days, and we had a little fund, our school did. It was Miss Hattie's idea that the best way to keep us out of trouble on Hallowe'en was to have a party at the school, and she got the parents and the kids to kick in a fund for expenses."

"Governor," Bill broke in.

"Just be patient, the Governor said. "I'll give you the whole story, as it happened, and let me say I was acutely aware of my responsibility for that school fund. I kept it in a cigar box under my mattress and not a day went by that I didn't look in it to see if the money was safe. But, you see, they had a county fair about then and I used to ride a little when I was a kid. Racing quarter horses was the sport back in Hyde County."

"You mean you rode in races, Governor?" Bill said hollowly.

"All of us kids rode in those days, Bill," the Governor went on. "At Hyde County Fair, I was up on a paint horse named Spot, and he was fast. Very fast. I'd ridden Spot before, and I didn't think there was a horse in the county that could beat him at a quarter of a mile. Of course, a difference of opinion makes a horse race, and you know how it is at a county fair. It's a pretty exciting thing, and when a kid is mingling with adults, and talking horses with them on equal terms, it goes to his head. Well, I imagine you've guessed what happened I bet $15 on Spot to win the race —15 to 10.

"The school money, Governor?" Bill asked weakly.

"Not the school money," the Governor said. "The sheepskin coat money, Bill."

Lucy Strawn sighed and murmured. "Poor old Spot, he didn't come through."

"He cast a shoe," the Governor said.

CHAPTER XIV

The Governor went on quickly with his story. "He would have won the race, but he cast a shoe and Johnny Mills beat me out. So I went home with 95 cents in my pocket and my father was waiting for me with a big grin on his face and he said, "Willie, I've got a surprise for you. Here's your sheepskin coat." It was a surprise all right. He had been down to the office and the package was there C.O.D., and he had paid the money. He gave it to me and said, 'You owe me $15.-95. Willie."

"Lucy," Bill Evers said. "Pour me a drink. There's a bottle in the bathroom.

"Since you and Roy worked up that book, you know something about my father," the Governor said. "He was a very strict man, and I didn't have the courage to tell him what had happened. I went up to my room and got out the cigar box. I took out $15 and added it to the 95 cents I had left and gave it to my father, and I thought I could work like the devil and fill that box up again before Hallowe'en. I had 10 days to do it. I sawed wood and I did every kind of job a boy is capable of, but I couldn't get enough work. I sold the coat to Meathead Fisher, and he beat me down to $6 for it, but Hallowe'en got closer and closer and I was still short so I went to Miss Hattie and told her the story."

Lucy Strawn brought Bill Evers his drink, and he took two prodigious gulps. Lucy said softly, "Gee, Governor, you were only a kid. You got caught in the middle. What's wrong with that? You paid the money back, didn't you?"

"Yes," the Governor said. "I brought the box to Miss Hattie, and she made up the difference, and for a couple of months I stayed after school every day and carried wood and ashes and washed the blackboards and cleaned erasers and did every other job Miss Hattie could think of, and she had imagination. I worked the money out, and she never said anything about it to anybody. It was just between Miss Hattie and myself."

"But now," I said miserably. "Now she's threatening to tell.'

"Roy," the Governor said, "It's not your fault, but you couldn't have chosen worse words to put in that book if you'd been Clyde McDonald himself. In the first place, my marks were poor. In the second place, what she kept me after school for was not, in her view, 'minor juvenile misdemeanor,' as you called it. In the third place, she never predicted great things for me. She predicted that I'd end up in a reform school."

"So she's planning to tell the story when it will hurt the most," Bill said. "How the candidate for Vice President of the United States, the sober budget balancer, the honest administrator, dipped into funds entrusted to his care and bet it on a horse race."

"Now, Bill," the Governor broke in. "It wasn't that way. It—"

"It will be that way to Clyde McDonald," Bill Evers said.

• • •

The Governor winced, but did not protest, and an uneasy silence descended on the room. Bill finished his drink and said, "The worst thing that ever happened to us was when Roy Mason learned to read and write."

"Now that's enough," Governor Warburton said sharply. "It's not Roy's fault. The fault is all mine. I should have read the book."

"Okay," Bill Evers said. "Sorry, Roy."

"What's done is done," the Governor said. "Between us, Roy and I have created a nasty little situation. The question is, what can be done about it?"

Bill looked up. "You got anything on her, Governor?"

"On Miss Hattie?" The Governor smiled. "Of course not."

"We've got to give something up," Bill said. "There must be some dirt somewhere."

Taft Says U.S. 'At Full War' With Red China

Says Blockade, Bombings Would Not Extend Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert Taft says the United States already is "at full war" with Communist China.

Neither the bombing of Manchurcian supply bases north of Korea nor a blockade of the Chinese mainland could therefore be expected to extend the war, Taft said Sunday on the NBC's "Youth Wants to Know" television program.

Taft, Senate Republican leader, said a blockade of the Chinese mainland would be "desirable" if it could be worked out "without too great international complications with our Allies."

About half the program was devoted to an exchange between Taft and the youngsters over President Eisenhower's announcement that he is relieving the U. S. 7th fleet of the task of "protecting" Communist China from Chiang.

One youth asked whether anything better might be expected of the Nationalists now than during the Chinese civil war, when he said "whole divisions surrendered" to the Reds without a fight.

Taft, obviously nettled, told the young panel member:

"You're just repeating Communist propaganda."

Taft said the Truman administration cut off arms aid to the Nationalists in the middle of the fight.

"If we had truly supported Chiang during the civil war we would have more than half of China" on the anti-Communist side now, Taft said.

"A war is a war — it would be no worse than now," Taft said when one youth asked what happens if Americans are endangered or killed protecting Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa stronghold while permitting the Nationalist leader to strike at the mainland.

Taft said the Eisenhower administration is not encouraging Chiang to invade the Chinese mainland but that "if it seems advisable, we would help and sent out troops to do it." He stressed "that policy has not been determined at all."

He said the net effect of Eisenhower's order to the 7th fleet would be to see that aid for Nationalist China will be "quickly given."

Asks Canadian Foresters Return To Clear Ruins

LONDON (CP)—Henry Spence, a Conservative member of Parliament, said today he would like to see the Canadian Forestry Corps come back to Scotland to help clear the country's gale-wrecked forests.

Spence said floods and loss of life in Britain, Belgium and The Netherlands have obscured the extent of recent gale damage in Scotland, principally between Inverness and Perth.

"It is estimated that 30 years' mature growth has been lost," said Spence.

During the war, the Canadian Forestry Corps had several camps near Spence's home in Lumsden, Strathdon, Aberdeenshire, and "they did a great job."

He has put down a question on the order paper asking Prime Minister Churchill whether emergency help offered by Canada "might include the sending of detachments of the Canadian Forestry Corps, with equipment to give assistance in clearing the devastation wrought in Scottish forests."

3 Cobalt Bombs To be Operating End of March

OTTAWA (CP) — Three new cobalt bombs for the treatment of cancer will likely go into operation before the end of March, R. F. Errington, chief of the commercial division of Atomic Energy of Canada, said Sunday night.

Mr. Errington was commenting on the dedication Sunday in New York's Montefiore hospital of the latest bomb to go into operation.

Parts for another cobalt bomb are in Chicago and it lacks only a "few details" before it is put into service, he said. Two others are expected to start operations in Winnipeg and Minneapolis before the end of March.

The New York unit is the fourth such bomb. Others are in London, Ont., Saskatoon and Vancouver.

Meanwhile the Crown - owned Atomic Energy of Canada is building a bigger and better model, which can rotate in a giant arc around the patient.

Canadian Plane Lands With Clothing Supplies

LONDON (CP) — A Canadian aircraft landed at London airport today with a cargo of clothing for flood victims in Britain, Holland and Belgium.

The shipment totalled nearly 7,000 pounds in weight and included shoes, stockings and blankets. An official said families rendered homeless in the floods should be wearing some of the Canadian gifts by Wednesday.

The clothing came in a Trans-Canada Air Lines aircraft whose passenger seats had been removed to make room for the gift cargo.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: A small disturbance in the vicinity of Cape Hatteras, North Carolina, early Sunday intensified greatly as it swept up the coast to the Maritimes during the day, giving strong winds, moderate snow to New Brunswick and from two to four inches of rain to Nova Scotia. As a minor result of this storm, northerly winds brought a few light snowflurries and slightly cooler air to Southern Ontario by Sunday evening.

Skies over the southern half of the province will slowly clear today. Tuesday will be mainly sunny in all regions except the northeastern section of the province, where cloud and a few light snowflurries will persist. However, a disturbance developing over the southwestern states is expected to move eastward bringing cloud ahead of it into southwestern Ontario late Tuesday.

Canadian Offices Robbed in London

LONDON (Reuters)—Six masked men Sunday broke into the Royal Bank of Canada and the offices of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, spent 14 hours blasting open safes with gelignite charges, and finally left unnoticed with less than £1,000.

Hour after hour they blasted away trying to reach the main vaults of the burglar-proof Royal Bank of Canada. But none of the milling thousands outside in Trafalgar Square heard a sound. Policemen patrolled the area continuously.

BLIZZARDS BRING FURTHER HAZARDS IN FLOODLANDS

Bad Weather Threatens To Ground Relief Planes

AMSTERDAM (AP) — New blizzards driving like icy whiplashes over the Dutch floodlands today brought further hazards and misery to the men repairing Holland's shattered dikes.

The wind-whipped water, snow and ice complicated the engineering problems of the ceaseless effort to mend temporarily the vast protective network before the next flood tides on Feb. 16. Government engineers thought they could do the job.

The rough weather, however, threatened to ground Dutch, British and United States planes flying in vital supplies. he men handling the picks and shovels were chilled by the bitter cold.

Despite the bad weather, three of Holland's young Princesses flew over the snow-framed flood areas Sunday.

Children Take to Air

Their father, Prince Bernhard, sent Princesses Beatrix, 15, Irene, 13, and Margriet, 10, into the sky because, he explained, young as they were, he felt they should see how much their country had suffered.

Their mother, Queen Juliana, meanwhile led her people in a day of mourning. Men and women of all denominations flocked to churches to pray for their 1,372 dead and those bereaved by last week's great flood.

Toll on Dikes Goes On

In a country-wide broadcast, the Queen said the Free World had met the fierce flood ties with a mighty tide of Christian charity, re-establishing "the solidarity we knew during the war."

But the toil on the dikes went forward without cease as the stilled nation prayed. The three-country air fleet also continued their airdrops.

Other crew continued pumping the salty water from the vast flooded areas, preparatory to beginning the battle to reclaim the once-fertile acres and to strengthen the dike system.

In Washington, The Netherlands ambassador to the United States, J. H. Van Royen, told a radio audience his country would continue to press foward with its defence program and would make every effort to fulfill its North Atlantic Treaty commitment. He reminded, however, that 500,000 destroyed homes would have to be rebuilt and that the blow from the sea had been a "severe one."

Airman Arrested

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — An air force man has been arrested and an investigation is under way into charges that equipment was stolen from wounded Canadian veterans brought here from Korea for treatment.

McChord officials, however, denied Saturday that a theft ring is in operation or that there had been wholesale pilfering of wounded veterans' equipment.

Thirteen Canadian veterans who arrived in Toronto on leave charged that their equipment had been pilfered.

Name of the man arrested was withheld until he is arraigned.

'Sleep Paralysis' Rare Malady Connected With Mechanism of Sleep

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine wakening from sleep to find yourself completely paralyzed.

You can hear and see, but you can't move a muscle. Time ticks on for minutes while you lie immobile in the same position, trying vainly to move.

Suddenly you manage to wiggle a toe, and all your muscular control returns instantly. The attack is over.

This is "sleep paralysis," a rare malady connected apparently with the mysterious mechanism of sleep. One such patient, treated successfully with insulin, is described in the American Medical Association archives of neurology and psychiatry by Dr. Herbert A. Weitzner of Oakland, Calif.

He tells of a patient who had suffered sleep paralysis attacks—some four a night—for 10 years. Rare was the night when he didn't have at least one attack.

He would waken gradually, sometime after falling asleep, but couldn't stir. He felt a genealized sense of tingling. Fear of paralysis made him struggle to move. Each time he would wonder whether this time he would recover.

Ability finally to move one muscle, or being touched by someone else, broke the attack. Then he could roll over, sit up, stretch, and go back to sleep. The attacks, the man said, never lasted less than three minutes, nor more than 10. The attacks of sleep paralysis were quite distinct from dreams.

The cause of sleep paralysis is not known, Dr. Weitzner writes, but appears to be physical and correctable.

What part of the brain is affected is a mystery.

Insulin treatments, which produced a temporary lowering of blood sugar, banished the man's attacks and he has been free for 14 months or more. The insulin presumably had some effect upon the hypothalamus, restoring control over sleep to that region of the brain, Dr. Weiztner suggests. The man's memory ability also was improved.

Solution of the puzzle of sleep paralysis probably depends upon discovery first of answers to the mystery of normal human sleep and awakening.

Filling Chairmanship of Joint Chiefs of Staff Is Stirring Rivalry Between Army, Navy

..By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—The names and arguments which were bandied about in the famous fight between the United States Navy and Air Force over bombers and supercarriers are heard again today.

Some of the heat is just a flare-up of debate about the missions the services should be given. But it is given new intensity by the approaching necessity of filling the chairmanship of the joint chiefs of staff when army Gen. Omar Bradley finishes his assignment next summer.

The navy and the air force each thinks it is its turn to provide a chairman.

The navy's admiral Arthur Radford, after conferences with President Eisenhower, left at the weekend to return to his Pacific fleet command. Those who saw him go thought he seemed pleased.

Do Not Relish Talk

The air force didn't relish the town talk that perhaps Eisenhower might tap the admiral for the joint chiefs post.

If precedent set in the selection of Badley was followed, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the air force, would be the logical candidate. As army chief of staff, Bradley was a member of the joint chiefs when he was named. Vandenberg is the senior of the three members.

The joint chiefs organization top U. S. military planning body, is comprised of the chiefs of staff of the three services and a non-voting chairman.

Vandenberg and the air force were less than enthusiastic about approval given by the administration a year ago to build the first of the 60,000-ton navy flatops from which planes carrying atom bombs could be launched.

Exponent of Carriers

Radford, a naval aviator, is an exponent of carriers and a veteran of the B-36 fight. Much of his experience has been in the Pacific, now the focal point of military and political attention in light of Eisenhower's new policy on Formosa.

The navy is hostile to Vandenberg because he is a leading exponent of strategic bombing—done only by air force planes.

Should Eisenhower turn again to the army because he wants a neutral man in the hot seat of the chairman, he would have several candidates to pick from. They include Gen. J. Lawton Collins, a joint chiefs member since 1949; Gen. Matthew Ridgway, who succeeded the President as supreme commander of North Atlantic Treaty forces in Europe, and Gen. Alfred Gruenther, NATO chief of staff for both Eisenhower and Ridgway.

South Korean Pilots Take Parts in Strikes Against Reds

SEOUL (AP) — Allied planes pounded anew at Communist front-line positions and supply arteries in Korea Sunday night and early today while ground fighting fell off to small-scale patrol clashes.

Lt.-Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor and Gen. James A. Van Fleet ended a three-day tour of the front. Taylor succeeds the retiring Van Fleet Wednesday as commander of the 8th army.

Gen. Mark Clark disclosed in Tokyo that Washington had authorized a two-division boost in the South Korean Army which increases it to 14 divisions with a strength of 200,000 men.

South Korean pilots — flying propeller-driven Mustangs — took part in today's strikes against Chinese front positions and rear-area supply dumps.

The raids followed the bombing of a key supply centre near Pyongyang by 11 American B-29s Sunday night. The air force said the 50-acre centre was left in flames.

On the western front, near Yonchon, an Allied patrol clashed with about 40 Chinese in a 10-minute action. The patrol pulled out and directed artillery fire on the Reds.

Four Warships Ready

In Tokyo, Far East naval headquarters announced that at least four U. S. warships could be called on short notice to bombard Communist positions with guided missiles "should he war siuaion require heir use." The navy did not say what type of guided missiles the warships can launch.

Communist broadcasts heard in Tokyo appeared to have an undertone of nervousness in their description of the observation of the fifth anniversary of the Korean Red Army.

The broadcasts exhorted civilians to double their support of the Communist war effort and for underground agents in South Korea to "step up their resistance."

The Reds charged that the U. S. "is feverishly preparing to launch new, large-scale military adventures."

Guerilla Women Seize Island

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — The Chinese Nationalists defence ministry reported today a guerrilla band of women seized a small island off the coast of Chekiang last week and then successfully defended it against 30 Communist soldiers.

The ministry said seven Reds were killed and the rest captured.

The island was not identified, but was described as near the Nationalist-held Ta Chen group.

A raid by some 1,500 guerrillas in far-off Inner Mongolia was reported by the Nationalist ministry of the interior through its news agency, Ta Tao.

It reported the guerrillas battled Communist regulars for 24 hours before withdrawing.

Flying Saucer Scared Monks In Year 1290

LONDON (Reuters) — A flying saucer terrorized monks at a north England Abbey in 1290 A.D., according to an ancient manuscript which was disclosed today.

Researcher A. X. Chumley reported in a letter to The Times of London, that he had found the Latin document at Ancient Byland Abbey in Yorkshire.

He said the document "mentions a round, flat silver object like a discus which flew over the monastry exciting 'maximum torrorem' among the brethren."

Eleven Relatives Drown in Floods

HALSTEREN, Holland (AP) — Mrs. Johanna Roks-Nefs, a Netherlands emigrant now living in Ontario arrived on a vacation visit here to find nearly all her relatives — 11 of them — had been drowned in the floods.

News of the flooding was received in mid-Atlantic while Mrs. Roks-Nefs, who lives at Delaware, near London, Ont., was sailing from New York in the Dutch liner Ryndam.

At Rotterdam she was met by two brothers-in-law who told her that a brother-in-law, three sisters-in-law, the father of one of the sisters-in-law and six cousins were dead.

She emigrated to Canada with her husband in 1950.

Arrest Private Investigators As Home Robbers

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto private investigators were charged Sunday night in the latest of a year-long rash of robberies from wealthy homes in Stamford township in the Niagara Peninsula.

Charged were George Craig, 49, and Fred Foden, a former provincial police constable. They are charged with breaking into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Geneter.

Saturday night as Mr. and Mrs. Geneter pulled into their driveway they found another car already in the driveway facing them. Mrs. Geneter told her husband: "You take the licence number and description of the car and I'll try and get their faces." About 24 hours after the licence number and description of the car was given police, the pair was arrested in Toronto.

DULLES, STASSEN ON WAY HOME WITH GOOD NEWS

Will Report to President On West's Defences

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Secretary John Foster Dulles flew homeward from Europe today with what was apparently an encouraging report for President Eisenhower about chances for early action to give West Germany an important role in Europe's defence. into high gear.

Dulles and the United States foreign-aid chief, Harold E. Stassen, concluded a swing around seven Allied European capitals Sunday and, news accounts said, left for home believing their diplomacy had been successful in getting European defence preparations back

Dulles and Stassen come home to find a collection of problems ranging from the Korean war to matters of personnel and organization.

Dulles is understood to have followed what the Europeans regarded as a firm line about the need which the Eisenhower administration sees for urgency in unifying and strengthening Europe's defences.

April 1 Deadline

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany said Dulles had set April 1 as the deadline for getting 'clear and visible signs" that a treaty providing for a European defence force will be ratified.

Earlier Dulles had been reported as telling Britain he needed strong evidence of progress before the next meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty council, set for April 23.

It appeared that Dulles and Stassen had tried to impress upon European leaders a feeling that the chances for getting adequate aid funds voted by Congress in the next few months hinge largely on whether steps which the U. S. considers essential for Western European defence are being taken.

Strengthen NATO

One such step is that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization itself be strengthened as rapidly as the resources of the member countries will permit.

Another is to close the gap between NATO and such other countries as Yugoslavia and Spain. Relations between Italy and Yugoslavia are bad, but word came Saturday that Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey will shortly begin negotiating a three - way alliance which will strengthen NATO's south eastern flank. In the case of Spain, the U. S. is trying to wind up a treaty for military and naval bases.

Queen Ends Long Vacation

LONDON (Reuters) — The Queen today ended a long vacation in the country and returned to London to face the heavy program of engagements culminating in her Coronation next June 2.

Accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh and her two children, the Duke of Cornwall and Princess Anne, the Queen drove two miles over snow-covered roads from her home at Sandringham, Norfolk, to board the royal train at Wolferton.

The royal family went to Sandringham, Norfolk, to board the royal train at Wolferton.

Last week the Queen made day-long tours of east coast flood areas.

U.K. Will Resist Any Proposal To Blockade China

Officials List Five Main Objections to New Plan

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — Britain will firmly resist any proposal to blockade Red China, the foreign office indicated today.

A spokesman recalled that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Parliament four days ago: "We have said (to the U. S.) that we would think it would be a mistake to have a policy of blockade" of mainland China.

His statement at a press conference was prompted by questions about Washington reports suggesting President Eisenhower's administration may be considering a blockade of the China coast as part of its general Far Eastern policy.

The spokesman said the British government has received no such official proposal from the U. S. He told a questioner "we should expect to be consulted" before a decision of that sort were taken and he added: "I believe we would be."

The British government obviously is concerned about reports published here that serious U. S. consideration is being given to a blockade. That concern was reflected in the foreign office action today in commenting on a hypothetical question—an unusual step.

The British belief seems to be that the U. S. is looking at the blockade possibility only as one aspect of a new, more forceful general Asian strategy which would include the other spots of tension, such as Malaya and Indo-China.

The foreign office expects an early American move to seek the views of the main allies in Korea. If it does not come soon, British Ambassador Sir Roger Makins may be ordered to get the British government views on record once again at the first opportunity.

Officials listed five main British objections to a blockade policy which they said Britain has made known to the U. S.:

1. It might delay the ending of the Korean war by broadening the area of conflict with Red China.
2. It could lead to dangerous incidents involving Red Chinese and Russian shipping and submarines.
3. It would not affect substantially Red China's war potential because less than one-fourth of her foreign trade is seaborne and most of her military supplies come overland from Russia.
4. It might upset such Asian supporters of UN police action in Korea as India, Indonesia and Burma which still trade with the Chinese communists.
5. It might lead to retaliatory Red Chinese action against Hong Kong, lying next to China. The British believe their island colony serves as the Allies' best listening-post into Red China and that it would be harmful to the Allies generally to lose it. The British, too, have been doing many millions of dollars worth of business monthly with Red China through Hong Kong.

REMEMBERS CHILDREN

Watch Stolen 32 Yrs. Ago in Liverpool Returned to Owner in Pense Sask.

PENSE, Sask. (CP)—In 1920 W. O. Bull's inscribed watch was stolen from his valise on a Liverpool dock as he arrived in England to visit his father.

The loss of the watch was a blow to the postmaster at the small town of Pense because it had been given to him by his friends here in appreciation of his service in the First World War.

When he returned to Canada a few months later, he had heard no more of the missing watch and as the years passed the incident faded in his memory.

Last September a letter arrived addressed to "the Legion, a public official or postmaster, Pense, Sask." As postmaster and a member of the legion, he felt entitled to open it. The letter concerned his lost watch.

The watch had been inscribed "to W. O. Bull from Pense and district for service in the Great War."

Postmarked Whitehorse, Yukon, the letter was from an English girl, Hilda Regan, who explained she would like to get in touch with Mr. Bull.

The Pense postmaster replied and later he got a letter from the girl's father.

Mr. Regan, a former Liverpool policeman, said he bought the watch in a pawnshop. He tried to trace the owner but no one had ever heard of a town named Pense.

On his retirement the daughter took the watch to use as a travelling clock and brought it with her when she toured Canada in 1952. While hitch-hiking through Saskatchewan, she saw a signpost bearing the name Pense. After arriving at Whitehorse, she wrote the letter to Pense.

So almost 32 years to the day it disappeared, the watch came back to Mr. Bull.

Farouk Party Off; Money To Flood Victims

ROME. (AP)—Former King Farouk has cancelled a reception for his 33rd birthday on Feb. 11 and will give the 1,500,000 lire $2,500 he was going to spend on it to flood victims of England, Belgium and Holland.

A spokesman for the former Egyptian monarch said 400 invitations already had been sent to Rome's high society, nobility and diplomats for the gala event.

Flood Victims Begin Trek Back To Their Homes

LONDON (Reuters)—The great trek back to the homes and towns, slimy and evil-smelling with the aftermath of the worst floods in modern British history, has begun in England.

Housewives are leaving their temporary flood shelters and returning to the sodden wreckage left when the waters last week oozed slowly back into the sea, their sadness overridden by a strong desire to get started with the mop and scrub brush.

But the return has not yet become a mass movement. Thousands of acres of once-fertile farmland are still under water, preventing even a start on reconstruction.

Hundreds who returned to Sheppey, a devastated Thames mouth island, found houses and public buildings covered with a carpet of slime. In some houses a black high-water mark reached four feet up on peeling wallpaper.

Work is well under way on repairing the broken sea walls and enlarging them to prevent another wholesale disaster. The last time these walls gave way was in the 14th century.

Nearly 10,000 British soldiers bore the brunt of the repair work.

FACES SEVEN CHARGES

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Anthony Chimirri, 37, was committed for trial Saturday on seven charges of receiving stolen goods from five youths. The youths were each given two year suspended sentences after being convicted earlier of theft by servant from a super market. Preliminary hearing of three other charges against Chimirri is scheduled for Feb. 19.

SOME DISCOLORATION CAUSED BY SMOKE

Smoke caused some discoloration damage to the interior of St. Thomas' Anglican Church on Saturday night, when the coal-burning furnace "blew back."

A large clinker had formed in the blower, it was stated today, causing the blow back.

Smoke caused the cancellation of the eight a.m. matins but the church was cleared in time for the eleven o'clock service.

THURLOW TOWNSHIP TO CONDUCT DRIVE FOR BLIND FUND

Thurlow township residents will be given the opportunity this week of making personal contributions to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind building fund for their proposed new service centre to be built at Kingston.

Thurlow Reeve Fred Mitchell said he had been asked to head up the township campaign committee and noted the canvass would get under way on Wednesday.

Township councillors have been added to the campaign committee and each will organize the canvass in a particular section of the county. Each councillor has enrolled a number of canvassers so the canvass may be completed as quickly as possible.

PICTON RESIDENT ESCAPES INJURY

Kenneth Woodall, R.R. 8 Picton, escaped injury over the week-end in an accident on Highway 2 four miles east of Kingston. Damage to the car was estimated at $300.

Woodall was preceeding west and as he rounded a curve the car started to slide on slush, hurtled over the shoulder of the road and slammed into a tree.

DOGS IN POUND

Three wandering dogs were picked up by the city poundkeeper over the week-end. One was a blonde male spaniel wearing a blue collar, another a male sand-colored cross between a pom and a collie, and the third a small black and white female spaniel. The dogs will be given the usual 72 hours lease of life.

Child Runs Into Side of Passing Car, Injures Head

Darting out from the curb and into the side of a passing car, Richard Casselman, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Casselman, Gilbert Street, suffered head injuries on Sunday afternoon. Dr. Russell Bateman said the lad had suffered a severe concussion, although apparently there was no fracture.

Kenneth Gerow, R.R. 1, Belleville, said he was driving on East Moira Street, when he noticed two small children playing at the side of the street. Just as his car passed one of the boys darted out into the road and into the side of his car.

Mr. Gerow picked the lad up and took him to the hospital. Today Mrs. Casselman reported her son's condition to be improved, but he will be kept at the hospital for a few days for observation.

Unknown Motorist Probably Saves Lives of Three

Three Belleville district young people, a youth and two teen-aged girls, may owe their lives to an unknown motorist following a accident on No. 2 highway Saturday night when their car went out of control, struck a tree and caught fire after bouncing over onto its top.

The three were dazed in their overturned car when the unknown motorist stopped, scooped mud out of a nearby ditch and put out the fire and then pulled the injured persons from the car.

In Belleville General Hospital with a possible broken nose is Miss Marjorie Scott, 17, Cannifton. Her sister Eva, 19, suffered a gash on her head which took five stitches to close while John Green, 21, of Corbyville, required six stitches in his head. All three suffered bruises.

Provincial police said that apparently the tie rod on the steering mechanism of the old model car had broken allowing the vehicle to go off the road where it strick the tree. The accident took place about three miles east of Belleville.

After he had rescued the three persons from the car the unknown motorist went on his way without leaving his name with police. The three young people were taken to hospital by Bush's Ambulance where Green and Eva Scott were given emergency treatment and allowed to go home.

Provincial Constable Al Cockburn investigated the accident.

Traffic Committee Does Not Favor Service Station

Construction of a gasoline service station at the corner of North Front and Harriett streets will not meet with the approval of the traffic and light committee of city council.

At the regular meeting of the committee held this week, members discussed the application of the British American Oil Company for a service station at the above corner and decided that due to its 30-foot width the street would not lend itself to additional traffic.

It was also pointed out that North Front street would be a main artery linking the city with the new four-lane highway to be built north of the city. The city comptroller was authorized to forward a letter to the gasoline company setting forth the view of the traffic committee.

Committee members also discussed a proposed bridge over Moira River north of the C.P.R. bridge linking Dundas Street East with Dundas Street West. It was approved that the necessary action be brought by committee chairman Alderman Robt. Temple to bring the necessity of the bridge before the two governments.

The bearers were Gerald Rouse, Cameron Morton, Steve Geneja, Archie Curry, James Alexander and Wilfred St. Pierre.

Interment was made in Belleville cemetery.

THOMAS SMITH
Madoc

Mr. Thomas Smith, of Madoc, died at the home of Mrs. Helen Halloran on Sunday following an illness of one year. He was in his 71st. year.

Born in England, the deceased had been a resident of Madoc for the past 15 years and prior to that had lived in Cobalt, Ontario. During active years, Mr. Smith had been employed as a mining captain. He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church.

There are no surviving members of his family.

A funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. ARCHIE JONES

Marmora — The funeral of the late Mrs. Archie Jones took place on Saturday afternoon, leaving the Wells Funeral Parlor for St. Andrew's United Church, where service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. K. J. Crawford, B.A., B.D. The hymns were "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go" and "Abide With Me."

The entombment took place in the vault in Marmora Protestant cemetery to be followed by interment in the spring in Stirling cemetery.

The bearers were: Ronald and Gerald Longwell, of Foxboro; Robert, John and Douglas Brook of Peterborough; and Cam Walker, of Belleville, all but the latter mentioned being nephews of the deceased. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Herbert Collins Again Heads Debating Club

Herbert Collins was re-elected president of the Wharf Street Debating Club at their annual meeting held last night in the recently renovated accommodation on South Front Street.

Other officers elected included Jack Cornell as honorary president; George Seams, Jr., as vice President and Frank (Duke) Smith as secretary treasurer. Executive members include Jack Potts, Matt Weir, Ray Cornell, M. J. Callaghan, H. C. Gault and William Whalen.

There was a good attendance at the annual meeting, it being the first time that many of the members had seen the fully completed renovations at the club accommodation. Some new furniture has been added, including a new television set.

The club executive extended an invitation for members to visit the club rooms at any time to watch TV, especially on fight nights.

The clubrooms provide a service other than for the club members. Children using the harbor for open air skating are being permitted the use of the clubrooms for changing of skates.

Bahai Workshop Holds 'Bon Voyage' Party

The "Workshop '63" group of the Belleville Baha'i community held its weekly meeting on Wednesday evening.

David Bond opened the meeting. Miss Margaret Mann was appointed chairman of the evening and led a lively discussion on the essential qualities required of those who seek after truth and how, when having discovered it, those qualities in application must distinguish their lives, raising them above narrowmindedness, local hatreds, regional prejudices, racial distrusts and the dictates of their own ego.

A Youth Forum was held in Kingston by the National Youth Committee of the Baha'is of Canada on Sunday with J. D. McLaughlin attending the Forum as delegate from this area. He was instructed to make his report at the next meeting. The Feast of Mulk, (Dominion), was also observed on Sunday. The provincial convention would be held in Toronto on February 14th.

Presentation Made

Following the meeting, a 'Bon Voyage' party was held in honor of Margaret Mann, who is reparting for a visit to Ireland next week where she will stay for two months.

Refreshments were served, including a "farewell" cake decorated with a small replica of an ocean liner. The community presented Miss Mann with a framed photograph of Abdu'l-Baha, son of the founder of the Baha'i World Faith, a copy of Baha'i prayers and meditations and a silver scatter pin. While in Ireland Miss Mann will visit the Baha'i community in Belfast.

After a brief expression of her gratitude, dancing was enjoyed by those present and a gay, impromptu conga line was formed.

Round-World Cruise Film Enjoyed by Many

A crowd of 850 people turned uot to view Commander Jack Braidwood's technicolor travelogue of his cruise around the world in a 90-foot schooner, shown at the Collegiate auditorium Saturday evening.

Sponsored by the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, reports indicate the film was one of the most interesting to be seen in some time. Commander Braidwood, retired from the R.C.N., touched points in India, Africa, Pitcairn Island, Solomon and Fiji Islands, the West Indies and Bermuda and back to the starting point at Gloster, Mass.

Leaving the United States in the spring of the year, the 21-man crew girdled the globe in 18 months, stopping off at 103 ports en route. Some excellent shots of the crew in action in a storm were photographed and shown in the film. Commander Braidwood, who narrated throughout the showing, described storms encountered by the ship rounding the Cape of Good Hope. He said they were some of the worst he had seen.

All-in-all, the ship, "Yankee," covered 21,000 miles by sail. The members were frequently entertained by natives whenever they stopped off at the various landings. On Pitcairn Island the crew was royally welcomed by the descendants of the mutineers of the famous ship "Bounty."

Commander Braidwood was introduced by Freeman Burrows, secretary, and thanked by J. J. Morch, Commodore. It was announced enough profit was realized from the showing of the travelogue to complete the local clubhouse on Victoria Park.

Two Moira Lake Cottages Entered, Valuables Taken

Two summer cottages at Moira Lake, south of Madoc, have been entered with items of valuable equipment taken, it was reported by provincial police at Madoc. Cottages entered were those owned by Frank Panter and Ed James, both of Belleville.

At the Panter cottage the thieves dismantled a hot water tank and pressure pump system used for pumping water from the lake. The equipment was dismantled in a workmanship-like manner and carted away. Value of the equipment was about $300, it was reported.

Police had still not determined what was taken from the James' cottage and would not know until contents of the summer home had been checked by the owner.

It was not known when the cottages had been entered but police dated the theft as some time since December, when they had last been checked. The break-in at the Panter cottage was discovered Sunday and this led to finding the James cottage had also been entered.

IN MEMORIAM

LOGUE. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, John Logue, who passed away on February 9th, 1949.

Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break, but all in vain;
To have, to love, and then to part,
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never—
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.

—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

PRENTICE. — In loving memory of a dear father, Michael Prentice, who passed away three years ago, February 9th, 1950.

However long our lives may last,
Whatever lands we view
Whatever joy or grief be ours,
We will always think of you.

—Ever remembered by Murray and Faye. F9

MACK. — In loving memory of my dear husband, Percy Mack, who passed away February 9th, 1950.

No pen can write, no tongue can tell
My sad and bitter loss;
But God alone has helped so well
To bear my heavy cross.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by wife. F9

MACK. — In loving memory of our dear dad, Percy Mack, who passed away February 9th, 1950.

Sleep on, dear dad, it has been three years
Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears.
Yours was a heart that was blithesome and gay,
Scattering sunshine all along the way.
You know how we loved you, and yes, love you yet,
Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

—Ever remembered by daughter Mildred, Bill and grandchildren. F9

SILLS. — In loving memory of a dear father, Wallace Sills, who passed away February 9th, 1947.

Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him near.

—Always remembered by the family. F9

COLDEN. — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Ethel Mae Colden, who departed life February 9th, 1944.

Your presence is ever near us,
Your love remains with us yet,
You were the kind of a mother
Your loved ones would never forget.

—Ever remembered by Ted, Art, Doris, Allan and Brenda. F9

WILLMAN. — In loving memory of a dear father, Thomas Willman, who passed away February 9th, 1952.

Though his smile has gone forever,
And his hand we cannot touch,
Still we have so many memories
Of the one we loved so much.
His memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part
God has him in His keeping,
We have him in our hearts.

—Sadly missed by daughter Reta, son-in-law Sam and granddaughter Shirley Ann. F9

WILLMAN. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Thomas Willman, who passed away February 9th, 1952.

The depth of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well;
And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Emma, sons Keith, Sydney and daughter-in-law Gladys; Wilfred and daughter-in-law Helen and grandchildren; daughter Ruth, son-in-law Raymond and grandchildren. F9

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) —Prices turned weaker in forenoon stock market trading today.

Among the active uraniums, Gunnar and Nesbitt-Labine added 20 cents each in active trading and Rix and Chimo also rose. New Larder U traded actively for the loss of pennies.

Manufacturing companies held firm in the industrials with a small gain while most other groups weakened.

Senior and junior golds were mixed. Prospects weakened.

Higher-priced base metals turned lower and others followed. Steep Rock, United Asbestos and Normetal slipped, but Barvue added pennies.

Losses in western oils ranged to 25 cents as Central Explorers, Home Oil, Pacific and New Superior weakened. Stanwell resisted the trend to add pennies in a turnover of 48,000 shares.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar was at a discount of 2 9-16 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Friday's noon rate was 97 13-32 cents. Pound sterling $2.74¾ unchanged.

GOLD DISCOVERY AIDS IN AUTO DEVELOPMENT

How the discovery of gold in California helped in the development of one of America's great businesses was told here today by Mr. Lipes, president of West End Motors, Ltd., local Studebaker dealer, and representative of the only automobile company that is twice as old as the motor car itself.

When gold was discovered in California, two young Indiana blacksmiths — Henry and Clem Studebaker saw opportunity in it. They felt that people heading West would need a lot of wagons. So they decided to build some. Another brother J. M. Studebaker went West.

In five years, J. M. Studebaker saved $8,000 and returned to Indiana to invest it in an expansion of his brothers' business in 1858. This additional capital was essential to the early success of the enterprise.

"The saga of Studebaker and California gold is but one instance of business acumen and success that enabled the company to bridge the gap between the horse-drawn vehicle and today's automobile, the only one of more than 5,000 such companies to make the transition," said Mr. Lipes.

As early as 1897 the company, then the world's leading manufacturer of glamorous carriages, sturdy wagons and high-quality buggies and traps, was experimenting with power - propelled vehicles, said Mr. Lipes, pointing out that the year the company sold its first "horseless" vehicle, 1902, was the year of Studebaker's Golden Anniversary.

"That's something no other manufacturer can match," he continued, "one hundred years of experience, and half of that century in the manufacture of motor cars."

West End Motors, who have represented Studebaker for the last 2 years, said, with regard to their own plans—

"We intend to do an intelligent sales and service job for both the Studebaker Company and for Studebaker owners. It's going to feel wonderful to own a Studebaker, because never before has Studebaker built such a fine series of cars, and never before have Studebaker owners been able to avail themselves of such wonderful service facilities as offered by West End Motors."

Mr. Lipes promised that the new car would be on display at the West End Motors' Showroom very ,very shortly.

Red Wings Upset Bantam Canucks In Playoff Tilt

Red Wings upset Canadiens 5-0 in the first round of the Belleville Minor League Bantam playoffs Saturday. By the loss, Canadiens, who had been undefeated in 13 starts during the regular schedule, were eliminated for the season.

Musgrove led the victors with three goals and an assist. Woods and Garrison each scored singletons, with St. Louis and Wright each racking up a pair of assists.

In the Pee-Wee division, Canadiens dumped Maple Leafs 3-1. Doug Lucas, with two, and Ron Hull with one, scored for the winners. Keith Dickey got the lone Leaf goal.

Red Wings and Black Hawks tied 2-2. Mike Colligan and Allan Dever notched the Wing tallies, while Earl McDonald scored both Hawk goals.

Bill Pringle, with two goals, led Rangers to a 3-1 win over Barons. Bob Follwell got the other Ranger tally, while Brennan hit for the lonesome Baron goal.

Bruins and Hornets battled to a one-all tie in the other Saturday engagements, Barry Tetterson and Gord Fuller being the marksmen.

Two More Industries May Choose Trenton as Site

TRENTON (Special) — "Two in '52 and three in '53" would have been the main plank in ex-Mayor Kenneth J. Couch's platform had he chosen to seek the chief magistrate's seat for the seventh time. Instead Mr. Couch withdrew from town politics with a promise he would continue to work tirelessly in the best interests of Trenton.

And the townspeople would go a long way to find a more affable and better ambassador without official office.

Lately great things have been accomplished relating to inducing new, additional industry to locate here. Talks have gone far enough to permit one official to report that two more industries should have decided definitely on locations here within the next 30 days.

Now there is another problem confronting the men who bring industries to Trenton. With three firms already in the progress of either building, or clearing land to build, a shortage of town-owned sites may be a reality sooner than one thinks. There are not too many available and unless more are made available these super-salesmen are going to find themselves running out of real estate.

A salesman offering land owned by the co-operations has the advantage of making very attractive deals. He can practically give the site away as a method of inducing manufacturers. The loss by the town is nil because corporation taxation over a period of years and payroll spending outweighs the initial profit many times.

Industry No. 32 is getting ready to erect a plant in Trenton. The site, part of Senator W. A. Fraser's Wragge St. property, is being brushed and clearer while the plans call for construction to start this June. Name of the company is Essex-Electronics with plants in New Jersey and California. Product to be manufactured: — component parts for radio and television.

Women mainly to work on production; about 100 of them to be employed at the start.

$2,000 Collected

With the campaign scheduled to continue for another week, canvassers for the Blind cause have collected approximately $2,000. More teams are to be heard from and there are still some districts in town untouched.

Personals

Messrs. Mark Tripp, O. M. Newton, Claude Graham and Dick Whitley left by car yesterday for a winter vacation in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. William Steinburg, of Lorne Avenue, are leaving for Florida this week.

Wm. Van Tassell Again Chairman Recreation Com.

William Van Tassell, chairman of the Belleville Recreation Commission was again elected to that post at the inaugural meeting of the organization held in the council chambers on Friday afternoon. Ald. Claude D. Tice was named deputy chairman and Drury Denyes secretary treasurer. Harry Knott and Ald. Don McNevin were appointed to the grounds committee and Ted Schwab and Ald. C. D. Tice to the equipment committee. Mrs. W. Gander will act on the advisory board. Harry Knott, the appointee of the Public School Board, was unable to be present due to illness while Ted Schwab has not returned from his Florida vacation. The Parks Board have not appointed their representative on the Commission.

The secretary-treasurer told the members that the Parks Board had been paid their account and after a lengthy discussion it was agreed that the Commission would purchase a mower and maintain all the grounds on which playground equipment is situated. The members felt that this work could be done cheaper than having the work hired out as formerly.

A request will be sent to the Public School Board for the use of the grounds for playground privileges and also to make an alteration in one of the buildings to house the mower that is to be purchased. It was decided to join the Ontario Recreation Federation at a cost of $15 and also to attend the zone meeting at Cobourg in the near future. Recreational Director Lloyd "Red" Doran reported on the recent skating session at the Memorial Arena stating there was over three hundred average at the parties.

Ontario Federation of Labor Closes With Plea for Greater Political Action, Annual Wage

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Labor (CIO-CCL) ended Saturday with a plea for greater political action by unions and prediction of a guaranteed annual wage for members of the United Automobile workers.

CIO President Walter Reuther said in an address to the 320 delegates representing some 121,000 federation members that the guaranteed wage will be the next objective of the CIO. Groundwork for the proposed program will be laid at the convention in Atlantic City next March.

"We don't want to get paid for not working," he said, "but we also don't want to be penalized for not having a job.

"As long as working people have to bear the cost of seasonal unemployment by subsidizing the unemployed, we will continue to have unemployment. But if industry has to bear the cost of unemployment it will soon find a way to avoid it."

Debate on labor's position in politics, which had come up several times during the two-day convention, reappeared during the final session. Delegates passed a resolution commending the CCF party and another which called for greater co-operation between unions and the CCF.

Fred Young of Toronto termed the Social Credit party a "company union" in the political field and a "front for big business." The record of the Social Credit party in Alberta and in the House of Commons supported his criticism, Mr. Young said.

George Burt of Windsor, Canadian director of the UAW, was re-elected federation president by acclamation. Ed Cluney and Sam Hughes, both of Toronto, were elected vice-presidents and Cleve Kidd of Hamilton was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Turning to the threat of communism, Mr. Reuther said the "Commies can't get a baker's dozen" in countries where the labor movement is strong.

"The Communists are strong where there is weakness in the labor ranks. The average French worker is paid one quarter of what the average Canadian in similar work receives. No wonder communism flourishes in such conditions."

Depressions were not ordained by God. They were man-made and what man can make he can unmake, Mr. Reuther said.

A resolution asking that it be made illegal for employers to hire strike-breakers while members of a bargaining unit are engaged in negotiations was approved.

Speakers criticized the Ontario government's method of selecting chairmen for conciliation boards who often have "no knowledge and little sympathy with the mechanics of industrial democracy."

It urged that a panel of "persons mutually acceptable to management and labor" be appointed from which chairmen could be selected to arbitrate industrial disputes.

Another resolution urged payment to widows of workers killed in industrial accidents a sum equivalent to 100 per cent of the husbands earnings rather than the 75 per cent now paid.

The delegates agreed to double financial contributions to the federation.

Members of unions connected with the federation now will contribute two cents a month each instead of the previous one cent.

Secretary-Treasurer Kidd said in presenting the motion that it costs "nearly $1,000 a month to operate the federation."

POLICE BLOTTER

Children were blamed by the police for a break-in over the week-end at Link's grocery store at the corner of Octavia and Catherine Street, where a quantity of chocolate bars and candy was said to be the only things missing.

Entry to the premises was said to have been gained through a small window. The intruders left through the front door, leaving it open.

Close to $300 damage resulted in a two-vehicle crash which occurred on Station St.

Michael Walsh, R.R. 5, Belleville, was northbound on Dafoe Street and was making a left turn onto Station Street when he apparently failed to see an eastbound car driven by Alfred Anderson, of Ameliasburg. The Anderson car crashed into the left side of the Walsh vehicle.

CANADA'S PART IN FOREIGN AID

Last week the provincial leader of the C.C.F., E. B. Jolliffe, was on a tour of the Northwestern ridings in Ontario in anticipation of an early federal election. Whether Mr. Jolliffe hasn't been paying much attention to what has been going on politically in recent months we wouldn't know, but he seems greatly put out about Canada's failure to "pull her weight in international affairs."

This failure, he said in an interview at Port Arthur, will be a "main issue" of the forthcoming federal election. Canada is a major economic power and stronger financially than any other member of the Commonwealth, said Mr. Jolliffe, adding that it was not enough for Canada to just have a popular member at the United Nations.

As an instance of how Canada is failing to play her part, Mr Jolliffe stated that while the United Kingdom is contributing over one billion dollars as its share of the Colombo Plan for India, Canada is giving only $25 million.

The St. Laurent Government must regret that the campaign of opposition it will face in the next federal election is not in the hands of Mr. Jolliffe. How comforting it would be to know that the government must stand or fall on its Colombo Plan contribution, even if it were (which it is not) the shameful or niggardly amount the C.C.F. leader would have us believe.

Canadians listen to a great deal about the magnanimity of others in providing assistance to European and Far Eastern countries. We know, for instance, that our good neighbors to the south feel that they are carrying excessive burdens. We know, too, that whatever aid Britain gives abroad is at definite sacrifice at home. We hear too little about Canada's similar contributions, and when we do, it is too often in terms of disparagement such as those of Mr. Jolliffe.

The fact is that Canada has been more than "pulling her weight". We do not know how figures for Canada compare with those for Britain in the broad picture of foreign aid but they are available for comparison with the much-publicized amounts given by the United States. We suggest it is not too much to expect that a responsible political party leader might have taken the trouble to refer to them, rather than single out one item which offers a dubious comparison at best.

In this fiscal year Canada will spend $360 millions on mutual aid under NATO and the Colombo Plan. Mutual aid means giving goods or weapons to NATO countries. The Colombo plan is an arrangement entered into by Commonwealth countries to help the far eastern members — chiefly India, Pakistan and Ceylon.

A fair basis of comparison with the United States in these contributions is seen in a ratio of $19 to $1 — or the ratio of the gross production in the two countries. On this basis the United States equivalent to our $360 millions would be $6,840 millions. The amount given by the United States this year is $6,100 millions.

A further comparison of the post-war years, from mid-1945 to March 31, 1952, is equally revealing. In that period the United States gave foreign aid, in grants and credits, of $34 billions. Canada gave $2.3 billions.

The Canadian total is comprised of a loan of $1,185 millions to the United Kingdom; of $500 millions to other countries; $325 millions to NATO countries; $50 millions to the Colombo plan, and other small contributions. On the basis of the national product of the two countries the United States contribution would have been $41.1 billions to equal that of Canada. It was, as stated, $34 billions.

This is not a record to be ashamed of and Mr. Jolliffe is hard put to carp about something when he suggests it is. Mr. St. Laurent and his associates are vulnerable on many points, and we can be sure that when Messrs. Drew, Diefenbaker and Graydon swing into action on the hustings they will have some more telling ammunition at hand than criticism of Canada's foreign aid program.

AN ILL-CONSIDERED PROPOSAL

It is to be wondered how much serious attention is expected to be paid by the Ontario Legislature to representations from the Ontario Federation of Labor when it comes up with a request that this province pass a minimum wage law setting a rate of one dollar an hour for all men and women workers.

Obviously no such law is going to be passed, but the fact that the request for it should be made by responsible spokesmen for labor can only reflect upon any other proposals from the same group. If it came with any suggestion of qualifications in respect to certain categories of workers, or certain types of work, it might be conceded that some consideration had been given to the effect of such a law. But this is a proposal for blanket coverage of every working adult in the province, regardless of sex, or age, or experience in whatever job he or she might find.

No one has to be reminded that today's dollar is a badly inflated one but it is the simplest fundamental of economics that wage pressure is the most dangerous factor in crippling the dollar's real value unless it is accomplished by comparable increase in real production. This minimum wage proposal completely ignores this inflexible economic law. It has no relation whatever to production. It is so insupportable in the light of ordinary common sense that it could not warrant the serious attention of any government. This was clearly indicated by the fact there was opposition to it among leaders in the Federation who supported a rate of 75 cents an hour. Even that was regarded as an optimistic level, equal to that in the United States where wage rates generally are higher than in Canada for all types of labor, skilled or otherwise.

"Our system of government is like an hour glass; when one side's quite run out, we turn up the other and go on again".—Douglas Jerrold.

PRAYER FOR PEACE

From trusting everything to might
And bombs that shatter when they fall,
Instead of striving to be right,
Lord, save us all.

From mad destruction, sea and air,
Till nations fall,
Instead of striving to be fair,
Lord, save us all.

To think in terms of what is good
And this recall,
That peace may lie in brotherhood,
Lord, help us all.

20 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 9, 1933

The willingness of citizens in creating work in and around their homes in response to the daily appeal which appears in the Ontario Intelligencer, has been gratifying, according to employees of the unemployment service. On Monday and Tuesday a varied assortment of vacancies and odd jobs were offered to a number of the city's unemployed which were readily accepted by applicants who were anxious for work.

82 transients sought shelter at the police station during the past three nights, which were very cold. Every morning transients are given a ticket for a free meal at the Red Cross canteen on Bridge Street east.

Mrs. Charles Reddick and Betty have returned home after spending the past week with with the former's sister, Mrs. H. E. Heagle, Kingston.

THE BEST PROTECTION

When the crime statistics for the City of New York during the first half of 1952 were released recently, they revealed a startling increase in crime over the previous year. Nearly half again as many burglaries and robberies, and more than a third again as many killings, for example, were committed as in the same part of 1951.

The cause of the increase is officially given as "not enough policemen." Yet the ratio of police to population in New York is already considerably higher than that of the typical smaller community. Does not the real answer lie deeper?

New York is that city in our nation most noted for the number and splendor of its nightclubs, bars, theatres, and stores, for its expensive clothes, cars, and apartments, for wealth and showiness — in short, the glittering focal point of the worship of materialism. The connection between crime and material gain is obvious. Read the crime news in almost any daily newspaper and see.

Policemen are of course a necessity and a great help. Yet they are relatively ineffective in preventing crime, as the nation's teeming prisons testify. Effective prevention of all wrong-doing comes only from inside, not from outside. Dedication to a higher goal than materialism is the only really efficient "policeman" — the guardian that every person can put on permanent duty within himself.

Marilyn At Niagara

(New Yorker)

Marilyn Monroe, whom Hollywood has been ballyhooing as a new-day Lillian Russell, takes a fling at big-league melodrama in "Niagara" and demonstrates a wide assortment of curves and a tendency to read her lines as if they were written in a tongue she is not entirely familiar with.

In addition to this lingual difficulty, Miss Monroe is handicapped by the whimsical direction of Henry Hathaway, who runs an admiring camera alternately over the contours of his star and the contours of Niagara Falls.

However admirably constructed Miss Monroe may be, she is hardly up to competing visually with one of the wonders of this continent, and the cataract keeps stealing scenes from her; I suppose the only time the big waterfall was ever put in its place was when Oscar Wilde suggested it would be a lot more impressive if it flowed the other way.

Water-Filled Tires

(Charlottetown Guardian)

West German farmers are rapidly adopting water-filled tires to give their tractors more grip. The tires are filled three-quarters with water during the summer, but drained for the Spring plowing while the soil is too soft for heavy machinery. In this climate it would probably be necessary to drain them in winter as well, unless anti-freeze was in particularly good supply.

Often Down But Not Out

(Windsor Star)

Man is full of contradictions and strange contrasts, as even a quick glance at his behavior will show.

He'll survive a shock of 10,000 volts, one that will melt the nails in his shoes, yet succumb to 100 volts or less while standing in water.

A craving for silence will send him to a hermitage, while simultaneously a fellow man is filibustering for hours on end in a legislature.

A fall from a stepladder may cost one man his life, while another will come crashing down from high levels and escape without permanent damage.

As a case in point, take the Chicago man who jumped from a 14th story window duruing a hotel fire a month ago, and has just been discharged from hospital "in good condition."

Granted, luck or some special protection of Providence has a hand in such cases of survival. The hotel jumper landed on top of a parked car, which broke his fall. The odds against making such landing are long, but cases when they occur do turn up.

Possibly these examples of long chances taken and won are part of a pattern which tells man he's never really licked, or down and out. If it's not his time to go, he's fall-proof, and shock-proof, as so many have learned.

Reading At Breakfast

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

A dispatch from London states that the custom has been revived of providing the Queen (or King as the case may be) with a copy of The Times printed on heavy paper. Since the war the copy delivered at Buckingham Palace, or wherever the monarch may be, has been the thin war-time stuff which, because of the shortage of paper, was delivered to every subscriber. But back in the days of Queen Victoria, special copies on heavy paper were printed for her, and also for the British Museum and a few more privileged institutions. The report also stated that three other morning papers are delivered to the Queen and laid on the breakfast table.

The news about the heavy-type paper did not interest us so much as the fact that The Times and other newspapers were laid on the Queen's breakfast table. In many families reading at the table is frowned upon as an unsocial practice. But we regard scanning the morning paper at the table as one of the pleasures of the matuinal meal. We feel "lost" on the holidays when there is no morning paper. The pleasures of consuming breakfast is enhanced by the pleasure of turning the pages and finding out what has been going on locally or in the world since the night before. Instead of being an unsocial practice we quite often find it stimulant to conversation with friend wife to whom we reveal current items of news, and pass over to her the pages that are of more interest to her than to us.

Moreover reading at the breakfast table is a valuable asset to health. It puts a brake on those who are inclined to eat too fast and impair their digestion.

Sentence Sums It Up

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

The Eisenhower inaugural address may be summed up in one of his sentences which every lover of freedom will appreciate: —" a soldier's pack is not so heavy a burden as a prisoner's chains."

Supersonic Problems

(Regina Leader-Post)

Science has stubbed its toe, and over a duck, at that.

Such is the news in a recent report of the National Research Council to Ducks Unlimited, which notified the duck people that ducks, alas, are deaf to ultrasonic vibrations.

People in these parts will recall that last year, Federal Government technicians carried out a number of sound tests in this province, designed to scare feeding ducks off the grain fields.

In these tests, vibrations higher than human ear could hear, were shot at the ducks. The ducks apparently couldn't hear them either, for they kept right on feeding. Just to make sure, the research council pulled the same stunt on some domestic Pekin ducks. They likewise remained unshattered by the ultrasonic vibrations, which condition the council has now reported to Ducks Unlimited.

The field tests did produce one duck-scaring device which worked. A high-powered siren, screeching across the fields (the note was middle C), scared the ducks into the next township. Unfortunately it nearly scared all humans within range into the next province. It also stopped the biddies from laying and played havoc generally with farmyard life in the neighborhood.

Ancient Widows

(Manchester Guardian)

Two hundred years ago died Jean Countess of Roxborough, who was remarkable not for any quality of her own. If a sepulchral inscription in Camberwell Church is to be believed Agnes Skuner died in 1499 at the age of 109 and survived her husband by 92 years, which may constitute a record in long-enduring widowhood.

Perhaps the most remarkable widow was the Countess of Desmond mentioned by Bacon in his Natural History. "They tell a tale of the old countess that she did dentire twice or thrice, casting her old teeth and others coming in their place." Sir Walter Raleigh claimed acquaintance with the lady.

Fynes Morrison, who was shipwrecked on the coast where the countess lived, said in his Itinerary: "In our time the Countess of Desmond lived to the age of about 140, being able to go on foot four or five miles to the market town." This centenarian might have gone on much longer but "she needs must climb a nut tree to gather nuts; so falling down she hurt her thigh which brought a fever and that brought death."

Do It Yourself

(Newsweek Magazine)

Keep your eye on the fast-growing "do it yourself" movement in the building field. An estimated 11,000,000 home owners now have workshops of their own. In 5 per cent of all new homes, the owner does part of the work himself. Amateurs buy a third of all building supplies and do three-quarters of all paint work. In the past three years sales of portable power tools have doubled; they now amount to around $80,000,000 annually.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Nearly all Canadians pronounce herbs as 'erbs. This astonishes a newly arrived English lady. In Britain, she asserts, herbs is always pronounced with the aspirate h, except among those English who just naturally leave the h off everything and put it on wherever it isn't called for.

The English are about the only member of the British family who concern themselves to any extent with herbs. The Irish and the Scots are content with food as represented by the plainer victuals such as potatoes, stewed beef, oatmeal and haggis. It stands to reason that it was the English settlers in Canada, rather than the Scots or Irish, who introduced herbs to this country. All you have to do is read Isaac Walton's description of how to dress a pike to see how dependent the English have been on herbs for centuries. The way Isaac stuffed a pike, you would taste only thyme, sweet marjoram and a little winter savory; some pickled oyster and a few anchovies; a blade or two of mace and the juice of three or four oranges; two cloves of garlic and all basted with claret wine. Yes: that is Isaac Walton's recipe for a well-cooked pike.

Thus, meseemeth, it could have been the English who brought herbs to English-speaking Canada. And doubtless many of those English called herbs 'erbs. And so it stuck.

But we do not say 'erbivorous, nor do we say 'erbal, nor 'erbage, nor 'erbarium nor 'erbacious. No: we give them all h.

In some parts of the United States, and I have also encountered it in sections of Canada far back from the railroads, they pronounce herbs as yarbs.

I tried this on the English lady, and she agreed at once that yarbs is a much better word than 'erbs.

But herbs is better still.

Personal Health Talks

NOW I LAY ME DOWN

When you find yourself wide awake hours after honest folk have gone asleep how do you behave? Do you toss all night in the w. k. way of the professional insomniac? Do you twitch and turn and try to find some nonexistent spot that itches? Or do you just lie there staring into the dark and quietly going insane?

Now don't tell me. My stars, I know how it feels. The sins, sorrows, disappointments and betrayals that congregate in the penumbra just beyond conscious perception to enjoy my unhappiness are cruel and relentless — but next day after breakfast I realize how absurd such figments —I mean I decide just for my own peace of mind to do penance which will be of real benefit to some one. This treatment, I find, enables me to take a sleepless night, or rather the wakeful part of the night, without getting morbid about it, that is, provided I do the penance.

The professional insomniac doesn't just stay awake an hour or two after his or her usual bedtime. The liar doesn't sleep a wink, doesn't close his eyes all night. Even when members of the family hear the insomniac snoring at various times through the night, he or she makes that bid for sympathy. It seems that when you make up your mind you're not going to get any rest tonight you carry on with that idea after an interval of several hours' sleep.

Lest some knuck . . . . some misinformed person take that crack about going insane from sleeplessness seriously, let me add that some insane persons are abnormally wakeful, but mere sleeplessness or insomnia in itself does not cause or lead to insanity.

One of mature age who leads a sedentary life may thrive on not more than six hours of sleep. Younger adults may require eight hours, teen age children nine hours, and younger, fast-growing children ten hours of sleep every night. Hence any community with the welfare of future citizens at heart must impose an absolute ten o'clock curfew upon all children of school age.

Contrary to a quaint popular notion, a bedtime lunch or snack generally makes one sleep better —and physiologically we know that sleep improves digestion. It is not the food but the alcohol, tobacco and other excesses associated with late suppers that disturb sleep.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SPIRITUAL HUMILITY

I attended the inauguration of Dwight D. Eisenhower in my home before my TV. The high spot, however, to me, from the time the General took his oath until after the last guest had retired from the Inaugural Ball, was the simple and sincere prayer of the president, in which he asked all to bow their heads as he prayed from his heart for guidance in his arduous tasks ahead. That was spiritual humility.

We have another example of this humility in Washington, as he knelt in the snow at Valley Forge, to pray for guidance while freedom and independence were at stake. And another in the example of Lincoln when he often prayed in the dark hours of the night that the Union might finally be preserved. It took humility to pray under such circumstances.

Exampled, even greater than these, was when Jesus went silently into Gethsemane to pray before the crucifixion that He knew was inevitable. Are we too poor in spirit not to gain courage, and renewed devotion, with such examples before us?

Only as we are humbled in prayer do we gain the vision to enact our lives in harmony with the God who programs all the acts of our lives, and of nations as well. The new American President envisages the dignity of man. Be fair and just to the humblest and you exalt the nation.

In the current edition of the Ladies Home Journal is told the story of Eisenhower, who was inspecting the army units in Belgium. Noting the army blankets of soldiers, "neatly folded at the foot of each bed," he fingered one. "Aren't these blankets thinner than those I just saw in the officers' quarters?" he asked. "Yes," was the reply. He was told that by tradition officers' blankets were superior to those issued to men. Said the General: "Does that mean that officers get colder than the men?" There you have the example of a great man, feeling out the soul of those who served under him.

Only as we become humble, and even as little children, as the Great Teacher once said, can we hope for genuine happiness, and get the feel of Heaven in our hearts.

Scarlet And Gold

(St. John Telegraph-Journal)

Khaki uniform for temperate or cold climates is barely fifty years old. Only fairly recently has it entirely replaced scarlet, blue or rifle green which continued to be worn alongside it for other than rough work.

The old army had colored tunics of fine cloth, with facings and gold lace, stripes of varying width down the leg, gold belts or silk sashes for the officers, spurs for mounted ranks and headdress in infinite variety. That was for review order, church or ceremonial parade, while for other duties there were serge jackets and pipeclayed belts with caps that were certainly for adornment rather than utility.

Then dinner was a parade and officers attended mess in jackets as attractive as, if shorter than their full dress, gold stripes on their overalls and gilt spurs. And all the uniform fitted, really fitted.

Weddings

BROOKS—DOWNEY

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, January 10th at 10:00 a.m., in the rectory of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, when the Reverend J. J. Buckley united in marriage Helen Mae Downey, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downey, to William John Brooks, also of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin J. Brooks.

The bride was attractively attired in a white strapless gown of nylon net over taffeta with Chantilly lace jacket having long sleeves ending in lily-points over the wrists. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a headdress of orange blossoms and lily-of-the-valley. She carried a fan-shaped bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Hazel Doyle, of Belleville, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, wearing a powder blue nylon net over taffeta in strapless style with net jacket and cap sleeves. She wore a matching headdress and carried a bouquet of blue carnations and yellow 'mums.

Mr. John Kingsman, of Belleville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, acted as groomsman.

The reception was held at the Engineers' Hall, where the bride's mother attired in a toast-colored gown with winter green accessories and corsage of Talisman roses, received the guests, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore winter green with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride's table was daintily appointed with white damask centred by a three-tier wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom, while sprays of tulips, daffodils, 'mums and snapdragons, interspersed with tall white candles in crystal holders, added a further loveliness to the setting.

Those who served included the Misses Frances Thompson, Marilyn Fisher, Joan Gerow, Marjorie Whitworth and Marlene Briscoe. Seventy-five guests were present.

For travelling to Toronto and other western points, the bride chose a black coat dress with red accessories, grey fur topcoat with corsage of red roses. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks are residing in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Plainfield; Pultney, N.Y.; Toronto; Kitchener; and Collingwood.
